6. The entire bridge ready for traffic, in accordance with plans and specifications, including all of items 1 to 5, inclusive.

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check, payable to the order of John W. Griffith, County Treasurer of Luzerne County, Pa., equal to 5 per cent. of the total amount of bid, without endorsement or conditions of any kind, as a guarantee that the bidder will, if awarded the contract, enter into contract and furnish the required bond in amount equal to 25 per cent. of contract price.

In order to be considered, proposals shall be made on bidding form furnished by the Commissioners and shall be enclosed in sealed envelopes and addressed to James M. Norris, County Controller, and are to be endorsed "Proposals for Plymouth Bridge"

Plans and specifications will be on file at the office of the County Commissioners at Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, on and after Thursday, August 11, 1910. Additional sets of plans and specifications may be had from the Scofield Engineering Co., Consulting Engineers, Philadelphia, Pa., upon deposit of fifty dollars to guarantee the return of the plans and specifications in good order.

The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

JAMES M. NORRIS,
County Controller.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., August 12, 1910.

Treasury Department. Office of the Supervising Architect, Washington, D. C., August 20, 1910. Sealed proposals will be received at this office until 3 o'clock P. M., on the 28th day of September, 1910, and then opened, for miscellaneous changes in the Administration Building, Philadelphia, Pa., Immigration Station (Glooucester, N. J.), in accordance with drawings and specifications, copies of which may be had at this office, or at the office of the Commissioner of Immigration, Philadelphia, Pa., at the discretion of the Supervising Architect. James Knox Taylor, Supervising Architect. 16783.

MORE OR LESS PERSONAL

The repaving of Market street with creosoted blocks is being done by Edwin H. Vare under a supplemental contract at a price of $85,000.

All of the creosoted wood block used in the Market street paving is from the Norfolk, Virginia, plant of the United States Wood Block Preserving Company, of which Mr. Pardee is the local representative.

Rudolph L. Agassiz has been elected a director of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company, to succeed T. S. Livermore, resigned.

H. P. Doherty has resigned as president of the American Gas and Electric Company and R. E. Breed, formerly vice-president, has been elected to succeed him. Mr. Doherty remains as a director.

Alfred E. Braddell, of the Chicago Office of the Sprague Electric Company, has been transferred to the general offices of the company at 527 W. 34th street, New York city. Mr. Braddell started with the Sprague Company in 1905 at the Philadelphia office.

V. F. Hammel, engineer in charge of the Pittsburg office of J. B. Hogg, civil and mining engineer, has resigned to take charge of the design and construction of the public water supply and power house improvements for the Union Utilities Company, at Morgantown, W. Va.

Lackey and Davis, architects, have removed from the S. E. cor. 3d and Market streets, Camden, N. J., to larger quarters at 307 Market street, same city.

John H. Mason, vice president of the Commercial Trust Company, has returned from a trip to Europe.

Richard Heckscher and Sons Company announce their removal from the Manhattan Building to the Morris Building early in September. They will occupy the 15th floor with the Alan Wood, Iron and Steel Company.

Commenting on the iron and steel situation, Noah H. Swayne, of Rogers, Brown & Co., says: "Measured by the volume of business done, the past week has undoubtedly been the duller of the year in the local market. Prices seem to have reached bottom and show no indication of impending change. Producers have apparently gone as far as they can in offering inducements to buyers to come into the market and unless some new business develops by the time present contracts are worked out there will doubtless be a further contraction in output. For months past makers in this vicinity have prevented the accumulation of stocks by adjusting supply to demand, and there will undoubtedly be no change of policy in this respect."

The Street Comm. of Wilmington, N. C., (Louis S. Belden, Chmn.) proposes to commence paving some time in October, but have not yet decided on kind of pavement and would like to correspond with manufacturers on the different classes of paving, etc. Engineer, C. R. Humphreys, of Wilmington.

Spencer & Roberts and George W. Reh-fuss, architects, have removed from 26 S. 15th street to larger and more commodious quarters in the Weightman Building, 1524 Chestnut street.

THE "SOMERS IDEA" AND THE TAX-PAYER

In the discussion of what is known as "the problem of equalizing taxation," one hears much these balmy midsummer mornings of the "Somers Idea," a system of arriving at assessable values by the "unit" process. This system is owned and controlled, we understand, by a concern in Ohio, and is being demonstrated to a committee of councils at an expense to the city of something like $85,000.

Now the question it occurs to the Record and Guide to ask at this particular stage of the proceedings is this—Does anybody in Philadelphia, excepting the representatives of this company, and the members of the committee directly concerned, know enough about this "Somers System" to explain to the rest of us just what it is? We have no quarrel with the Somers System. It may be an excellent method of calculating taxable values. And then again it may not be. As a matter of fact nobody knows whether it's good, bad or indifferent. Out of the thousands of men who pay taxes here on real estate, it is doubtful whether a half dozen know enough about this Somers System to talk intelligently upon it. And yet day by day, the indications become plainer, that the committee dealing with this subject intends, by and with the connivance of councils, to fasten this Somers idea to the Philadelphia tax system. Is this right? Is it just to impose upon a community containing a million and a quarter of people,—at least one in every hundred of whom pay realty taxes directly, and all of whom pay realty tax indirectly,—a system of assessment that is perplexing to experts and hopelessly mystifying to about everybody else?

Let us know something about this Somers idea in support of the adoption of which Councils Committee shows such unwonted alacrity. Let us judge for ourselves as business men and as rent payers and tax payers whether it is the good thing we are asked to believe it is. The subject of adding anything to the tax burden we now carry is one that concerns the vast majority of us too intimately for us to sit supinely by while the subject is being considered and nod an unreluctant assent. Establishing a unit of value and then calculating the units looks all right on paper. But, how is this fundamental unit uncovered? And what check, if any, is there to be on the man who figures these initiatory units? Let us have light, gentlemen. It would seem to be up to the company in Ohio, which, is promoting this Somers Idea to do some explaining for the benefit and enlightenment of the people, who, later on will be asked to pay the bills.

"NOMINAL" TRANSACTIONS IN REALTY

The practice of concealing the consideration in realty transfers under the word "nominal" or its print abbreviation "nom," has grown to such an extent within recent years as seriously to impair the value of statistics dealing with this subject. That here and there a situation may arise in which a valid reason exists for not disclosing the amount paid over as purchase price in a transaction involving the transfer of real estate is quite conceivable. It is preposterous to assume that any such reasons exist for the wholesale suppression of figures instanced in the list of transfers sent out daily from the Recorder's office. Indeed it is a question whether the abuse of this particular practice has not reached a point at which some action should be taken to check it. As an expedient for deceiving the assessors of taxable values the "dodge," if dodge it is, will be worse than useless in view of the probable adoption of the unit system now engaging the interest of the tax gatherers. The transfer tables, as published in this journal every week, have a distinct statistical value to men in various lines of corporate activity. This value is slowly being sapped by the steady growth of this practice of "nominal" considerations.

Could Recorder Vare, to whose administration of his responsible office real estate men owe many reforms of lasting and practical benefit, devise some method of checking, if not stamping out, this growing craze for suppressing the consideration in realty transactions? If any sound argument could be urged in support of the practice, the Record and Guide would be content to hold its peace. As it is, we feel that the time has arrived for plain talking. The Record and Guide is ready to give Recorder Vare a valiant support in any movement he may deem it wise to inaugurate, for the purpose of ending this "nominal" game. Let the consideration of value appear in every transfer. A thousand good reasons may be cited why it should so appear. We have yet to hear one,—of a mildly convincing sort,—why it should not.

CONVENTION OF BUILDING
MANAGERS

Third Annual Gathering of the Building Managers, Owners and Real Estate Men at Washington, D. C.

On September 12, 13, and 14, the third annual convention will be held at the Arlington Hotel, in Washington, D. C., of the Building Managers, Owners and Real Estate Agents. Papers will be read and discussed on the following subjects: "The Qualifications of a Building Manager," by Alfred Higbie, Manager of the Munsey Building, Washington; "Comparative Rentals in Leading Cities," by F. Railway Company in connection with plans for building a big timber treating plant at Port Reading, N. J., near Perth Amboy.

The plant, in which lumber is to be creosoted, principally for use as rail ties, will be located near the Arthur Kill, a waterway arm of the New York Bay, which separates Staten Island from New Jersey. The dredging contract calls for the removal of 210,000 cubic yards of earth along the water front, so that two piers can be built.

A large storage yard for lumber will be erected. The plant is expected to be completed in about a year, and the ties when finished will be used on the Philadelphia and Reading and New Jersey Central systems.

Creosoted ties are being experimented with by many of the railroads. They are said to last longer and to give more satisfactory service.

EXPECT HIGHER MONEY

Philadelphia Bankers Think Rates will Advance in September.

Although money is in plentiful supply on call now, some Philadelphia bank officials put themselves on record as predicting an advance from the present 4½ per cent. rate early next month.

They declared the situation here was artificially easy, due to accumulation of funds to meet the coming Pennsylvania Railroad quarterly dividend, now due. Higher than 5 per cent. is not expected for call loans, and some expressed doubt as to whether it would be wise to make any change, in view of the 1½ per cent. rate in New York.

MATERIAL AND EQUIPMENT NOTES

The Williams Pivot Sash Company, of Cleveland, O., have a patented pivot sash, applicable to any sized window, that is one of the cleverest ideas in the construction line that we have ever examined. It is a window sash, perfectly fitted, that works on a pivot admitting of either upper or lower sash being reversed for cleaning or adjusted at any angle for ventilation. For school, auditorium, factory or general business block purposes this service has no equal. It does away with jammed sashes, eliminates the risk of life incident to cleaning outside panes, makes the repairing and replacing of sash ropes and weight unnecessary, is weather proof and completely prevents the annoyance of rattling sash frames. It can be installed in any style of window construction, requires no special design whether of frame or sash, and is at once neat, attractive and durable. Mr. J. A. Conly, Betz Building, Philadelphia, is the local manager, and is booking some extensive orders. A recent contract was for the installation of the Williams sash in every window in a Camden public school. Mr. Conly has an attractive folder explanatory of the advantages of the new sash which he will be pleased to furnish to builders and architects.

Champion G. Shuster, of 1318 Girard avenue and the Builders' Exchange is distributing agent in Philadelphia for the Gibbs Heating Systems, the product of the Gibbs Company, Watsonstown, Pennsylvania. These systems are patented and are said to surpass anything on the market in point of utility and economy. There are two mediums of heating in the Gibbs plan—hot air and hot water.

The hot air attachment can be used in connection with any furnace, is easy to manage and gives a uniform supply of heated air 24 hours in the day. There is also a combination heater made by the company using both hot air and hot water, which gives perfect heating under any and all conditions. It is claimed for the Gibbs systems that while they give perfect heating, they also materially reduce fuel bills. The company publishes testimonials from persons using its attachment, which go to show that along with conditions making for comfort and sanitation in the home, there is an actual saving of many dollars every winter in expenditures for coal. Mr. Shuster has an illustrated booklet setting forth the advantages of the Gibbs systems, which he will be pleased to furnish to parties interested.

The United States Marine Signal Company, 170 Broadway, New York, is advertising the Wilson Flare Light, a radiant, automatic, portable light, produced by acetylene gas, that is said to surpass every known illuminant for the use of contractors. It is said to produce a light of 8,000 candle power for twelve hours at a cost of about 5 cents an hour. The flame is so stiff that it cannot be extinguished by the wind and it is small, compact and easily moved from place to place.

When it comes to bridge building, there is no concern in the United States, or for that matter in the world, fit to cope with the American Bridge Company, Hudson Terminal, 30 Church street, New York. This company makes a specialty of all classes of metallic structures and has offices in every city of any consequence in the United States.

United Steel Sash is one of the specialties advertised by the Trussed Concrete Steel Company, of Detroit, Mich. It is a snug-fitting steel sash, weatherproof, fireproof, easily glazed with spring clips, and practically everlasting. The same company controls the celebrated Kahn System of Reinforced Concrete.

The Monolith Steel Company, Inc., of Washington, D. C., has a system of concrete reinforcement that is said to be scientifically correct. The company supplies this product ready to place in the forms, adapts it to any kind of concrete construction, makes the webs in any length or number and guarantees no sharp corners. In fact, the company claims this system insures maximum resistance for minimum weight of steel.

The Kettle River Company, of Minneapolis, Minn., with treating plants at Madison, Ill., and at Sandstone, Minn., and with branch offices in St. Louis, Chicago, Des Moines and Omaha, creosotes, zinc treats, and creozinc treats crossties, piling, bridge timbers, wood paving blocks, cross arms and pins, is ready to meet any specifications and to make prompt deliveries.

Thomas J. Campbell, 974-6-8-80 Beach street, Philadelphia, has a number of second-hand hoisting engines on hand that are worth the notice of men requiring this kind of structural equipment. These engines are all standard make, in good condition and may be bought "right."

"Praise from Sir Hubert," the old quotation goes, "is praise indeed." The strongest testimonial a firm could desire was handed to the Wm. J. Oliver Manufacturing Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., when Mr. O. C. Dole, as chief clerk of the purchasing department of the Isthmian Canal Commission, ordered the Oliver Dump Car for this historic job. Three hundred of these cars are now in use at Panama, a fact that speaks more eloquently of the merits of the car than anything we could say. The Oliver Company is prepared to furnish full particulars to intending purchasers.

"Leadite" is a patented substance for jointing water mains. Its good points are: first, that it does just four times the work of lead at about half the cost; second, that it makes a joint absolutely proof against leakage, and third, that any laborer can install it without calking. It is controlled by the Leadite Company, Incorporated, 1232 Land Title Building, this city, and is in use among contractors everywhere.

When you want to buy contracting equipment at about half the manufacturer's price, drop a line to Henry A. Hitner's Sons Company, Philadelphia. This firm handles machinery of every class and size and sells on a small margin. It will pay you to write the Hitner Company covering any needs you may have in this line.

No experienced contractor needs to be told about the excellent qualities of the Williamson Contractor's Hoist. This fine old hoist is too well-known to require boasting. It is made to operate under either steam or electric power, to stand the severest kind of service and to wear like steel. It is made by the Williamson Bros. Co., of this city.

The Electric Storage Battery Company, of this city, is advertising a small electric lighting plant which can be installed at an inconsiderable expense in the average suburban home. These private plants are perfect mechanically, give an excellent twenty-four-hour service, require little space and give perfect satisfaction. Address Electric Storage Battery Co., Phila., Pa.

"Insurance Engineering," in a recent issue, discussing "Roof Fires," said, among other things: "Fires that start on roofs of buildings are different from other fires. There is no device to protect property owners against delays in the discovery of fires on roofs—except a roofing material that will not support combustion."

Ehret's slag roofing, as applied by the Warren Ehret Company, of this city, comes pretty close to realizing this test. It is practically undestructible. Send for "Brown Book."

Seven well known concerns are now producing creosoted wood block, the new paving. The United States Company at Norfolk, Virginia; the American Creosote Works, at New Orleans; the Gulfport Creosoting Company, at Gulfport, Mississippi; the National Lumber and Creosoting Company, at Texarkana, Arkansas; the Southern Creosoting Company, Ltd., at Slidell, Louisiana; the West Pascagonla Creosoting Works at West Pascagonla, Mississippi; and the International Creosote & Construction Co., Beaumont, Texas. The United States concern supplies the block in local demand.

The Ford Chain Block Company, of this city, manufacture the Tribloc Chain Hoist, a device that will lift more foot tons than any other chain hoist made, costs less than inferior makes and is of steel with all parts interchangeable. This company offers to send any size on trial at its own expense. Sizes from ½ to 20 tons.

The Eclipse Concrete Mixer is in use by the largest railroads, by the U. S. government and by contractors everywhere. It is said to save 30% in labor; to be so constructed that all working parts are housed, to render high wheeling unnecessary, and to do the work as well and with less expense than any similar machine in the market. It is manufactured by the Standard Scale and Supply Company, of this city, Chicago, New York and Pittsburg and enjoys a big sale.

Blaisdell Automatic Sewage Ejectors are the output of the Blaisdell Machinery Company, of Bradford, Pa. Nine years ago 60,000 men employed in the Steel Corporation's plants were unionists; to-day there is not one, and the Amalgamated Association has acknowledged defeat by calling off the last of the succession of strikes that has lasted through these nine years.

Boller & Hodge, consulting engineers, of New York, to whom County Engineer Chas. F. Sanders submitted his tests and specifications of the Penn street bridge, Reading, Pa., the largest structure crossing the Schuylkill have sent their report to the County Commissioners, in which they condemn the structure as unsafe and recommend that the loading of the bridge, including trolley cars, be limited. The County Commissioners, in view of the opinion, have decided to restrict traffic across the bridge.

Danville, Pa., will macadamize with State aid, a road leading from the State Asylum property to the borough line.

The residents of New Holland, Lancaster county, Pa., will vote at the November election on a proposition to increase their debt $30,000 for water works.

William G. Harding, of Philadelphia, has resigned as president of the Coplay Cement Company, Coplay, Pa. The plant is one of the oldest in the cement industry and represents an investment of $2,000,000. In cement circles the resignation created no surprise inasmuch as it has been understood for some time that the largest stockholders were at variance with Mr. Harding's policy of underselling on a rising market.

Captain E. S. Chase, a civil and hydraulic engineer, of Eaglesmere, Pa., is outlining a new automobile route from that resort to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., with the object of reducing the distance to fifty-seven miles from ninety.

President James McCrea, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is expected home from Europe about the 7th of September.

E. C. Felton, president of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, says of the steel trade: "A very encouraging feature of the present situation is that specifications for contracts already booked have not been cancelled or delayed. As to the future business there is not likely to be much change until the latter half of September."

C. V. Roberts, of the Roberts Filter Company, was one of a committee of Darby, Pa., business men that recently entertained Major Raymond, United States Engineer, in a trip of inspection down Darby creek. Mr. Roberts is an enthusiastic advocate of the movement for dredging Darby creek so as to make that stream navigable to Chester Park bridge.

Howard B. French, president of the Equitable Trust Co., has returned home from Europe.

The property of the American Filter Co., at Shamokin, Pa., has been sold to B. F.

H. Caven will present his report for verification by the auditors.

About seventy-five per cent. of the required $100,000 has been raised for the erection at Princeton, N. J., of the lofty tower, to be known as the nation's memorial to Grover Cleveland. The tower is to be 150 feet high by 40 feet square.

It is reported that the Western Maryland Railroad Company is considering the plans for a railroad across the Eastern Shore, from a point opposite Kent Island, through Easton, Cambridge, Salisbury and Snow Hill, to the seaboard in the vicinity of Chincoteague Bay. It is believed that the Western Maryland is also back of the recently revised project to bridge the Chesapeake Bay from Kent Island to a point in Anne Arundel county. The idea behind these improvements is said to be competition with the Pennsy for Eastern Shore tonnage.

The Filbert Construction Company, of Philadelphia, which was awarded the contract to build the new road from Swedesboro to Auburn and which bid also on the road from Clarksboro to Woodbury, N. J., has notified the Freeholders that both roads are wanted or neither. This will necessitate a readvertising for bids.

OPPOSITION TO THE SOMERS IDEA.

The Somers Idea is beginning to experience opposition. Men whose interests are likely to be adversely affected by this complicated and new fangled system of boosting tax office receipts are showing a disposition at last to sit up and take notice. Messrs. John H. Fow and Felix Isman uncovered the somewhat illuminating fact, at a recent meeting, that the figures upon which the "unit of value,"—which plays such an important part in the Somers scheme,—rests is the work of an ex-newspaper reporter with no special qualifications as an expert and the most delightful freedom from anything resembling a sense of responsibility. As we remarked in the course of a former article dealing with this subject, the Somers Idea may be an excellent system. We trust we shall not be deemed guilty of lese majeste in asserting our belief that up to the present writing this fact remains to be established to the satisfaction of parties at interest others than those directly promoting it. That the system now in vogue of appraising taxable values needs to be reformed along the lines of bringing about an equalization of the tax burden no one at all familiar with the subject of tax assessments will presume to question. Whether this reform should go to the length of adopting this loosely calculated "unit" idea or something less responsive to the whim or capacity of the man charged with arriving at the fundamental unit is the question to be considered. So far, we confess, we are not unduly impressed with the advantages, real or imaginary, of the Cleveland system.

PROGRESS IN BUILDING METHODS.

Within the past quarter of a century such immense strides have been made in structural ingenuity, that it is a question whether the builders of an older day would be able to believe the evidence of their own eyes, could they return and view present-day modes, methods and materials. The older Philadelphia knew no mediums but brick and plaster, the use of stone being confined to sills, steps and foundations. What would be the thoughts of one of those builders of the era antedating consolidation face to face with the structural steel, reinforced concrete, terra cotta block, fire proof walling and sanitary flooring of to-day? What would a builder of that era say to the open and simplified plumbing, the advanced hygienic equipment, the reversible sashes, modern heating and ventilating attachments, vacuum cleaning apparatus and numerous other conveniences of modern building? What would he say to the garage, now an appurtenance of every well ordered residence of any size, with its creosoted wood block flooring, its electric lighting, patented gasoline feeding mechanism and auto turntables? Or of the present day kitchen with its combination gas and coal range, its hot water heater, stationary tubs and dryers and porcelain and tiling equipment?

One can fancy the amazement with which one of these builders of an earlier day would view the erection of one of our present day office buildings towering twenty to thirty stories in the air, a skeleton of structural steel and fire-retarding materials?

Every avenue of industrial activity has responded to the quickening influence of progress within the period mentioned. In no one has this advance been more pronounced than in the structural trades. From materials to conveniences, from methods to labor-saving devices and appliances, in every branch of the structural field there has been a marked, remarkable and noteworthy growth in the direction of sanitation, safety, adaptability and permanence.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the American Public Health Association now on in Milwaukee, Wis., will close on the 9th. Sanitary engineering will be given an unusually conspicuous place in the program. The Milwaukee meeting, it is expected, will afford an opportunity for drawing closer the ties that exist between the association and the engineering profession. The program committee has announced that discussions are being arranged on the following sanitary engineering topics: The engineer equation in public health work; the correlation of the engineer, chemist, bacteriologist, and physician in public health work; modern practice in garbage disposal; the purification of public water supplies; some pitfalls in the operation of water purification and sewage treatment plants; modern sterilizing methods for public water supplies and sewage. The meetings will be held in the Auditorium and the association's headquarters will be at the Hotel Pfister.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF ENGINEER DRAFTSMEN.

On June 18 the first steps were taken to form a permanent organization to be known as the "American Society of Engineer Draftsmen," embracing every branch of the profession, including mechanical, electrical, civil, architectural, marine, sanitary, automobile, and aeronautical draftsmen. The first meeting of the society was held on July 27. The formation of this organization was conceived by Mr. E. Farrington Chandler. The object of the society is to establish a higher professional standing among draftsmen and place them on a recognized professional plane in the field of engineering. The officers chosen are: Mr. E. Farrington Chandler, president; Mr. Wm. B. Harsal, vice-president, and Mr. Henry L. Sloan, secretary and treasurer. The headquarters of the society are at 116 Nassau street, New York.

For suburban homes there is no disputing the interior attractiveness of the old Spanish mission order of architecture with its picturesque lines and pleasing red tiling. There was a time when the construction of a home on these lines meant an expenditure possible only to the possessor of great wealth. To-day, thanks to the adaptability of the cement block, reinforced concrete and terra cotta block, a home may be built in this style at comparatively little advance over the ordinary suburban type. Even the Spanish roof tiling, once a considerable item, is now within the reach of the man of moderate means, there being a number of concerns who are turning out this tiling in metal, with all of the beauty of form and tint of the original. We note with interest a growing appreciation on the part of local architects of this very pleasing and beautiful type of structure. Its effect will be a material advancement in nearby suburbs to the artistic and picturesque.

THE Daily Building News Bulletin of the Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide is published every business day for the purpose of giving to builders, contractors, material men and decorators the earliest possible news in regard to new buildings projected within a hundred miles radius of Philadelphia. With its aid you get into immediate touch with everything in the shape of a business opportunity in your line. This service costs $50.00 a year and is invaluable to men interested in the structural field. Ask for sample bulletins and examine the scope and utility of the advance news we furnish daily in this department.

MATERIAL AND EQUIPMENT NOTES

When architects and builders specify a particular brand of slate and decline to use any other there is as a rule some good reason for such action. Most architects specifying roofing slate itemize specially "Genuine Bangor," the product of the Bangor Slate Co., Merritt Building, Easton, Pa. This company issues some interesting free literature explaining the advantages of "Genuine Bangor" over other varieties of slate. A postal will bring a set of these pamphlets.

The Edwards Manufacturing Co., 313-333 Eggleston avenue, Cincinnati, O., said to be "the largest makers of steel roofing, metal ceilings and metal shingles in the world," are introducing a new idea in artistic and durable roofing in the metal Spanish tile. This beautiful Moorish effect, adding immensely to the picturesque qualities of any building, is said to cost no more than ordinary roofing, to be easy to apply, and to be wind, weather, fire and storm proof. The Edwards Co. makes this tile in metal in all the beauty and grace of the Spanish model. Literature covering the cost, advantages and architectural utility of this new roofing will be sent on request.

One of the first obstacles the architect encounters who is called upon to erect a garage upon the average city lot is the problem involved in getting his car space in which to turn. In the majority of cases this is simply insurmountable, or was until the invention of the auto turntable. Thanks to this clever device, a good-sized touring car may now be turned in a space little larger than its own length. The Pitless Auto Turntable, manufactured by the Pitless Auto Turntable Co., of Kansas City, is the best of the kind we have seen. The company issues an art catalogue that fully illustrates the workings of this almost indispensable urban device.

"Karbolith" is the name of a new sanitary flooring, base, and wainscoting that is coming into general use among builders who require a safe, clean, noiseless, dustless and fireproof flooring. It can be laid on any kind of a base, is capable of easy repair, is light in weight, presents a smooth surface and is unusually durable under heavy wear. "Karbolith" is manufactured by the American Mason Safety Tread Co., 702 Old South Building, Boston, with branch offices in all of the principal cities. The local office is at 1011 Chestnut street, where samples of "Karbolith" and the method of installing it may be seen.

Artistic theatre interiors is the line of Wm. H. Maltby & Sons, Corning, New York, designers of reliefs in plaster, papier mache, staff, etc. Over seventy theatres in New York and Pennsylvania are embellished with relief work made by this house. The firm is prepared to undertake contracts for ornamental architectural plaster work.

The "Kawneer System" manufactured by the Kawneer Manufacturing Company, Niles, Mich., with branch offices from Philadelphia, to Frisco, is a system of all metal store fronts that not only makes a most attractive display for business purposes, but which also cares for such details, as drainage and ventilation and absolutely does away with the annoyance of frosted and clouded panes in cold or moist weather. The metals used are copper, brass, aluminum and bronze. The company issues a booklet, No. 14, that explains in detail the attractive features of this system of display.

The Ayer & Lord Tie Company, 1515-19 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, emphasize the desirability of creosoted wood block as a flooring for warehouses, shops, barns, garages, stables and cellars. Aside from the well-known fact that they reduce to a minimum the noises incidental to the handling of heavy materials, the Ayer & Lord concern points out their splendid wearing qualities and cleanliness and durability under excessive moisture. Information regarding cost, etc., will be sent to parties interested.

The fame of the "Dixon Products" is nation-wide. For years, consumers have been able to regard the output of the Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, of Jersey City, with local branch at 1020 Arch street, this city, as standard. The Silica-Graphite Paint advertised by this firm is a protective paint specially adapted to all classes of steel and wood construction; a combination of inert pigment and pure linseed oil vehicle that withstands the severest exposure. The same firm's water-proof graphite grease is a grease to be used where ordinary greases do not apply. Because of the flake graphite in its composition this grease gives the most admirable service.

The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, of Pittsburg, is doing some very effective advertising exploiting the merits of the "Mf" 32 pounds coating roofing tin manufactured by this house. This staunch, durable, and moderately priced roofing tin enjoys an immense sale, and is well-known to roofers who want the best in coated plate. The company furnishes an entertaining booklet to parties interested which may be had on request.

A "Porch Book" is sent free by the Simpson Cement Mold Company, of Columbus, O., that tells in a practical way how to make and erect concrete porches. The book shows a number of attractive designs, explains how easily by the use of Simpson molds, the ornaments may be managed and figures cost details. It is exceedingly interesting and instructive.

For road construction work of an important kind there is no more economical, labor-saving contrivance in existence than the New Huber Contracting Engine. Here is an engine that hauls five heavily-loaded stone wagons over a loose stone road and does it with ease, and is equally available for hauling rooter plow, grader or scraper, or for any stationary work such as running a stone crusher, etc. It is always in order, always ready to work, and costs nothing for maintenance when idle. The same company manufactures a line of highly serviceable and easily operated road rollers. Address, The Huber Manufacturing Co., Marion, O.

"Sackett Plaster Board" is a material made to take the place of lath in building partitions. It is fireproof, light, strong, easy to apply, a deadener of sound, a non-conductor of heat and being hollow allows of the concealment of pipes and wires. With gypsinite studding it is said to make an adamant partition. Sackett Plaster Board is made by the United States Gypsum Company, of New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis and San Francisco.

Among new and attractive roofing materials the Cortwright Metal Shingle deserves the attention of persons contemplating building. It is a light, strong, thoroughly serviceable metal shingle that is easy to lay, not too expensive, weather and fireproof and actually money-saving in the it necessitates no after-expenditures for repairs. They are made in pleasing designs, and immeasurably to the beauty of a building, and give lasting satisfaction. A beautifully illustrated booklet is issued by the company, which also offers to send free samples of the shingle itself. Address, The Cortwright Metal Roofing Company, 50 N. Twenty-third street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Concrete Specialties Company, 1226 N. Howard street, Philadelphia, are manufacturers of a system of reinforced concrete vault lighting and sky lighting that is regarded by practical builders as far and away ahead of anything of the kind known to the trade. The company makes a vault light known as "The Simplex" that is reinforced by interlocking steel rod webbing made up of specially designed glass lenses, carefully annealed, fitted with expansion joints, level soffits and can be finished with a marble coating that is from 3-8 to 1-2 inch thick and an integral part of the concrete slab. These lights never crack or work loose, are as strong as human ingenuity can make them, and are practically indestructible. The skylights made by the same company are equally trustworthy and the flush pavement door a marvel of mechanical perfection.

The new Bulletin Building, Girard Trust, Lafayette, Buck, Wolf, Bergdoll and dozens of other recently erected buildings here and out of town are equipped with these lights. The company has an interesting exhibit of its specialties on view at the Master Builders' Exchange, this city.

The value of Reinforced Cement Tile as a fire and gas-proof roofing material for buildings of steel roof structure, has been recognized in the Pittsburg and Ohio steel manufacturing district for several years past. Since Edward L. Parvin has opened an office at 812 Perry Building for the sale of the product of the Reinforced Tile Roof Co., of Youngstown, Ohio, many of the larger manufacturing concerns in Philadelphia and New York have adopted this tile as a standard roofing material.

The tile is made of a good cement and sand mixture, reinforced with expanded metal colored red by the mixture of red oxide of iron with the outer portion of the slab, and is made to take a purlin spacing 4' centers.

MORE OR LESS PERSONAL

Edward Mellor, president of the Germantown Trust Company, is at home after an enjoyable summer abroad.

J. R. McAllister, president of the Franklin National Bank, and Henry Tatnall, fourth vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, returned from Europe on the same steamer.

John Hunter, of the directorate of the Southwestern National, has been cruising in his motor boat, the Gaviota, in Atlantic City waters.

John Mack, of Barber Asphalt, and kindred interests, is an enthusiastic devotee to the delights of motoring.

Joseph B. McCall, of Philadelphia Electric, is a capable amateur yachtsman.

A. Raymond Raff, the well known local builder, is also prominent in local reform circles.

Rumor credits Mercantile Appraiser Harry Trainer with being at the head of a new sewer contracting concern under the title of Trainer and Lombardi.

John Baizley, of the Baizley Iron Works, is at home again after a summer of motor boating in the waters about Atlantic City.

Lawrence Dickey, of the Lawrence Gas Fixture Company, is an enthusiastic golfer.

F. S. Wynn has been appointed purchasing agent of the Southern Railway Co., with offices at 1300 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C.

The Pennsylvania Equipment Company, West End Trust Building, Philadelphia, wants a mine hoist with capacity to raise five tons on 70 degree pitch with drum to carry at least 800 feet 1 1/2 inch rope.

I. Silberstein, Equitable Building, Baltimore, Md., and P. J. Briscoe, Jr., 1516 Laurel avenue, Knoxville, Tenn., want figures on heating plants.

HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

The new store of the Kayser & Allman firm, at 1522 Chestnut street, is a model of the perfect taste which has made this house famous among the local decorators. Finished in half-tones and white enamel it is by long odds the most striking show display on the street. This firm carries a very full line of rare, delicate, unusual and exclusive designs in wall paper, linocrusta, wall ornamentation, and moulding. They are prepared to execute commissions of any size from a single room to the modern hotel or apartment house.

There was recently opened for traffic at Auckland, New Zealand, a reinforced concrete bridge which contains the largest masonry arch in existence. The structure, which was built by the Ferro Concrete Co., of Australia, consists of nine approach spans of from 43 to 81 feet, and a great central arch of 320 feet. The latter is hinged at the abutments and at the centre. It consists of two separate ribs, connected by cross struts with a floor resting on slender columns built up from the ribs. Provision is made for a 24 foot roadway, and two six-foot side-walks.

If the proposed Hudson River bridge is ever constructed, says the Scientific American, it certainly will not be built at the proposed site at One Hundred and Seventy-ninth street, for the preliminary borings for the foundations have been carried to a depth of 180 feet without discovering anything but mud and sand. It is stated that a survey will now be made of a proposed site at One Hundred and Tenth street, which will include borings to determine the nature of the river bottom.

Prices on corrugated, galvanized siding are wanted by the J. S. Heatwole Company, Harrisonburg, W. Va.

Rev. W. H. Mavor, Covington, Tenn., wants prices on art glass for church use.

"Flexible Compound" is a water, acid, weather and rust proof liquid that is manufactured by the Flexible Compound Company of this city, the eastern selling agent for which is the Flexible Compound Sales Company, Stephen Girard Building, Philadelphia. This liquid is applicable to anything from the finest silk to structural iron, renders the article to which it is applied water and rust proof, and costs little more than ordinary varnish. It is specified by the United States government, is in use on all of the railroad work of the country and is claimed by men who have used it to be without a peer in its field. Its usefulness is practically unlimited, there being no exigency calling for protection against acid, rust, wear or weather in which it cannot be used. The company puts out a folder that explains in detail the method of using Flexible Compound and some of its special functions. This may be had on request.

The Harris Granite Company, of Salisbury, N. C., has a contract to supply the city of Chicago with 1,250,000 granite paving blocks.

An order is about to be placed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for 25 Mallet locomotives and a number of additional freight cars.

The Baldwin Works, Eddystone and this city, has completed and shipped four new locomotives to the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railway.

A recent Pennsylvania Railroad order is for 1,500 tons of steel from the Penna. Steel Co., Steelton, Pa.

Although but ten miles of the Isthmian canal at Panama have been completed and the remaining 20 miles is beset by engineering difficulties of the most formidable character, Canal Opening Expositions are under way at New Orleans, San Diego, and San Francisco.

The Lackawanna Steel Company closed recently a contract for 10,000 tons of rails for the National Railway, of Mexico.

Excluding the cost of ground, furniture and equipment the new school buildings to be opened in this city, next week, represent a total expenditure of $1,352,245. Of these the most expensive is the new Southwark School, at Ninth and Mifflin.

According to figures given out by the Interstate Commerce Commission the gain of the railroads in net revenues for the first 11 months of the last fiscal year was something more than $100,000,000 over the net gain for a like period of the preceding fiscal year.

The Board of Education of Millville, N. J., is about to award the contract for the completion of the Culver School building, a large portion of the walls of which fell last December.

City Engineer Chard has notified the Millville (N. J.) council that the new sewage disposal plant built at a cost of nearly $25,000 is not working properly and that the concrete work is cracking.

The Belle Mead Sweets Company, of Trenton, N. J., is about to erect a large modern factory building in that city and will increase the number of its employees to about 1,400.

J. P. Morgan and his interests are said to be behind the $50,000,000 City Service Company of New York, chartered in Dover, Delaware, last week. The company will distribute light, gas, heat and power.

An artificial lake, 200 by 970 feet, shade trees, shrubbery and macadamized roads are among the improvements proceeding at Hunting Park, this city, under the supervision of Jesse T. Vodges.

Among the improvements projected for the city of Chester, Pa., within the next year is a boulevard, parallel with the Delaware river from one end of the city line to the other; a distance of about 3 1/2 miles. At the rate at which big manufacturing plants are settling in that vicinity it is plain that Chester is in for a big boom.

Because the Barber Asphalt Company bid $1.43 per square yard for paving in the city of Harrisburg, this state, Chester is considerably aroused. A correspondent writes that Chester has been paying $2.08, $2.11 and $2.23 to the Barber Company for paving with no opposition.

Dilapidated local properties centrally located are being bought up by a syndicate which has in view the erection of commodious modern factory buildings. The plant is said to have met with conspicuous success in other cities.

"Your paper is all right," said an advertiser the other day, "but it doesn't cover enough ground. It is local and our local business is of little moment."

If there is any one idea the Record and Guide is determined to eradicate it is the impression that this paper is local. Our field extends from the Great Lakes on the north to the Gulf of Mexico on the south and takes in everything of structural importance east of the Mississippi. To cover this big field we are spending considerable money, time, labor and effort. Just forget that notion that we are local. We were,—at one time. To-day we are not, as a test "ad." will soon prove.

Ebony and mahogany is in use as railroad ties on the line of the Southern Pacific Company in Mexico.

More than $18,000,000 worth of sand and gravel was dug out and used in the United States in 1909.

Milwaukee has a garbage and refuse incinerator constructed on scientific and practical lines which is proving a pronounced success.

The American Concrete and Steel Railroad Tie Co., Missouri Trust Building, St. Louis, B. M. Bullard, president, expects to erect a chain of manufacturing plants throughout the United States for the manufacture of the new tie. The company is seeking locations where sand and gravel will be obtainable at a small freight cost, is willing to spend about $150,000 on each plant and expects to have an individual plant capacity of 2,000 cross ties per day. The buildings are to be of corrugated iron.

A Scherzer rolling lift bridge will be constructed by the Camden Ferry Co., at Elizabeth City, N. C. Bids will be opened September 26th. John W. Hays, Petersburg, Va., is the engineer in charge.

The city of Norfolk, Va., is preparing to expend about $200,000 for dredging and the construction of public docks. R. L. Forrest is chairman of public dock committee.

Chas. E. Bolling, City Engineer, is in charge of contemplated street improvements to cost $8,700 in Richmond, Va. Mr. Bolling will also have supervision over the construction of about 10,000 feet of sewage in the same city.

The city of Frederick, Md., will vote on the 26th of September on a $75,000 bond issue for the erection of a school house. For details address M. D. Harp, county clerk.

Wm. A. Albright, Atlanta, Ga., is to erect a 16 story building in that city.

W. A. Liller, 50 Mineral street, Keyser, W. Va., wants to buy or rent a small, portable, new or second hand crusher.

W. N. Thompson, Anderson, S. C., wants prices on electric lighting fixtures.

Arkell and Douglass, of New York, are the American buying agents for Bellamy and Lambie. P. O. Box 453, Johannesburg, S. Africa, who want prices, catalogues, etc., on trench excavators.

Municipal advertising is producing striking results in the South and West. Parkersburg, W. Va., a town of 15,000 inhabitants, has raised a fund of $100,000 to advertise its advantages as a home and manufacturing center.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has a fund of $50,000 for promoting the interests of that place, and Binghamton, N. Y., is preparing ambitious plans in the same direction. Des Moines, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Dallas and Seattle are spending money in the same field.

An "Ad" in the Record and Guide reaches people who are building and who have immediate need of building material.

Your salesman would be fortunate to get one interview with a busy architect in three months. We talk directly to men of this class fifty-two weeks in the year.

The man who makes no effort to support his home trade paper is usually the noisiest kicker for the recognition of home concerns in home improvements. Try at least to be consistent.

If your town is bidding for the establishment of manufacturing enterprises and you are able to offer factory sites upon advantageous terms you will find the "Record and Guide" the best of all mediums in which to advertise your proposition. We reach week after week thousands of big manufacturing concerns who are cramped for space in their present localities. Many of these concerns are now considering the advisability of transferring the plants to sections affording greater floor space with equal natural advantages. Send your advertisements in NOW, and get proper display and position. Address you have a good thing in the Building or Construction line, and you want Architects or Engineers to specify it, don't wait for them to phone you. Tell your story to them plainly in these columns.

If you want to know when plans are being prepared, or by whom, or what lines of material are to be used, or what firms are bidding or are likely to bid, you will find it here just the minute it's ready for publication.

If you have some old machinery or material, or other equipment, for which you have no present use and of which you would like to dispose, advertise it in our "for sale" column. We'll sell it for you.

If you have any kind of proposition of the sort that should appeal to trust companies, real estate men, property owners, architects, material men, engineers, contractors, equipment men, commercial-art men, decorators or people of that class,

Material and Equipment Notes

The Hays Manufacturing Company, Twelfth and Liberty streets, Erie, Pa., has recently issued a very interesting catalogue. It contains 350 pages, in which are illustrated a large range of products pertaining to plumbing, water, gas and steam, with prices of the same. It is handsomely bound and well indexed, and will be mailed upon application.

The Ridgway Dynamo and Engine Company, Ridgway, Pa., has a very interesting booklet, containing twenty-five pages, which gives a full description of its high-speed four-valve engines. It gives the class of information which engineers desire before deciding upon the type of engine to purchase or recommend, and is written from a technical standpoint.

An illustrated booklet containing twenty-four pages has been issued by the General Concrete Construction Company, 315 Dearborn street, Chicago, giving a description of the tapering concrete chimneys designed and constructed by that firm. It points out the advantages of concrete for tall chimneys over other materials. This firm employs a patent steel form in chimney construction, which enables them to execute work in an economical and expeditious manner. The illustrations show a number of chimneys built according to this method of construction.

The Warsaw Elevator Company announces that as a result of the expansion of their business, they have been compelled to remove to larger and more spacious offices at 929 Chestnut street. Mr. John Fletcher, formerly president of the United States Elevator Company, and a practical elevator man of many years' experience, has been engaged as manager of the Warsaw Company, which is now in a position to handle any elevator problem, large or small, to the satisfaction of its patrons. Mr. Fletcher's wide personal acquaintance among and stand with architects and engineers in Philadelphia and vicinity, coupled with the admitted excellence of the product, should insure the Warsaw concern a record-breaking season.

A recent order booked by Mr. F. I. Parker, president and treasurer of the National Hygienic Manufacturing Company, Builders' Exchange, this city, is for eighteen of the brass, ground joint connections made by this concern, to be furnished to the North Carolina Deaf, Dumb and Blind Institute, at Raleigh, N. C. These are for the Durham system.

Mr. Thomas W. Jenkins, 1307 Filbert street, this city, has an automatic interlocking and elevator safety device that should be a feature of every passenger elevator in general use. Once the elevator door has been opened this device automatically locks the controller until the door has been properly closed. The appliance works perfectly, is not expensive, considering the protection it insures against accidents, and can be applied to any style or make of lift. Most of Mr. Jenkins' orders are booked after accidents due to carelessness in elevator management. Wouldn't it be wisdom on the part of persons installing elevator equipment to contract for this device at the outset, thus avoiding unnecessary expense, annoyance and litigation?

The Lackawanna Steel Company feels a pardonable sense of pride in the fact that in the construction work at Black Rock Arbor, involving big concrete lock walls inside the cofferdam sheet steel piling manufactured by the Lackawanna Company, was used with perfect success. The order for this work is said to be the largest ever placed for steel piling.

For light contracting—foundation, trench, tunnel or open cut-in work—anywhere within reach of an electric transmission circuit, it would be difficult to devise a more effective, useful and rugged tool than the "Electric-air" Drill, manufactured by the Ingersoll-Rand Company, of New York and Chicago. This drill is made in three sizes, equivalent in capacity to the 2-inch, 2¾-inch and 3¼-inch standard "Sergeant" rock drill. It is compact, conveniently handled, adaptable to all sorts of odd jobs, and can be operated by any ordinary drill runner.

For all 'round service in bridge and general contracting work, the portable compressor and power plant manufactured by the Abenague Machine Works, Westminster Station, Vermont, is a remarkable piece of mechanism. A hoisting winch is mounted on a sub-frame, and by use of the friction clutch pulley and belt drive, a pump, stone crusher, circular saw, lighting generator, etc., may be used successively as the work progresses. For work in isolated districts the machine is well nigh invaluable. Some idea of its scope and efficiency may be had from the circumstance that one of these outfits was used to drive all the field rivets in the 925-ton, seven-span steel bridge across the Connecticut River, at Chicopee, Mass. Catalogue A1, explaining the uses of this compressor, may be had for the asking.

Making and placing concrete piling for every conceivable type of large structures is the business of the Raymond Concrete Pile Company, of New York and Chicago, with branches in Baltimore, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and this city. This company has made and placed this class of foundation to the extent of nearly two million feet, in soils of varying description and in almost every State in the Union. It is admittedly better qualified to undertake and execute concrete piling contracts of magnitude than any other organization in this field. A 164-page catalogue, illustrating the advantages of concrete piling as laid by the Raymond Company, may be had on request.

The National Fireproofing Company, "the largest company in the world devoted solely to the business of fireproof construction in both hollow tile and reinforced concrete," gives practical evidence of its organization, scope and resources by citing some of the structures upon which it has done work of this character, such structures as the Pennsylvania Railroad Terminal Building at New York, the new Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Station at Chicago, and the great Oliver Building at Pittsburgh, being recent examples. The National Fireproofing Company is capitalized at twelve and a half million of dollars, operates twenty-six factories in the United States, and has offices in every city of any consequence in the United States.

EDITORIAL

Insecure Support for Roof Tanks.

The Engineering Record takes occasion, in a recent issue, to print a few timely and pertinent remarks concerning the number of failures during the past year of roof tanks, ascribing the cause, in some part, to the carelessness with which the supports for these tanks are constructed. Says the Record: "Roof tanks are frequently set on two I-beams, and in the design of these beams the effect of insufficient lateral support for the upper flange seems to be commonly overlooked. For example, if the beams have a span of thirty-five feet, a top flange width of seven inches, and no transverse bracing is provided, the ratio between the unsupported length and the width of the compression flange is sixty, which, according to best practice, would require an allowable unit stress of only one-half that permissible with flanges properly braced. In other words, if the sectional modulus is determined by an average unit stress of 16,000 pounds per square inch, which is frequently employed, the maximum fibre stress in the compression flange will be very much greater. Obviously the beam should be connected by lateral bracing, so that the ratio of unsupported length to width of flange will not exceed 20." The Record takes occasion, in the same connection, to call attention to the promiscuous placing of large signs on the tops of buildings without first investigating the strength of the supports. It occurs to us that a reasonable amount of attention might also be given to the practice of crowning buildings with top-heavy cornice projections of a sort likely to prove unduly dangerous in the event of fire or decay due to wear and neglect. The general subject is one of more than ordinary importance.

Opportunities in Slum Development.

The active and business-like spirit in which the city authorities are taking hold of the project to lay out a carefully planned system of public parks and playgrounds throughout Philadelphia serves to renew discussion of the opportunities awaiting constructive capital in what are now classed as slum neighborhoods. Lying desirably central and convenient to the very heart of the city are blocks of dilapidated real estate which may be bought at prices representing little more than the market value of the sites they occupy. These sites are, as a rule, unusually well adapted for the location of modern apartment houses by reason of their ready accessibility from the city's centre. They furnish, also, more or less desirable sites for improved and up-to-date factory buildings. Indeed, a syndicate in a city not many hundred miles distant has met with the most remarkable success in the business of converting ground of this kind to the purposes mentioned. When, as following the example of the Curtis Publishing Company in its new building at Sixth and Walnut streets, it is possible to select a site the location of which offers a reasonable guaranty of unrestricted light, air and pleasing outlook upon two sides the advantages may be said to be worth considering.

Dozens of such opportunities lie in the wake of the work of slum redemption now planning. Whether they will be seized upon and converted to constructive use, as in other cities, remains to be seen.

A comprehensive program of meetings, to be held in the northern, northeastern and northwestern sections of the city which are to be tapped by the new line, is being arranged in the interest of working up public favor for the projected Broad street subways. The meetings are to be held under the auspices of the Philadelphia and Suburban Elevated Railroad Company, and will be addressed by John C. Bell, Abraham M. Beitler, Edwin O. Lewis, Robert K. Cassatt, General Russell Thayer and E. P. Gallagher.

The old, old issue of the book-learned theorist and the practical practitioner comes to light anew in the recommendation of a committee of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education on the subject of degrees in civil engineering. So many half-taught and obviously uninspired young men have been shunted out into the world by the colleges with the degree of civil engineer that the committee in question thinks the time has come to set up certain distinctions. The committee agrees that a four-year course should lead to the degree of "bachelor of science," but suggest that the specifying phrase be added "in civil engineering." After graduation, one year of resident work, in the judgment of the committee, should lead to the degree of "master of science," with the same specifying phrase and two additional years, or three in all, to the degree of "doctor of science" or "doctor of engineering." The object is to check to some extent the exodus from the degree factories of the country of young men who go forth into the world as civil engineers with little more than the college parchment to substantiate their claims. Inasmuch as a movement is already under way to require civil engineers to be licensed after rigorous examination, as is done in the case of other professions, the better grade of engineers are seeking some means of preventing the profession from falling into a low estate.

Any practical man knows that a diploma never did and never will make a successful civil engineer. The man born to the vocation of engineering gets the materials at college, the substructure in the broad domain of practical experience and the superstructure in his own virile grasp of the problems he is called upon to solve. Any arrangement that will so raise the standard of this preliminary training as to increase the practical development of the student must inevitably have the support of men who feel an honest pride in a glorious profession. There are too many haphazard, half-fledged engineers for the future good of the craft.

In a comment on the promptness with which Chief McLaughlin, of the Electrical Bureau, has replaced paving torn up to install electric light standards, wiring and laterals, a New York engineering journal remarks: "While it is desirable that work of this kind should be carried on with the greatest celerity, consistent with good results, it must not be forgotten that unless the filling is compacted with great care there is likely to be subsequent settling. While no one wishes to see improvements made in the methods so commonly employed, yet the fact should not be overlooked that it is possible to carry on work of this kind too speedily. A concrete foundation requires a reasonable time to harden." arrival of the block from the plant at Norfolk, Va., has delayed the work.

A paper read by Mr. Paul Kreutzpointer before the Philadelphia Foundrymen's Association at a recent meeting in the Manufacturers' Club, this city, strongly emphasized the need of additional industrial and trade night schools. This need, said Mr. Kreutzpointer, had special reference to metallurgy and the art of building construction.

Work has been started on a new reinforced concrete bridge to be erected over the Norris-town branch of the Reading Railway on the line of old Kennedy's lane, the name of which is to be changed to Fox street, after former Mayor Fox. The bridge is to cost $40,000 and to be finished by January.

The Board of Education has three sites for district high schools to be erected just as soon as Councils appropriate the necessary funds. One of these is in West Philadelphia, at Forty-seventh and Chestnut streets; another on South Broad street, near the present Southern Manual Training School, and the third, the old Frankford Country Club property. Germantown and Kensington have yet to be provided for.

Plans have been prepared by Philip H. Johnson under the supervision of the Playgrounds Committee of Councils, this city, under which it is proposed to convert Starr Garden Park, at Sixth and Lombard streets, into a model recreation centre. Proposals will be opened in the Mayor's office on September 20, and work is to begin October 1. The main feature of the projected improvement is to be a "neighborhood house," 144 feet long and 44 feet wide. This building, which is to cost about $40,000, is to be of Colonial architecture, Flemish bond brick, with limestone trimming. The floors will be cement and the structure fireproof. It will be located on the Rodman street side of the square. About $15,000 additional is to be spent in equipping the house and grounds. The committee plans to erect similar buildings in other parts of the city.

In the debate on the question of a central bank, a feature of the closing session of the convention of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association at Bedford Springs, Philadelphia was ably and creditably represented by William S. Evanss, with Rufus Waples, banker; Charles B. Engle, of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities; O. Howard Wolfe, of the Philadelphia National Bank, and Eugene F. Norris, of the Manayunk National Bank. William A. Law, vice-president of the First National Bank, of this city, was elected president of the association.

The McClintock-Marshall Company, which is building the steel roadway of the Reading Railway's elevated structure from Brown to Jefferson street, is bending every effort to complete the work within forty working days from the time of starting. Five days of the allotted time remain, and the work is now proceeding at high pressure. The steel section is to cost $50,000, and is being constructed at the rate of 150 feet a day.

Engineers Hazlehurst and Anderson, Candler Building, Atlanta, Ga., advise that contracts will not be let until about October 15 for the proposed paving work contemplated at Key West, Fla.

The Monroe Paving Company, of Philadelphia, has been awarded the contract to pave with sheet asphalt Liberty road, Baltimore, Md.

The Board of Finance is reported as having passed a resolution providing for the paving of Bergen avenue, Jersey City, N. J., with creosoted wood block at a cost of $22,730.

The Barber Asphalt Paving Company, of this city, is the successful bidder upon plans for a considerable amount of improved paving and street improvement in the Bronx district and Brooklyn, N. Y.

Utica, N. Y., contemplates the laying, this season, of large quantities of artificial stone sidewalk.

John C. Crabb, president of the Public Utility Board, of Rochester, Minn., wants to correspond with parties engaged in the work of placing wires underground and installing iron posts for electric lighting.

The D'Olier Engineering Company, 119-121 South Eleventh street, this city, has been awarded the contract for the canal lock gates and operating mechanism for Black Rock Harbor, near Buffalo. Ten large structural steel gates, in addition to the gate operating mechanism, will be required in this job.

Bids will be received by Fred H. Gates, City Clerk, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., until September 23, for furnishing and installing in the City Hall and lockup of that city a sweeper vacuum cleaning system.

Major Herbert Deakyne, Engineer Corps, U. S. A., stationed at Philadelphia, will receive bids until October 1 for dredging and dike construction in the Delaware River between Philadelphia and Trenton.

It is reported that Wikoff Bros. have purchased the plant of the Youngstown Gas Manufacturing Company at Youngstown, Ohio, and will manufacture a patent concrete steel bar.

The Burke Electric Company, of Erie, Pa., contemplates erecting a 50 x 350 fireproof addition to its present plant.

The Minnesota Steel and Machinery Company, 228 West Michigan street, Duluth, Minn., is about to erect a steel plant in that city, to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000,000. There are to be, in all, forty-eight steel and concrete structures.

Dawson Bros., of Syracuse, N. Y., have the contract to build four new buildings and remodel several others at the plant of the Watson Wagon Company, at Conestoga, N. Y.

Fred F. Graham, secretary of the Lackawanna Steel Company, 2 Rector street, New York City, writes that the directors of that concern have authorized the construction of additional merchant mill at Buffalo, to cost about $800,000. The new mill is to be ready in July, 1911.

The Common Council of Rochester, N. Y., has authorized the erection in that city of a refuse incinerating plant to cost about $100,000. It is to be constructed of reinforced concrete and to be located on Falls street. F. T. Elwood, Commissioner of Public Works, is in charge.

The Williams Morris Company, Inc., (Wm. Morris, president), will erect at Madison street and Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill., a twenty-story theater and office building to cost in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

Wallace & Earley, of Sharon, Pa., have a contract to erect ninety-six houses in the new town of Woodlawn, Pa., for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company. These houses are being built for the occupancy of the employees of the aliquippa department of the steel company.

Mr. Clyde Potts, one of the ablest consulting engineers in the business, has been retained by the borough of Monmouth Beach, N. J., to design sewers and a sewage disposal system for that locality.

Prof. W. D. Brown, of the Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Starkville, Miss., has resigned to take up the duties of constructing engineer with the du Pont Powder Company, Wilmington, Del.

John H. Anderson, of Newtown, Pa., is president of the Newtown and Fawn Grove Railroad Company, first chartered for the purpose of constructing and operating a railroad from Stewartstown to the property of Edward James, near the Maryland line.

David Pepper, Jr., of Philadelphia, owner of the Trenton Water Power Company, Trenton, N. J., is said to be planning the construction of a new plant large enough to run all of the factories in that city.

The REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS' GUIDE visits weekly and continuously, architects, engineers, builders, real estate men, material and equipment supply houses in the Eastern States. It goes to lots of other people more or less directly interested in building and structural work. As a medium for reaching the best people in these particular lines, it is without a peer. An advertisement voicing the merits of anything connected with building construction, machinery, bridges, water works, sewers, street improvements, electric light plants, electric railways or concrete construction could have no better medium. Let us have a trial advertisement. We'll agree to convince you!

IF —————

you have a good thing in the BUILDING or CONSTRUCTION line, and you want Architects or Engineers to specify it, don't wait for them to phone you. Tell your story to them plainly in these columns.

If you want to know when plans are being prepared, or by whom, or what lines of material are to be used, or what firms are bidding or are likely to bid, you will find it here just the minute it's ready for publication.

If you have some old machinery or material, or other equipment, for which you have no present use and of which you would like to dispose, advertise it in our "For Sale" column. We'll sell it for you.

If you have any kind of proposition of the sort that should appeal to trust companies, real estate men, property owners, architects, material men, engineers, contractors, equipment men, commercial art men, decorators or people of that class,

EDITORIAL

Beneficial Issues of the Somers Idea.

As a direct outcome of discussion due to the series of assessments made of central realty by experts representing the "Somers Idea" results now seem likely to ensue that should prove highly beneficial to realty and property interests. One of these results it is now certain will be an increased attention upon the part of owners to the important but heretofore neglected item of property development. The somewhat surprising fact has come to light in the course of discussion of the Somers system that hundreds of centrally located properties are not bringing a proper return upon their real value for no other reason than a lack of intelligent management. Inadaptability to present-day needs in merchandising, indifference to necessary alterations and repairs, absence of modern conveniences and equipment, failure to keep step with the march of progress in the matter of adapting properties of an older era to modern conditions—these and cognate shortcomings are declared to be responsible for losses in earning capacity sufficient to militate heavily against the desirably located pieces of realty. Antiquated stores—planned in the days ere merchandising had attained its present resourcefulness—with old-fashioned bulks, insufficient lighting, obsolete equipment and antediluvian ideas regarding the economy of space, have been permitted to drag on into the present era at the cost of losses to their owners scarcely computable. The Somers experts—quite properly, we think—take the ground that property values are to be assessed not "down" to the standard of the owner who has not been alert to his opportunities, but "up" to the rating of the man who has kept step with the procession.

Any other course would have the effect of setting a premium on parsimony and a certain penurious order of stupidity. The owner who does not realize from his property the fullest return of which that property is capable has no one but himself to blame if this condition arises from his unwillingness to face present-day needs in merchandising. Property managing in the complex scheme of modern affairs is as much an art as property appraising. The owner who is indifferent to his own interests has not the right to expect that special consideration shall be shown him on this account. The speculative person who buys valuable unimproved realty with a view to its subsequent disposal at a neat profit is even less worthy of this consideration. Indeed, it is one of the chief defects of the Somers idea that it is unwarrantedly lenient to this class of owner. Compelled to pay taxes on a valuation equal to the returns such properties would bring, under intelligent management, these speculative owners would be forced to sell to persons intent upon improvement. The result would be a boom not only in values but in building and in general business stimulus.

The other outcome of the Somers discussion is the probable formation of a home owners' protective association. New York City has had such an association for years, with officers trained to the ready defense of the interests of its members. The suggestion has been advanced by a local real estate man that such an association be organized here, and that it employ counsel competent to represent it and safeguard the interests of its members against the Somers Idea. The suggestion is a good one, not that we think the exactions of the Somers Idea are at all likely to prove burdensome or unfair, but because anything with a tendency to bind the realty and home-owning interests of the city into a compact and organized body must inevitably be a step in the right direction.

The home-owning interests of Philadelphia represent a considerable influence properly directed. Nothing but good can come of an association properly conceived and rightly organized in the defense of such a clientele.

American Public Health Association.

The American Public Health Association closed its thirty-eighth annual convention on September 9 at Milwaukee, Wis. The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, R. M. Simpson, Winnipeg, Man.; first vice-president, Dr. Fernandez Lopez, Mexico City, Mex.; second vice-president, Dr. Jno. Anderson, Washington, D. C.; third vice-president, Dr. Gerhard A. Bading, Milwaukee; secretary, Dr. William Woodward, Washington, D. C., and treasurer, Dr. I. H. Wine, New Haven, Conn. Important papers dealing with sewage disposal, water purification and kindred topics were considered during the three days' sessions. The next meeting of the association will be held in Havana, Cuba.

American Society of Engineering Contractors.

The American Society of Engineering Contractors, D. E. Baxter, 27 William street, New York, president, and D. J. Hance, 21 Park row, New York, secretary, will convene at the St. Louis Coliseum on September 27, 28 and 29. E. H. Abadie, J. L. Westlake, W. C. Swartout and L. C. F. Metzger constitute the local committee in charge.

National Good Roads Convention.

The third annual Good Roads convention will be held at St. Louis, Mo., September 28, 29 and 30. George C. Diehl will preside. Important papers scheduled for reading are: "Paved Roads," by A. N. Johnson, State engineer, Springfield, Ill.; "Modern Road Construction in the United States," by Col. W. W. Crosby, chief engineer of the Maryland Geological Survey; "Continuous and Systematic Road Maintenance," by S. Percy Hooker, New York State Highway Commissioner; "Across Missouri," by Curtiss Hill, highway commissioner of Missouri; "City Streets and Boulevards," by James C. Travilla, street commissioner of St. Louis; "Modern Surface Treatment of Various Roads," by Charles W. Ross, street commissioner of Newton, Mass.; "State Roads to Meet Modern Traffic Conditions," by Harold Parker, chairman, Massachusetts State Highway Commission; "Park Roads," by Jno. R. Roblin, engineer of the Metropolitan Park Commission, Boston, Mass., and "Dustless Roads of California," by Austin B. Fletcher, secretary-engineer of the San Diego highway commission.

Material and Equipment Notes

P. J. Hurley, the widely known local builder and contractor, now located at 1216 Chancellor street, has purchased the property at 1233 Cherry street and will remodel and alter same for business purposes. The improvements contemplated involve a two-story brick addition in the rear, a thorough refitting of the entire premises and the installing of a perfectly appointed suite of offices, plan and estimating rooms. Mr. Hurley enjoys an enviable position among local builders, is recognized as one of the leading men in the craft, and is at the head of a large and growing business. His new offices, which he expects to complete and occupy early in October, will compare favorably with any in the trade.

The Belmont Iron Works, Philadelphia and Eddystone, Pa., with New York offices at 45 Broadway, has just issued a catalogue showing representative structures furnished by this concern. Engineers, architects and others interested in steel bridges and structural work can secure a copy by addressing Department "R."

In the plant at Phoenixville, Pa., of the Phoenix Bridge Company, a plant capable of turning out 50,000 tons of bridge work per annum, every process in the evolution of bridge material is carried on from the refining of the ore to the finished structure. The company manufactures bridges, turntables, ocean piers, elevated railroads, viaducts, roofs—anything, in fact, which may be fabricated in structural steel. The Philadelphia offices of the Phoenix Bridge Company are at 410 Walnut street.

Ability to withstand sudden and severe strains along with unusual strength and rigidity are characteristics of concrete floors laid with Berger's Ferro-Lithio plates, a specialty of the Berger Manufacturing Company, of Canton, Ohio. These plates are corrugated, easy to lay, form a dovetail system of construction that is equal to any strain and are withal fireproof, light and inexpensive. Plaster and concrete take a hold on these plates that nothing short of complete destruction of the floor will ever loosen. The Berger Company has a Philadelphia office where samples of his plate may be examined or is prepared to send full particulars to parties interested on receipt of a card of inquiry.

The E. Van Noorden Company, 102 Magazine street, Boston, Mass., makes a specialty of skylights, ventilators, metal windows, etc. This company controls the patent rights to the Anchor-Bar skylight, said to be the strongest, safest and most serviceable skylight made. The Union Passenger Station, at Worcester, Mass.; the Pierce-Arrow motor car office building, at Buffalo, N. Y.; the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, Mechanicsville, N. Y., and the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, at Piedmont, W. Va., are among recent structures fitted with the Van Noorden improvements.

Ficklew's galvanized steel curb guard is a wonderful little device for crosswalks, curbs and concrete pavements that is enjoying an immense sale in the trade. This guard comes plain or galvanized, is made in designs adapting it to every paving contingency admitting of the use of a steel binder and costs anywhere from 10 to 25 cents per foot, according to weight. The Aberdeen Company, 20 Broad street, New York, are general sales agents for the Ficklew devices.

Answering a charge by rival concerns that the process of expanding the steel in "Steelcrete" expanded metal reduces the strength of the cross section, the Consolidated Expanded Metal Company, of Pittsburgh and New York, enumerates the following advantages possessed by this product over the reinforcing made by other concerns: 1. By the "Steelcrete" process the elastic limit is increased because the steel is expanded cold. 2. It means the use of open hearth steel of uniform quality free both of flaws and strains. 3. High carbon steel cannot be expanded into a perfect sheet of mesh. 4. No re-annealing is required, a fact demonstrated by millions of square feet of expanded metal concrete floors. 5. Sectional areas are guaranteed to be as represented in the company's lists. The Consolidated Expanded Metal Company are the largest manufacturers of expanded metal, meshes and laths in the world. A card to the Keenan Building, Pittsburgh, or to the New York office, at 1182 Broadway, will bring catalogue and samples to builders interested.

The vertical flame carbon lamp, made and supplied by the General Electric Company, for the use of contractors, is a powerful and economical illuminant. To begin with, it gives more light than any other artificial illuminant on the market, making a considerable area almost as light as day. One of these lamps is said to give a light equal to that furnished by about six ordinary arcs and to be capable of a system of installation that interferes in no way with the progress of the work. It is a lamp that is easily installed, economical in that it gives a maximum of light on a minimum of current and admits of contract work of a "rush" or important kind being carried on twenty-four hours in the day. The contractor who would avoid penalties will be wise to have a few of these lamps on hand. Full information concerning the cost of this service may be had at any of the numerous branch offices of the General Electric Company.

The Universal Safety Tread Company, 113 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass., manufactures a covering for building, railway, subway and steamship exits and entrances that meets every demand whether of safety, durability or general attractiveness. These coverings are made in concrete, ground cork or rubber, or in all metal. They are made in any length or width, in any design, are practically indestructible and absolutely reliable. The Universal Safety Tread is in use in every big structure of any note erected within recent years. R. H. Hammond & Co., 1103 Land Title Building, this city, are the local representatives of the Universal Safety Tread Company, and will be pleased to show samples or furnish estimates.

The Tip Top Brick Bond Company, of Norwood, Delaware County, Pa., is supplying a line of wall ties that is coming into general use among builders who prefer uniform and strong walls. The hook feature associated with this tie makes it one of the best ever devised. The fact that this tie is being specified by the leading architects proves its value. The Tip Top Company carries a full stock and is prepared to guarantee immediate delivery.

Asphalt road oil, emulsifying road oil and macadam asphalt binder are three of the specialties for road use of the Standard Oil Company, 26 Broadway, New York. Asphalt road oil is an asphalt-bearing product for use on well-made roads. Emulsifying road oil is a lighter oil so prepared that it will emulsify with water. It serves as a dust preventive, requires frequent application and is particularly adaptable to roads or private grounds, parks, etc. Macadam asphalt binder is a heavy article, almost solid asphalt and used in the construction of macadam and all other roads in which asphaltic material is required. For cost, particulars, etc., address Road Oil Department, Standard Oil Company, Broadway, New York.

The Wainwright galvanized steel corner for protecting the edges of concrete curbs, steps, columns, etc., is the most effective concrete edge protector ever offered to the public. It makes a curb that is practically non-breakable. Over 2,000,000 feet of this corner bar is in use throughout the United States. Manufactured by the Steel Protected Concrete Company, Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia.

F. W. Bird & Son, East Walpole, Mass., make the Neponset waterdyke felt and compound that is in use among contractors who require a thoroughly dependable job of waterproofing. A certain number of layers of the felt, cemented with the compound and covered with a thin layer of concrete, makes a job that defies leakage. The Engineering Department of the Bird concern is prepared to submit specifications and estimates on any kind of waterproofing.

Dexter Brothers Company, famous as the originators of shingle stains that have withstood the test of time and the most exclusive tastes, have just brought out a new white stain that is winning the approval of architects and builders who want "something different." This stain is a dead white that is particularly applicable to houses in the Colonial style of architecture, a white that gives a beautiful finish without that "painty" effect observable in the usual white and that neither conceals nor destroys the natural grain of the wood. Mr. Arthur Brandt is in charge of the New York office, 1133 Broadway.

The Automatic Register Company is the owner of a device which is said to register the exact amount of fares which are taken on electric and steam passenger trains. The company is about to erect a $500,000 plant in East St. Louis, Ill., and has opened offices in the Metropolitan Building, East St. Louis. Adolphus D. Branham, 4101 Westminster place, St. Louis, is president; Paul W. Abb, vice-president of the Illinois State Trust Company, East St. Louis, Ill., is treasurer; William P. Launtz, city attorney for East St. Louis, general counsel, and Gebhard A. Buetner, superintendent of works.

IF

you have a good thing in the BUILDING or CONSTRUCTION line, and you want Architects or Engineers to specify it, don't wait for them to phone you. Tell your story to them plainly in these columns.

If you want to know when plans are being prepared, or by whom, or what lines of material are to be used, or what firms are bidding or are likely to bid, you will find it here just the minute it's ready for publication.

If you have some old machinery or material, or other equipment, for which you have no present use and of which you would like to dispose, advertise it in our "For Sale" column. We'll sell it for you.

If you have any kind of proposition of the sort that should appeal to trust companies, real estate men, property owners, architects, material men, engineers, contractors, equipment men, commercial art men, decorators or people of that class,

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

The Somers Idea Won't Do.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE has always hesitated about condemning a new idea until a fair trial has demonstrated this action to be necessary. When the Somers appraisal system made its appearance here we were unwilling, despite popular clamor in opposition to it, to formulate a hasty or ill-considered judgment upon it in the absence of time and opportunity to inquire with some thoroughness into its workings. This time and opportunity we have since fully exercised, as a result of which we are forced now to the somewhat reluctant conclusion that the Somers idea will not do.

We are sensible of many excellent points about the Somers system that we feel may profitably be accepted by the municipal body at present charged with fixing real estate valuations, but with the fullest recognition of these minor merits we are too keenly alive to the scope of the damage likely to be inflicted upon local business interests by this system to offer it even a negative measure of support. Its adoption as a fixed method of arriving at property valuations would, in our judgment, prove little short of ruinous. Like all methods claiming to be scientific in conception, the Somers idea is overdrastic. It makes no allowance for conditions over which the business interests most likely to be affected are without control. It lacks the quality of adaptability to conditions peculiarly local and individual.

Its first effect would be such an advance in rentals in central realty as would amount to a positive hardship to local business interests. It would, in the end, seriously and inevitably disturb the equilibrium of established enterprise.

Add to these facts the circumstance that it would benefit nobody, that the fixing of the "unit" of value under its workings would be even more lax and unscientific than the existing method of computing values, and you may form some idea of the mental processes whereby we have been moved to oppose it.

The Somers system won't do. That here and there inequalities exist in central assessments such as call for correction we are aware. It is becoming increasingly evident that the proper tribunal to make these corrections is the present Board of Assessors.

We concur fully in the views expressed by Mr. George H. Earle, Jr., in this connection. Mr. Earle takes the ground that the system is fundamentally unjust, that the economics of the idea is vicious and dangerous to the public welfare, and that the problem which the system is intended to solve cannot be disposed of by the methods pursued by the Somers promoters.

We are inclined, too, to agree with Mr. Earle's further view that "the hiring of a corporation and paying it large sums out of an already insufficient revenue to do what we had able public officials already appointed to do" is not a good way to relieve the city's financial needs.

Material and Equipment Notes

Among designing and constructing engineers with high standing in the profession there are few who rank higher than the firm of Dodge, Day & Zimmerman, of this city. This firm makes a specialty of lay-out construction and the proper equipment of large industrial establishments. Printed matter descriptive of the work of Dodge, Day & Zimmerman will be sent to parties interested.

The Security Cement and Lime Company, main offices, Baltimore, Md., western office, Pittsburg, Pa., manufactures a line of material the excellence of which is attested by a large and constantly increasing demand. The Portland cement, Berkeley lump lime, Berkeley hydrated lime, Berkeley run of kiln lime, Berkeley ground lime, Berkeley ground limestone, fluxing stone and crushed stone turned out by this concern enjoy a big sale in the building trade, due to qualities stamping them as superior to competing products in the same field.

Alpha Portland cement is manufactured by the Alpha Portland Cement Company, whose general offices are at No. 9 Centre Square, Easton, this State. The Alpha article has been on the market continuously for the past nineteen years; is the only brand manufactured by this house; is a strictly straight Portland of uniformity and general excellence, and is the theme of a handsomely illustrated booklet, which may be had on request.

"Old Dominion" brand of Portland cement is manufactured at Fordwick, Va., in a plant, the capacity of which is said to be 1,000,000 barrels per annum. The selling agents for the "Old Dominion" is the Wm. G. Hartranft Company, Real Estate Trust Building, this city. It is claimed for the "Old Dominion" brand that it is strong, uniform, finely ground, carries sand well, has an exceptionally good color and is exceedingly adaptable for every grade of high-class work.

The Smith Concrete Mixer is a pretty convincing piece of machinery, a fact not much to be wondered at when one stops to consider by whom it is made. The I. L. Smith Company, of Milwaukee, have for years specialized upon the subject of equipment for contractors. There is, in addition to the Smith mixer, the merits of which are generally recognized, the Smith Batch Hopper, for rapid handling of mixed and unmixed batches in plants of large capacity; the Smith Side Loader, for rapid and easy handling of the unmixed batch in portable plants; the Smith Concrete Elevator, for hoisting materials; the Smith Side Gate Concrete Car, for pouring concrete into forms, and the Smith Automatic Water Tank for accurately measuring the water in the mixer. All of these equipments have been subjected to test. None is an experiment. The conference of the engineering department of the Smith Company, extending over ten years of mixer activity, is at the disposal of purchasers who want sketches or ideas covering the laying out of a plant. Catalogue No. 54, issued by the Smith Company, tells the story. Address the I. L. Smith Company, 1305 Majestic Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

"Why United States Wood Block Pavements Wear" is the heading of a clever and effective advertisement put forth in the interest of the U. S. Wood Preserving Company, 165 Broadway, New York. The reasons enumerated are: That the blocks are impregnated with creosote, completely eliminating all sap and living germ life, and thus effectually preventing decay; that the blocks cannot pulverize because the fibrous nature of the wood only serves to mat and harden it; that wood block paving cannot become uneven because, laid on a concrete foundation, there is nothing to give; and last, but not least, that it is the silentest of all pavements, minimizing the noise of heavy traffic. Taken by and large the "ad" is a most effective bit of advertising. The illustrations are good and are appropriate.

"Red Gum" is a hard wood which is in use in the trim in millions of dollars' worth of buildings here and in Greater New York. The admirable thing about red gum is the great variety of its uses. It takes and holds white enamel beautifully, finishes strikingly in red, its natural tint, and can be finished off in any other color or shade the decorator elects. It can be bought at a reasonable price, and surpasses every other known wood in general beauty and utility. The Baker Lumber Company, Turrell, Arkansas; Carrier Lumber and Mfg. Co., Sardis, Miss.; Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Company, Cape Girardeau, Mo., and all the leading interior trim concerns can supply information regarding this beautiful timber.

Among local contractors occupied with cement work, artificial stone paving, granite and bluestone setting, pointing and general brick work, Felix Brown, 27 North Juniper street, this city, is admittedly one of the best in the trade. Mr. Brown makes a specialty of cementing in colors, one of his notable recent contracts in this line being the cement work at St. Charles Seminary, at Overbrook, where he is engaged in the building of an entirely new library and gymnasium. Mr. Brown also does considerable work in the cement line for the city authorities under specifications requiring a high grade of work.

"Apollo Best Bloom" galvanized sheets, the product of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, of Pittsburg, Pa., are said to be the best obtainable. These sheets are made from carefully selected material, coated by a process guaranteeing durability under test, and run from ten to thirty gauges inclusive. The company issues a weight card for the convenience of buyers and consumers.

The New Jersey Wire Cloth Company, of Trenton, N. J., fabricates wire into a number of forms in which it can be employed advantageously by builders. The wire lathing made by this concern is in extensive use as a substitute for the old-fashioned wooden lath. It is much lighter, cleaner, more easily applied and is fire-retarding. Roebbing wire is used in all of this company's products.

"Paroid Roofing," the specialty of F. W. Bird & Son, East Walpole, Mass., is guaranteed spark-proof, contains no tar, is gas-proof, easy to lay, and has stood every conceivable variety of roofing test. It is not unduly expensive, is attractive and permanent, and enjoys an extensive sale due to its own merits as a very nearly perfect material for structural covering.

It is claimed for "Ruberoid Roofing," the product of the Standard Paint Company, 100 William street, New York, that it is the ideal covering for factories, foundries, mills, machine shops, railroad buildings and manufacturing plants of a kind where a permanent, acid-proof and fire-resisting material is necessary. "Ruberoid" is not affected, it is claimed, by heat, smoke or gases, contains no tar, rubber or paper in its composition, and will stand up in any climate. Burning brands, the manufacturers say, will not ignite it. It is easy to lay and not expensive, considering its permanent character. Samples, prices and a descriptive booklet may be had on request.

In a recent issue of Insurance Engineering, in the course of a discussion of the general subject of "Roof fires," it was stated: "Fires that start on roofs of buildings are different from other fires. There is no device to protect property owners against delays in the discovery of fires on roofs except a roofing material that will not support combustion." The Warren-Ehret Company, of this city, advances the claim that the Ehret Slag Roof is the perfect material to meet this exigency. The company will send its "Brown Book" to parties interested.

For mill owners and beauty of effect in roofing it would be hard to conceive anything more effective than the Metal Spanish Tile made by the Edwards Manufacturing Company, 411-13 Culvert street, Cincinnati, O. This tile, aside from its undoubted architectural attractiveness, has all of the other qualities that go with a perfect roofing material. It is not expensive, is easy to lay, is wind, weather, storm, fire and lightning proof and wears like adamant. The company is making a special proposition to the trade, with which every live structural man should familiarize himself. Ask for catalogue 53 and special proposition.

Sanitary Home Building.

[On the occasion of the Domestic Science and Pure Food Exposition held recently in Madison Square Garden, New York City, a notable address was delivered by Mr. Oliver Randolph Parry, of this city. Mr. Parry, who is one of the foremost of Philadelphia architects, has offices at 1723 Chestnut street.]

Mr. Parry began his address by saying that, in a measure, the question of sanitary homes is not unrelated to that of pure food. To insure sanitary homes all unnecessary trim would have to be discarded. Frame construction, in his judgment, makes sanitary conditions well nigh impossible. The ideal building medium is re-enforced concrete, monolithic construction.

The question of cost offers few difficulties. The best class of frame construction is about equal in cost to reinforced concrete while other materials in general use exceed it. In laying out a home for a workingman the space should be so utilized as to insure the largest rooms where most needed. The living room, for example, should exceed in size and general proportions all other rooms on the ground floor. Next in size should come the dining-room with the stair hall or parlor next and the kitchen allotted the least space.

An economic reason exists for thus planning the kitchen, the range, dresser, sink, etc., being so close together as to spare the busy housewife many unnecessary steps in the day's round of culinary duties.

The bed rooms should be of a size ample enough to accommodate necessary furniture only. Few persons, Mr. Parry thinks, fully realize the danger in the continual absorption of the oxygen in sleeping rooms. By way of guarding against the latter, Mr. Parry advocates double wall construction with individual room ventilation, a solution entirely feasible in reinforced concrete and not excessive in cost. The hall should waste no unnecessary space and should if possible contain a window. The bath room, equipped with the usual sanitary fixtures, should be directly above the kitchen. Above the second floor, intervening between this floor and the roof, should be a small attic, serving the double purpose of affording protection from the heat and cold as well as providing needed space for storage purposes.

Such a house constructed of concrete walls, with floors of concrete and a roof of concrete, or other shingles, or some equally effective fireproof covering, affords the man who works for a living an indestructible, fire, vermin, and disease-proof home, warm in winter, cool in summer, subject to little or no expense under the head of repairs and free of all worry and expense in the matter of insurance.

These homes in the city, Mr. Parry thinks, should be laid out in blocks, with a children's court or breathing place in the centre. In the country, where ground is less expensive, each house might be given its allotment of garden space. The present congestion of population makes the establishment of homes of this description in the great cities a fit subject for the effort of private philanthropy. The investment would be an eminently safe one and under the most liberal management not unprofitable.

Mr. Parry advances the interesting and not unpractical suggestion that the government buy up waste land, divide it into parcels, construct colonies of workingmen's homes and thus induce thousands of worthy immigrants to leave the big cities and take up life for themselves and their families under more wholesome conditions. The idea, Mr. Parry stated, has been extensively taken up abroad and found a paying investment.

Proposals

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF EAST ORANGE, IN THE COUNTY OF ESSEX.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that the Board of Education of East Orange, N. J., will meet at the office of the Board in the City Hall, in the said city of East Orange, on Thursday, the 13th of October, 1910, at eight o'clock P. M., and then and there will receive and open SEALED PROPOSALS for furnishing labor and materials to erect and complete a to be completed not later than July 15, 1911.

Bids may be for the entire work, including masonry, carpentry, steel and iron, roofing and sheet metal, painting, plumbing, electric and heating and ventilating, or any one or more of such items.

The Board reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals and to waive informalities at its discretion.

Terms of proposal and surety required are fixed by the specifications.

A copy of the drawings and specifications, proposal, contract and bond forms may be seen at the Board's office. Blank proposals will be obtainable at the offices of the architects, Guilbert & Betelle, 917 Broad street, Newark, N. J., and 25 West Thirty-second street, New York City. The architects will provide a limited number of copies of drawings and specifications, which will be loaned by them to prospective bidders upon deposit with them of certified check, to their order, for $50. If drawings and specifications are returned and bid submitted, the check will be returned after opening of bids; but if drawings and specifications are returned but no bid submitted, $9 will be deducted from the deposit as cost of prints not used.

THIS NOTICE SUPERSEDES ALL NOTICES HERETOFORE GIVEN STATING THAT THE SAID BOARD OF EDUCATION WOULD MEET ON AN EARLIER DATE, AT THE HOUR AND PLACE AFORESAID, FOR THE PURPOSE OF RECEIVING SUCH PROPOSALS.

By order of the Board of Education.

WARREN A. CLAPP,

Dated, East Orange, N. J., Secretary.

Bids for Dredging Channel Opened.

Bids have been opened at the headquarters of the United States Engineers in the Witherspoon Building, for dredging to the amount of approximately $1,000,000 in the Delaware River channel.

Congress has appropriated $480,000 for the work and is expected to vote as much more next year, which will furnish the money necessary to complete the work bid for.

When the bids for the channel dredging were opened it was learned that the American Dredging Company, of this city, William J. Bradley, president, was low bidder. Five other concerns bid, the Maryland Dredging and Construction Company, of Baltimore; the Morris & Cumings Dredging Company, New York; Sanford & Brooks Company, Baltimore; Coastwise Dredging Company, Norfolk, Va.; Daly & Hannon Dredging Company, Ogdensburg, N. Y.

It is regarded as certain that the American Dredging Company will be awarded the contract and it will be obliged to begin work within thirty days after the award is made.

The Maryland Dredging Company was the only concern besides the American Dredging Company which bid on the dredging work in its entirety, the remaining four bidders bidding for sections of the work.

The approximate total of the dredging estimated by Major Herbert Deakyne and his assistants is 4,330,000 cubic yards.

Broadly speaking, the dredging called for under the bids made is the widening of the bends in the lower Delaware, the securing of a thirty-foot channel at all points now difficult for ocean-going steamships to navigate and for work that will be preliminary to the dredging of the thirty-five foot shipway for this port.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCTOBER 5, 1910

Architect Guy King Designing a Large Country Estate.

Architect Guy King, 1513 Walnut street, Philadelphia, is preparing plans for a large country estate, to be built on the summit of Buck Mountains, Eastern Pennsylvania, for Alyan Markle, Esq., of Hazleton, Pa. The house will measure 200 feet by 40 feet, 2½ stories, and will be constructed of mountain boulders, trimmed with grey terra cotta, with a green tile roof with copper trimmings.

The interior will be handsomely finished with oak, pine and mahogany and will contain a Baronial hall, Elizabethan dining-room, Louis XV ball-room, organ loft, ten bath rooms, etc. The interior fittings will also consist of leaded glass, marble and mosaics, mural decorations, etc.

In addition to a large amount of road and landscape work provision will also be made for an electric lighting plant, sewage disposal plant, artesian wells, refrigerating plant, garage to accommodate six cars, power house, etc.

The Sanitary Factor in Present-Day Building.

The tendency to build houses of material that is fire and vermin proof, and to construct them after designs affording few or none of the lurking places for dirt and disease which were features of the frame and lath construction of the old school, is a notable and commendable development of the past decade. Much of the growing interest in sanitary building is undoubtedly due to the remarkable adaptability of such mediums as reinforced concrete, hollow tile, metal lathing, and various other fire-resisting materials, the greater number of which are new or of comparatively recent application. At the same time it must not be forgotten how large a part has been played in this transformation by the present-day school of architects which, breaking away from old and absolute standards, has kept pace with expanding popular intelligence in the march to higher sanitary and hygienic ideals.

The constant trend, not alone of modern building but of interior fitting and decoration as well, is away from the ornate, the crowded, the complex and overelaborate to the chaste, the spacious, the simple and unobtrusive, with a gain scarcely less important from the angle of taste and effect than from the more substantial ground of common sense and wholesome living conditions.

The old order of ponderous ornamentation was open to the twin-indictment of being questionable from the viewpoint of good taste, as well as downright dangerous, from the vantage-ground of the sanitarian. It presented a thousand covert and inaccessible lurking places for dirt and the innumerable germs that thrive in that disagreeable medium.

Perfect sanitary conditions in the age of frame construction were simply impossible. They have become possible solely by reason of the giant strides made in sensible building construction within the past decade. Open plumbing was one of the initiatory steps. Tiling, porcelain, cement, reinforced concrete and hollow tile, metal shingle, metal lath and vacuum cleaning are milestones along the way. To-day a rather high degree of sanitation is possible in a home erected at comparatively moderate expense. The same measure of freedom from dirt and disease could not have been had in an earlier day at any cost. We ponder these facts here at this time to properly impress the unthinking with the tremendous advance that has been marked in building and in building methods within a few years. We have heard this advance referred to as an evolution. It is more than an evolution. It amounts to a revolution.

Repair Work Under City Auspices.

Mayor Reyburn is trying the interesting experiment of having street repairs made by a gang of employees retained by the city for this purpose in place of having such repairs made, as has heretofore been the custom, by private contractors. With the utmost deference for the Mayor's excellent intentions in the premises THE RECORD AND GUIDE is fully prepared to see the effort terminate in a return to the method formerly in use. Getting work of a public sort done by public employees is a somewhat costly proceeding, as any intelligent student of municipal conditions must be aware. The example of the hopeless inefficiency of the gas works under city control is too recent to be overlooked as a citable instance in this connection. If additional evidence were wanting the present management of the Water Bureau might be held to supply the same in a prodigal abundance. As we have intimated elsewhere, we have the fullest confidence in the Mayor's good intentions. At the same time we own to no hesitancy in declaring that if the bungling patchwork now going on in South Broad street is to be regarded as a sample of what is to be expected of city repair work under city auspices the sooner we go back to the system of having this class of work done by men who know how to do it and possess the facilities to do it properly the better for all concerned. Economy, under certain easily conceivable conditions, is not always the wisest public policy.

Material and Equipment Notes

The Trussed Concrete Steel Company, 552 Trussed Concrete Building, Detroit, Mich., manufacture a line of products for use in concrete construction that are highly regarded in the structural field. These products consist of Hy-Rib, a self-centering reinforcement for floors, roofs, walls, partitions and ceilings; rib metal, for conduits and slabs; built-up column roofing; cup bars, bent or straight; rib-lath and rib studs, for plaster and stucco; United Steel sash, for fireproof windows; and a line of minor Trus-Con products for waterproofing and finishing. The system is known as the Kahn system and is regarded by competent engineers as furnishing perfect reinforcement. Catalogues, estimates and suggestions are furnished free of cost.

One of the most recent instances of a growing appreciation on the part of engineers of the superiority of Raymond concrete piles over spread footings is the foundation now being built by the Raymond Concrete Pile Company for the 56-acre plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, at Gary, Ind. Spread footings, entailing about 150,000 yards of excavation, were originally specified for this job. The substitution of the Raymond concrete pile involves a saving of nearly 100,000 yards of excavation, besides about 15,000 yards of concrete. The spread foundations originally specified would, moreover, have been expected to show more or less settlement. The Raymond concrete pile foundations are guaranteed settlement-proof. A complete description of the advantages of the Raymond piling, together with illustrations of structures built on Raymond piles and of docks, bulkheads, etc., and brick designed by the company, will be found in the new 164 page catalog issued by the company. Address the Raymond Concrete Pile Company, New York City, or the Philadelphia office of the same concern.

Lackawanna steel sheet piling, the product of the Lackawanna Steel Company, 2 Rector street, New York, is being used by J. N. Lewis, Esq., on a 60x40 cofferdam in progress of construction for the new Coney Island Sewage Disposal Plant. The precision with which this piling may be driven true to line gives it a unique value in work of this kind. Lackawanna piling has a three-point interlocking flexible joint and tremendous water holding capacity.

The advantages are claimed for Lufkin measuring tapes that in accuracy, durability and workmanship they surpass anything on the market. Manufactured by the Lufkin Rule Company, Saginaw, Mich.

The Municipal Engineering and Contracting Company, Railway Exchange, Chicago, Ill., shipped recently to Panama for use in the work on the Gatun dam a Chicago Improved Cube Concrete Mixer capable of mixing and holding 64 cubic feet of material. This company makes the same mixer in all sizes, guaranteeing a perfectly mixed batch of concrete every minute. The working parts in the cube mixers are made of steel, even the cube. The result is years of service beyond the ordinary cast iron variety on the market. Over 5,000 satisfied customers are now using the cube mixers manufactured by this company.

The Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, Jersey City, N. J., has issued a new edition, "4 1-c," of "Graphite as a Lubricant," telling how and why graphite lubricates, and explaining the action of different forms of graphite. It gives results of scientific tests and shows its use. Free on request.

The Universal Safety Tread Company, 113 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass., manufactures a line of step coverings that combine perfect safety with lasting durability and wearing qualities. A steel base with a lead surface properly steel reinforced is the form of tread most in vogue, the lead presenting the non-slipping surface and the steel the durability which would otherwise be lacking. The company makes this tread in every style and in any design, and where a noiseless walking surface is desirable finishes off with English cork carpet. These treads are in use in buildings all over the country, and are also in use in railroad cars and steamships. The treads may be had in any width or length. R. R. Hammond & Co. are the local agents, 1103 Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Where economy in space is a desideratum the contrivances manufactured by the Hill Dryer Company, 47-49 W. Thirteenth street, New York, for drying clothes are the most admirable devices imaginable. This company makes dryers in all sizes and in every conceivable shape adapted for roof-tops, back yards, kitchens and odd spaces that under ordinary conditions are not utilizable. The company has had years of experience in the business, is prepared to handle contracts of any size, and can furnish its product to meet any contingency of modern building.

Fireproof doors of steel or bronze are the output of the James G. Wilson Company, 5 W. Twenty-ninth street, New York. This firm makes these doors in all sizes and to fit any opening and guarantees them to work smoothly and evenly. Parties interested are invited to write for the "Engineers Handbook."

The Edwards Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, makers of sheet metal building materials, are advertising a new type of steel roofing that seems destined to revolutionize this branch of industry. It is known as Edwards' corrugated pressed standing seam steel roofing. Its advantages are that it can be applied directly to the purlins without the use of rivets, cleats absolutely water-tight and at the same time allows for vibration. It can be placed entirely from above, doing away with the necessity for scaffolding, and can be applied to wood purlins or sheathing boards as successfully as to steel. The cost of the new material is slightly greater than that of regular corrugated sheets, but the saving in side laps and in application more than makes up the difference. A card to the company will bring descriptive literature concerning this new roofing.

Arthur Fritsch, formerly of the engineering and sales department of the Allis-Chalmers Company, has been appointed manager of the Chicago office of the Pawling & Harnischfeger Company, Milwaukee, designers and builders of electric traveling cranes and hoists. Mr. Fritsch, whose offices are in the Monadnock Block, succeeds W. E. Kreamer, resigned.

A. R. Reiche, president of the Ovenstein-Arthur Koppee Company, is in Germany, where he will consult with the general officers in Berlin regarding the enlargement of the American plant at Koppee, Pa. It is stated that the plant will need to be doubled in size to meet present demands.

The H. W. Johns-Manville Company has opened offices in Atlanta, Ga., and Rochester, N. Y. The Atlanta office in the Empire building will be in charge of W. J. Johns. The Rochester office, 725 Chamber of Commerce, will be in the care of H. P. Domine.

Toch Brothers, 320 Fifth avenue, are making a cement filler and cement floor paint that is in extensive use in large factories, warerooms and places in which the dust arising from the wear of unfinished cement floors has a tendency to get into the machinery and injure delicate merchandise. Floors of cement treated with this filler and paint are guaranteed water, oil and grease-proof and wear more durably and look more attractive than those unfinished. John Lucas & Co., of this city, manufacture this product under special license of the patentees and are prepared to furnish samples and quote prices to parties interested.

The International Acheson Graphite Company has opened a Southern branch in Atlanta, Ga. The lubricants manufactured by this company, gredag, oildag, aquadag and powered graphite are acquiring a big Southern sale.

The New Bush Terminal Building, N. Y.

Active work has been started by Architect William Higginson for the Bush Terminal Company on a freight delivery and loft building at Twenty-ninth street, between First and Second avenues, Manhattan, and it is expected that it will be ready for occupancy in eight or nine months.

In their completed shape the present plans and specifications call for a structure which will cost approximately $300,000. In its general features it will correspond to the big South Brooklyn loft buildings. Concrete and steel will be practically the only materials used, and an automatic sprinkler system will be installed throughout. The new building will have a frontage of 100 feet, a rear width of 115 feet and a depth of 98 feet. Altogether it will contain about 100,000 square feet of space, 90,000 of which is to be leased to manufacturers and wholesalers, while 10,000 on the ground floor will be reserved for the transfer station. This latter will contain the landings for two freight elevators of 10 x 10 feet each, and two side entrances will admit the motor trucks.

At least eight or ten of these transfer stations are to be erected in the near future. Respectively, they are to serve the wholesale districts in the neighborhoods of Worth street, Canal street, Grand street, Fourteenth street, Twenty-third street, Forty-second street, Fifty-ninth street, One hundred and twenty-fifth street, and the Bronx. Whether all these buildings will be of the combination loft and transfer station character has not yet been decided, but an announcement will probably be made inside of a month. The division of the city into such zones is considered by the Bush Terminal Company and its tenants, a decidedly advantageous innovation on which the corporation expects to spend about $3,000,000 before it will be prepared to call its system perfected in every detail.

The American Gas and Electric Company reduced its quarterly dividend from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 per cent.

At a special meeting of the Southwark Foundry and Machine Company, called for November 23, stockholders will vote upon an increase of the indebtedness of the company from $180,000 to $600,000. This increase is advocated for the purpose of retiring outstanding bonds, to extinguish a ground rent, and for necessary improvements in the plant.

Well-informed factors in the steel trade take little or no stock in the talk of a cut in steel prices. With corporations standing solidly together who control not less than 70 per cent. of the finished output these authorities feel that there should be no difficulty about keeping steel prices on a staple basis.

Mayor Reyburn is urging the establishment of a municipal asphalt plant in conjunction with his plan to have street repairs made by the city instead of, as at present, by private contracting concerns.

Edward Bader, of this city, has the contract for the demolishing of the four-story frame wing of the Hotel Dennis, in Atlantic City, which is to be removed to make way, as already noted in these columns, for a thoroughly modern, up-to-date fireproof structure seven stories high. Mr. Bader's contract requires the removal of every vestige of this old wing, 140 feet in length and 52 feet in width, within ten days. Roydhouse-Arey & Co., of this city, have the contract for the new building.

The Industrial Commission, of Bethlehem, Pa., is about to launch a movement to annex outlying territory to the east, north and west of that town, and plans an advertising campaign in the interest of a Greater Bethlehem.

Answering a statement given out by William H. Carpenter, a director representing the city of Philadelphia in the Rapid Transit Board, to the effect that "admitting that Philadelphia needs more subways, these improvements should properly be built by the city and leased to operating companies," Stewart S. Neff, president of the Philadelphia and Suburban Elevated Railroad Company, makes the rejoinder that if the issue is one of "whether the Philadelphia public should put their hands down in their pockets and build these subways and then lease them to the Rapid Transit Company or have them built and operated by the company of which I am a director, without cost to the city, giving to the city 10 per cent. of the annual net profits before the stockholders get anything, with the agreement finally at the end of a reasonable period to turn the entire improvement over to the city at a fair valuation, we are quite willing to leave the decision to Philadelphia taxpayers."

John Ringling, the millionaire circus man, has expended more than $1,500,000 at White Sulphur Springs, in Montana, in the construction of a railroad and the inauguration of work on a $300,000 hotel and pleasure resort. It is Ringling's intention to make White Sulphur Springs an ideal health and outing resort at a cost of approximately $2,000,000. The new resort is just nineteen miles from the coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway.

Three years ago E. O. Faulkner, head of the Forestry Department of the Santa Fe Railroad, went to the Hawaiian Islands to investigate the possibilities of ohia as a material for railroad ties. As a result the Santa Fe has signed a contract for $2,500,000 worth of this timber, embracing the entire Hawaiian output for a term of years. Ohia is the heaviest wood known, a species of tough, knotty and unsplitable mahogany.

The city of Nashville, Tenn., will open bids about November 1 for the erection of a high school building, fireproof construction, 250 x 180 feet; cost, $250,000. The plans are by Sharp & Iltner, Nashville. Address High School Building Committee.

New Orleans, La., has appropriated $450,000 for the erection of three high school buildings. W. J. Hardee, city engineer, is preparing plans.

Extensive improvements are to be made at the Baltimore baseball club grounds, at Oriole Park, Baltimore. Address John Dunn, president, York Road and Twenty-ninth street, Baltimore, Md.

Main Street Bank, Richmond, Va., invites bids for erection of a bank and office building; nine stories; fireproof; materials: concrete, steel rails, brick, fireproof tiling and stone; halls to be finished in mosaic flooring and white marble wainscoting; offices to have gas and electric fixtures; three high-speed hydraulic elevators. Plans by Scarborough & Howell, of Richmond. Bids lately opened rejected.

The Savannah Bank and Trust Company will let contract about October 15 for erection of a fifteen-story bank and office building, the plans of which will be ready October 1. Steam heat; electric lighting; traction or plunger elevator; building to cost $300,000. Architects, Mowbray & Uffinger, 50 Liberty street, New York.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Columbia, S. C., has plans by Shand & Lafaye, of Columbia, S. C., and R. H. Hunt, of Chattanooga, Tenn., for a four-story building; cream brick; stone relief work; to cost $100,000.

The Board of Awards of Baltimore, Md., awarded a contract to B. F. Sweeten & Son at $67,671.25 to construct sanitary lateral sewers in District 14.

Washington, N. C., wants a sewerage system. A committee has been chosen, of which D. T. Taylor is chairman, for the purpose of employing a sanitary engineer to prepare plans and estimates of cost.

The Duval County Commissioners and Bond Trustees, Jacksonville, Fla., will open bids on November 1 for about $300,000 worth of paving. Bids are to be submitted on brick, concrete and macadam.

The Norfolk and Portsmouth Belt Line Railroad, of Norfolk, Va., William A. Patton, president, 26 South Fifteenth street, this city, will, it is reported, establish terminal facilities.

The Philadelphia Steam Heating Company, for many years at 1513 Filbert street, owing to increased business, announce the removal of their shops and offices to larger and more commodious quarters at 1313 to 1319 Cherry street. With their increased facilities they will be in a better position than ever to execute contracts promptly in any of the following lines: Steam, vacuum, exhaust and fan heating; water warming apparatus, greenhouse heating, ventilating drying apparatus, induced draft systems, power equipment and auxiliary machinery, piping for high pressures, steam and hydraulic fitting, sheet metal work, boilers, tanks, boiler repairs and tubing, vacuum cleaning apparatus, electric generators, fire service and water supply systems.

The REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS' GUIDE visits weekly and continuously, architects, engineers, builders, real estate men, material and equipment supply houses in the Eastern States. It goes to lots of other people more or less directly interested in building and structural work. As a medium for reaching the best people in these particular lines, it is without a peer. An advertisement voicing the merits of anything connected with building construction, machinery, bridges, water works, sewers, street improvements, electric light plants, electric railways or concrete construction could have no better medium. Let us have a trial advertisement. We'll agree to convince you!

you have a good thing in the BUILDING or CONSTRUCTION line, and you want Architects or Engineers to specify it, don't wait for them to phone you. Tell your story to them plainly in these columns.

If you want to know when plans are being prepared, or by whom, or what lines of material are to be used, or what firms are bidding or are likely to bid, you will find it here just the minute it's ready for publication.

If you have some old machinery or material, or other equipment, for which you have no present use and of which you would like to dispose, advertise it in our "For Sale" column. We'll sell it for you.

If you have any kind of proposition of the sort that should appeal to trust companies, real estate men, property owners, architects, material men, engineers, contractors, equipment men, commercial art men, decorators or people of that class,

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCTOBER 12, 1910

Announcement and Invitation to Architects.

I believe that every architect is vitally interested on the subject of cleaning and sanitation. I believe that if they and their clients knew of a method, without flaw, which would economize time and effort in cleaning and at the same time be absolutely sanitary, there would not be a house built, costing $4,000 or over, without specifications being drawn for such a system.

To demonstrate such we have installed at the Builders' Exchange a Tuec 170 air cleaning system, and for the next six working days after this date we will devote the time from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. to the demonstration of this system to the architects of Philadelphia and nearby towns.

With the Tuec 170 we exhaust from a room 170 cubic feet of air, dust and sweepings per minute. Sanitary because it cleans the floor of all germs and the air of all carbon dioxide and other poisonous, gaseous emanations from the body and carries them to the outside air.

This statement may cause you to smile, and some of you will laugh out loud and want to tell me where you are from. Well, I lived in Missouri myself for a time, and I want to "show you."

You know what you know about pneumatics. Just let me tell you what we know. It cannot possibly do you any harm to learn what we know.

I cordially invite every architect to call and see how we do more with less power, at less expense, than was thought possible only a few months ago. I am going to see you anyway, if "Torchy at the gate" will let me by; but come down anyway and get acquainted with the Tuec system by seeing it in operation.

Very respectfully,

W. D. MANN,

Manager,

Tuec Company of Philadelphia.

Material and Equipment Notes

The Trenton Potteries Company, Trenton, N. J., manufacture a line of sanitary pottery equal in grace of outline, quality, finish and durability to anything of the kind to be had anywhere. Bathtubs, foot-tubs, wash basins, sinks, hopper closets, barber-shop lavatories, everything, in fact, which it is possible to make from porcelain this wide-awake concern is prepared to supply. The company makes a specialty of the up-to-date in its fittings. One may count confidently upon the newest ideas in ware of the kind in this company's products. The fact that the ware turned out by the Trenton Potteries Company was specially selected for the palace-like new terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at New York City, tells its own story of the excellence of the goods made at this plant. There is a note of elegance about the porcelain ware sent out by this concern that cannot fail to appeal to people of refined taste. It has that "somewhat different" touch that serves to differentiate between the shoddy and the genuine. Mr. E. S. Aitkin, the able and enterprising sales-manager of the Trenton Potteries Company, has a line of attractive descriptive literature covering the merits of its output which he will be pleased to send to prospective buyers.

A roofing material to which a powerful blow torch may be held for fifty minutes without any other effect than to blacken and discolor it is pretty close to fireproof. This is the test to which the H. W. Johns-Manville Company's asbestos roofing was submitted here recently. Here's a roofing that is acid-proof, fireproof and weather-proof, that costs no more to lay than ordinary roof covering, that requires no coating nor painting and that under ordinary care will last an ordinary lifetime. Address the H. W. Johns-Manville Company, New York City, for catalogue and samples.

For interior decorative purposes there is no hardwood in the market capable of such a variety of uses as Red Gum. Here is a native hardwood, as beautiful as Circassian walnut, at a price away below any other hardwood suitable for interior trim. The Hotel La Salle, Chicago, is fitted throughout with this wood, even to the furniture, and is regarded by decorators as one of the most effective examples of interior trim in the country. The principal manufacturers throughout the United States use red gum and are prepared to furnish samples and prices. Among firms which carry this beautiful wood and can furnish information regarding it are the Carrier Lumber and Manufacturing Company, Sardis, Miss.; the Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Company, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; the Lamb-Fish Lumber Company, Charleston, Miss.; the Three States Lumber Company, Memphis, Tenn.; the Charles F. Luehrmann Hardwood Lumber Company, St. Louis, Mo.; the Anderson-Tully Company, Memphis, Tenn., and the Baker Lumber Company, Turrell, Ark.

"Lapadas" is a waterproofing compound manufactured by F. William Stocker & Co., Inc., 34 West Thirty-third street, New York City, for mixing with concrete. It is a paste-like liquid, a chemical preparation of silicate, which is used in the proportions of a three gallon can to forty-five gallons of water. This water is then used to wet down the cement or concrete. It is claimed for "Lapadas" that, forming a chemical combination with the lime, it not only increases the strength of the concrete about 25 per cent., but also acid and frostproofs it, preventing fine surface cracks and discolorations. Water, the manufacturers guarantee, even under the highest pressure, will not penetrate concrete work treated with this mixture. The firm issues an entertaining booklet dealing with the general subject of waterproofing, a copy of which may be had on request.

The Lawrence Cement Company, 1 Broadway, New York, locally the Lawrence Portland Cement Company, with offices in the Harrison Building, manufactures at its plant at Siegfried, Pa., the old and widely established "Dragon" brand of Portland cement. The Dragon brand was one of the first of American Portlands, has been in use twenty-one years and is the binding medium not only in many notable structures, but in over 1,800 cities and towns in the United States has been used in the construction of bridges, aqueducts, tunnels and other important work requiring the use of a high-grade of cement. The company sends out a very attractive catalogue illustrating structures in which their cement has been used, which it is prepared to furnish to persons interested.

The Royal Institute of British Architects is making arrangements to hold an International Town Planning Conference under royal auspices in the galleries of Burlington House, London. Models and designs exhibiting the newest thought in the planning of towns are to be shown from every quarter of the world. The officers are John Burns, honorary president; Leonard Stokes, president; Aston Webb, chairman of executive committee, and John W. Simpson, secretary.

New York City's new municipal building, the plans of which are by McKim, Mead and White, will require, it is estimated, a half million or more feet of granite and about 26,000 tons of steel. It is to be forty stories in height. The Thompson-Starrett Company is bound by the terms of its contract to turn the building over to the city, completed, January 1, 1912.

The building of railroad terminals of unusual size and elaborate architectural finish has grown to be a fad. The Union Station at Washington, the Northwestern, at Chicago, and the Pennsylvania and New York Central's, at New York, are among recent examples of this tendency. The Chicago station, in process of construction by the George A. Fuller Company, which concern built also the Pennsylvania terminal in New York, is to occupy a site equal to four city blocks and will cost, completed, $23,000,000. Frost & Granger, of Chicago, are the architects.

St. Louis is one of the best lighted cities in the West. The post in use is similar in design to that recently introduced here by Chief McLaughlin, with the difference that the St. Louis post bears three powerful arc lights instead of two, and the posts are but fifty-six feet apart.

Under its new socialist administration Milwaukee is beginning to display a keen interest in the subject of model homes for the working masses. Walter Thomas Mills, special commissioner of municipal industrial enterprises for Milwaukee, has gone abroad to study the question of workingmen's homes as worked out there. The Milwaukee plan is to build at the expense of the city houses of the most approved type on a tract of 3,000 acres of land already acquired and sell these homes at approximately cost and on long terms to deserv-ing wageearners.

A report issued by the State Tax Commission places the total assessed value of real estate in New York State at $9,255,628,487.

Doctor Lipman, associate professor of agriculture, at Rutgers College, after a three weeks' tour of the central West, is of opinion that farming ground in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York is in for the greatest boom in history within the next five years. Doctor Lipman bases this opinion on the price that farming land is now bringing in the West, varying from $150 to $200 an acre. The immense areas of better land that may be had in the East at $100 an acre is certain, in Doctor Lipman's judgment, to turn the tide of agriculture investment this way with the result of a sharp advance of land values in the States mentioned.

The Lehigh Portland Cement Company has placed a contract for 2,000 tons of structural steel for a new plant to be erected at Mason, Iowa.

The Railway Appliances Association will hold its next annual exhibition of appliances used in the construction, operation and maintenance of railroads, at Chicago, March 20-25, 1911. The twelfth annual convention of the American Railway Engineering and Maintenance of Way Association and the spring meeting of the Railway Signal Association will be held at the same time. Applications for space may be made, up to November 1, to John W. Reynolds, secretary, 303 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.

At the October meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, held yesterday, in New York City, Frank B. Gilbreth discussed methods for eliminating the use of wood in building construction. Other phases of the same general subject were discussed by H. DeB. Parsons, H. B. Keasby, Ira H. Woolson, William D. Grier and C. A. P. Turner.

The American Society of Municipal Improvements is now in session at Erie, Pa. This is the seventeenth annual convention of this organization. Among important papers scheduled for reading are "European Sewage Disposal Works," by Rudolph Hering, consulting engineer, New York; "Laying Asphalt with a Surface Heater," by B. B. Colbourne, of the Equitable Asphalt Maintenance Company; "Modern Stone Block Pavement," by William A. Howell; "Bituminous Pavements, Patented and Otherwise," by E. A. Kingsley; "Supervision of Municipal Work," by Will P. Blair, and "Asphalt Repair," by Henry C. Allen.

Boston, Mass., is experimenting with a new type of paving, the outcome of which is being awaited with unusual interest. It is known as wedge-block paving and consists in re-setting old granite or Belgian paving blocks with white oak wedges driven in between them. Mr. Edward Olcott, of New York, is the sponsor for this new style of paving, which is also being tried out in Baltimore, Jersey City and Brooklyn.

Some Interesting Criticism on the Subject of Wood Block Paving.

Mr. Clifford Richardson, who represented the United States as a delegate to the International Road Congress at Brussels, in August, has an exceedingly interesting letter in the pages of the Engineering Record on the subject of wood block paving abroad. In Paris, the foundation for this class of paving is a Portland cement concrete, the surface of which is floated with a 1.2 mortar. The blocks are 4.75 inches deep and 3.15 inches wide. They are cut from French pine of the Province of Landes, a very soft timber, the natural rings of growth amounting to but three or four to the inch. As a result the wood is unusually open and porous. These blocks are not saturated with dead oil or other preservatives after the method in vogue here, but are merely dipped. The blocks are placed directly upon the foundation without the interposition of mortar bed. Between each row of blocks a small reglet one-half inch deep and one-quarter inch thick is placed, directly on the foundation, thus separating the block by the thickness of the reglet. The space between the blocks is then filled with a Portland cement grout. The method of finishing along the curb is somewhat novel. Two rows of blocks are placed as stretchers, and an open space of about three inches in width is left between the stretchers and the curb, this being afterwards filled with gravel and coal tar. The entire surface, after grouting, is covered with gravel, which is forced into the soft wood by the traffic.

Mr. Richardson is not unduly impressed with the durable qualities of this kind of paving. It is supposed to last, he writes, for six or seven years under heavy travel, but from certain observations made by him while abroad he is able to say that it is usually in very bad shape after four or five years, and shows deterioration in two or three. The Paris method of construction he regards as vastly inferior to that in use in New York and in London, the most notable thing about wood block paving in the French capital being the exceedingly small amount of preservative material employed. The London paving, in Mr. Richardson's judgment, is much better.

The blocks are five inches deep and three inches wide. The timber is close grained pine saturated with ten pounds of dead oil of a specific gravity of 1.05. The foundation is floated concrete, but in place of the reglet used in Paris the blocks are pushed together just as closely as they can be made to fit. The joints are then filled with a tar grout which serves the double purpose of making the pavement waterproof as well as preventing expansion. Provision is made for a certain amount of expansion, however, as in Paris, by leaving a space along the curb which is filled with gravel and tar.

The London wood block work costs $3 per square yard on a six-inch foundation and a one-inch float surface. They are supposed to be good for fifteen years on residence streets and from seven to eight years on streets subjected to heavy travel. The wood surface can be replaced, where worn out, for $2.40 per square yard.

The chief advantage of the English over the American method of laying wood block paving resides, in the opinion of Mr. Richardson, in the increased depth of the blocks, sufficient to give lateral support and stability to the wearing surface. That they are placed directly upon the foundation and not upon a mortar bed, which may or may not be rigid, is another good point, whereas the use of tar as a grout insures perfect waterproofing.

The amount of preservative material in the English block, according to Mr. Richardson, is less than 50 per cent. of that in use on this side of the water. Thousands of dollars, it would seem, are literally thrown away here in over-impregnating the wood block intended for this class of paving, the same result being attainable by the use of a tar grouting or asphalt filler with the additional advantage of obviating the seas of oozing tar incident to the summer season.

The chief defect of the American method, Mr. Richardson sums up as, first, the shallowness of the block, affording little leeway for wear and a considerable danger of displacement; second, extravagance in the matter of saturation, with disagreeable drawbacks and no compensating advantage; third, the common neglect of failure to employ a waterproof filler; fourth, indifference to the along-curb allowance for more or less inevitable expansion, and, fifth and last, the use of a mortar bed in place of a smooth-floated concrete foundation.

The interest in wood block paving is so general and the point covered by Mr. Richardson's letter of such value to municipal engineers, that we have given it more than the average allotment of space. We should be glad to hear from experts in this line on the points raised in Mr. Richardson's communication.

Foundrymen's 200th Meeting.

By way of observing its 200th meeting, the Philadelphia Foundrymen's Association invited friends from New England, New Jersey and western Pennsylvania to join hands with it in an old-fashioned "Quaker Party."

At the dinner, given at Kugler's, which was one of the features of the meeting, addresses were made by Mayor John E. Reyburn, Thos. Ober, Jr., Louis S. Amonson, Dr. W. J. Spillman, H. A. Carpenter, of Providence, R. I.; H. E. Field, of Pittsburg; F. W. Stockwell, of Boston; A. E. Barlow, of Newark, N. J.; Howard Evans, secretary of the local association, and James Flockhart, of Newark, N. J. Thomas Devlin, of the Devlin & Brohard Manufacturing Co., presided. Auto trips to points of interest completed the program laid out for the visitors, who made their headquarters at the Manufacturers' Club.

CHARLES H. SCHEERBAUM, Purchasing Agents for the Abram Cox Stove Co. and Allied Interests.

Charles H. Scheerbaum, purchasing agent of the Abram Cox Stove Company, of Philadelphia, entered the service of this company as a boy in October, 1898. Shortly after the death of Mr. Thomas I. Rankin, Mr. Scheerbaum was, after various minor promotions, appointed purchasing agent for the Philadelphia branch of the company; the following year for the Lansdale branch, and a year later for the Thomas, Roberts, Stevenson Company. In January, 1909, he was asked to do the purchasing for the Allentown Utility Company, and on April 1, 1910, was designated buyer for a group of other concerns.

He does all of the buying, at this writing, for the Abram Cox Stove Company, Philadelphia and Lansdale; Thomas, Roberts, Stevenson Company, Philadelphia; Mount Penn Stove Works, Reading, Pa.; Reading Stove Works, Reading, Pa.; Grander Stove Works, Royersford, Pa.; Allentown Utility Company, Allentown, Pa.; York Utility Company, York, Pa.; Lebanon Utility Company, Lebanon, Pa.

Mr. Scheerbaum's purchases exceed $1,000,000 worth of materials annually.

Abram C. Mott, Sr., is president of the Cox Stove Company; Mr. A. C. Mott, Jr., general manager; John P. Dornan, superintendent of the Philadelphia branch; William Eckfeldt, of the Lansdale plant, and Edward E. Pennewill, of the Thomas, Roberts, Stevenson branch.

Roland L. Taylor, of this city, president of the Philadelphia Trust Company, was chosen a member of the executive committee of the trust company section at the recent Los Angeles convention of American Bankers.

The American Steel and Wire Company reports bookings of new business anywhere from 15 to 20 per cent. better than at this time last year. Operations are running now on a basis of 80 to 85 per cent. of capacity.

Builder John R. Wiggins was a prominent figure in the exercises attending the recent unveiling of the monument to General Muehlenberg.

Mr. J. C. Williams is in charge of the great, new plant for creosoting put up by the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, at Maurer, N. J.

The Market Street Subway, Philadelphia, is waterproofed with asphaltic mastic, manufactured by the Vulcanite Paving Company, of which Mr. Henry Wiederhold is manager.

IF—

you have a good thing in the BUILDING or CONSTRUCTION line, and you want Architects or Engineers to specify it, don't wait for them to phone you. Tell your story to them plainly in these columns.

If you want to know when plans are being prepared, or by whom, or what lines of material are to be used, or what firms are bidding or are likely to bid, you will find it here just the minute it's ready for publication.

If you have some old machinery or material, or other equipment, for which you have no present use and of which you would like to dispose, advertise it in our "For Sale" column. We'll sell it for you.

If you have any kind of proposition of the sort that should appeal to trust companies, real estate men, property owners, architects, material men, engineers, contractors, equipment men, commercial art men, decorators or people of that class,

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Trade Exhibits—Their Status and Management.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE is a confirmed believer in the usefulness of trade exhibits. It believes that such exhibits, properly officered and managed by men with a fitting conception of the object to be attained, are agencies of the highest value in the work of educating the lay mind to new ideas, and, believing as it does, in the essential usefulness of exhibits of this character, THE RECORD AND GUIDE has not only staunchly supported those now in operation, such as that in the Bourse, and its prototype in the Master Builders' Exchange, but has strongly advocated the establishment of additional exhibits covering trades unrepresented in these.

A trade exhibit rightly handled is a kind of a kindergarten for the benefit of the man who is unable, in the stress of his daily affairs, to keep fully informed upon the newest developments in the field it aims to cover. It consists of object lessons in the practical application of new ideas so plain as to be understood at a glance. It serves the purpose of demonstrating, as pages of descriptive matter will not suffice to demonstrate, the force, utility and practicability of a new device, contrivance, material or medium.

It is, in effect, a standing advertisement of the highest and most far-reaching effectiveness. To fully occupy, however, the important place in the field of trade promotion to which we here assign it, it is imperative that the trade exhibit be so handled as to attract to it a reasonably steady influx of visitors likely to be interested in the wares there displayed. In other words, to offer the exhibitor a fair return upon the investment he risks in engaging space in such display, it must undertake to guarantee in some measure its ability to draw to it not merely passers-by, idlers and curiosity-seekers, but that element of visitors the exhibitor classes as "prospects," persons so engaged as to be possible consumers in that particular line.

To attract people of this class an exhibit must be intelligently advertised.

It must be advertised in channels calculated to bring to it the class of consumers to whom its exhibitors cater. The advertising inaugurated in its behalf must be so specialized as to reach and make its appeal to persons likely to become users of the material and devices therein displayed. General advertising for an exhibit of trade import is worse than useless. Mere janitorial supervision such as characterizes the management of most exhibits of this kind is unfair to the exhibitor. It extracts from him a fee larger than ordinary rental with few or no compensating advantages.

Such an exhibit properly managed, on the other hand, is worth every penny it costs. It forms a connecting link between the manufacturer and the consumer. It serves to introduce the finished product to the trade direct. It constitutes a skilled and equipped bureau of exploitation and promotion working intelligently and systematically in the interest of its exhibitors. Its value to the field to which it dedicates its activities is beyond question. Whether it measures up to its opportunities or drags along a negative sort of an affair, less than first class in the matter of office service, and considerably below second class as an exhibit per se, depends wholly upon how and by whom it is managed.

Brains are as necessary to success in this as in other fields in which publicity is a preponderating factor.

Material and Equipment Notes

Toncan metal, the product of the Stark Rolling Mills Company, Canton, Ohio, is said to be adaptable for every purpose for which steel and iron sheets can be used, with the additional advantage that the danger of damage from rust and corrosion is practically reduced to zero. The company is issuing a new folder extolling the virtues of Toncan metal that should prove interesting to the trade.

An electric fan and air purifier that will supply 5000 cubic feet of fresh, filtered, outdoor air per hour at an expense of approximately a cent a day, should be a pretty good proposition. This claim is made by the American Blower Company, Detroit, Mich., for the "Sirocco," described as an ideal, all-the-year-round ventilator. A booklet, "Ventilation for Comfort and Health," is issued by the company.

I. C. Krewson, 801-5 Master street, this city, is widely known to the building trade as a manufacturer of extension and sectional ladders, swinging stages, scaffolding, jacks and hods. Mr. Krewson has been in control of the business since 1895, but the plant has been established since 1862 by Joseph Rue, being in fact the oldest concern of its kind in Philadelphia. The reputation of the Krewson goods is of the best, every detail of their manufacture having the personal attention of skilled workmen. It is the proud boast of Mr. Krewson that he has never had a dissatisfied customer, this, too, in face of the fact that he makes and sells more ladders than any other concern in his line. The Krewson ladder is made in a variety of designs suitable for the use of builders, contractors, bricklayers, plasterers, painters, etc.

The fame of Old Dominion Portland Cement is too firmly established to require any special boosting at this late day. It is nevertheless worthy of passing mention that in the construction of the dam and power house of the Pennsylvania Water and Power Company, at McCall Ferry, Pennsylvania, the cement used was Old Dominion, and the quantity of it supplied on this one job over 100,000 barrels. The size of the contract may be gathered from the fact that 100,000 barrels annually is the full capacity of the company's works at Frederick, Virginia. The Wm. G. Hartranft Cement Company, of this city, sole selling agent of the Old Dominion brand, is sending out an illustrated booklet showing views of other important works in which this famous old brand was the favored cement. The booklet contains a lot of interesting and expert information regarding the use of cement and should be in the hands of every user of this modern medium.

"Reinforced Concrete in Factory Construction" is the title of a valuable handbook which may be had free by architects, engineers and manufacturers who contemplate building. It is issued by the Atlas Portland Cement Company, and contains, in addition to chapters on concrete, concrete aggregate, methods and materials for reinforcement, etc., detailed descriptions of ten concrete factories and warehouses erected in various parts of the country and by different systems. Photographs, sectional drawings and specifications furnished by the engineers in charge are included in this work, which is 6 1/4 x 9 inches in size and profusely illustrated. The same company issues a number of other valuable handbooks dealing with the use of cement and concrete that are well worth the attention of contractors, architects and engineers. A card to the Atlas Portland Cement Company, 30 Broad street, New York City, will bring a list of these timely and authoritative booklets.

The Wainwright galvanized steel corner bar is a clever device for protecting the edges of concrete curbs, steps, columns, etc. It is fully covered by patents, has been in use for more than ten years and is the main feature of the Wainwright Steel-Bound Concrete Curb, a curb that is absolutely non-breakable and much cheaper than granite. Over two million feet of this curbing, it is estimated, is now in use and giving perfect satisfaction. City engineers specify it everywhere because it does the work of granite at less cost and with a greater attractiveness of appearance. The manufacturing company issues a copyrighted booklet, No. 7, that gives full details concerning the method of using this device. Address the Steel Protected Concrete Company, Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia.

For most purposes the Scherzer Rolling Lift Bridge is vastly superior to the swing bridge. In fact, it may be said to meet fully every reasonable requirement of a movable bridge, as may be shown by its adoption both here and abroad. It is made by the Scherzer Rolling Lift Bridge Company, 1616 Monadnock Block, Chicago, Ill., who will furnish sketches and estimates to parties interested.

The philosopher who asserted that there was "nothing new under the sun" should have tarried long enough to see the Capual Two-in-one, Never-leak Roofing Nail, the specialty of the Weather-proofing Nail Company, of Baltimore, Md. Here is "something new" with a vengeance, a roofing nail that is the most effective thing of its kind that we have ever seen, and a positive triumph of mechanical ingenuity. This nail holds down every form of composition roofing with the tenacity of the ordinary roofing nail, covers the lap in the material, allows for climatic changes, shrinkage and expansion, and increases the life of the roofing about 50 per cent. It also saves about two-thirds of labor, and costs less. Samples may be had free and a sample will convince any practical roofer of the value of the new nail. Address the Weather Proofing Nail Company, Baltimore, Md.

For hard usage and rough wear it would be difficult to devise a more effective type of roof covering than the Genasco Ready Roofing manufactured by the Barber Asphalt Paving Company. Here is a roofing material made of Trinidad Lake Asphalt, a medium calculated to endure as long as the average building. It doesn't crack, rust or rot, affords lasting protection, is absolutely waterproof, easy to apply, and practically indestructible. At the Seattle Exposition last year this roofing carried off the highest award. Samples and the Good Roofing Guide Book will be mailed to parties interested. Address The Barber Asphalt Paving Company, Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

For roofing on a large scale the Amatite Roofing, manufactured by the Barrett Manufacturing Company, Land Title Building, Philadelphia, seems to be a general favorite. Here is a roofing that is not unduly expensive, that is easy to apply, that never requires painting and that is as durable as steel. It is the ideal covering for big plants. A line to the nearest Barrett office brings full particulars.

Among local manufacturers of architectural sheet metal, cornices, skylights, porch ornaments and general sheet-metal work for the trade, few firms stand higher than that of Abronski Bros., 1615 Stiles street, this city. This now firmly-established house entered the business of sheet-metal working in 1894, in a shop 12 x 28, at 1609 North Nineteenth street. To-day it owns and occupies one of the most complete plants of the kind in Philadelphia—a splendidly equipped, brilliantly lighted and perfectly arranged factory building specially constructed for the business, with three floors, modern machinery, steam heat and a depth of 109 feet, running clear through to Cabot street in the rear. The building fronts on Stiles street, with offices and drafting room facing the street. Adjoining these are clean, well-lighted and ventilated work rooms, and in the rear, fronting on Cabot street, the stock room and shipping department.

Some idea of the scope of the business carried on at this modest and unpretentious plant may be had from the fact that during 1909 the firm turned out in these work rooms all of the cornices and sheet-metal work for 800 modern houses. This record the firm confidently expects to surpass for the present year.

John Abronski is the active outside man for the house, his brother, Albert Abronski, devoting his attention to shop management, drafting and contract estimating.

The firm is wide awake and progressive, up to the minute in every detail of the sheet-metal business, and equipped to handle a contract of any size. Their reputation in the trade is first class, and their product highly regarded by builders. As one of the members of the firm smilingly remarked on the occasion of a recent interview, the house figures not 'how cheaply a job can be done, but how cheaply it can be done right.' The skylights turned out by this house are standardized in every way and a superior article.

Here, There and Everywhere

The contract for the steel work on the train shed to be erected at Union Station, Baltimore, Md., by the Pennsylvania Railroad has been awarded to the McClintic and Marshall Company, Pottstown, Pa. The Brann & Stuart Company, Arcade Building, Philadelphia, Pa., has the contract for roofing, skylights and concrete finish.

The Honest Re-Concrete Culvert Company, care of F. H. Souder, Lansdale, Pa., wants to correspond with manufacturers of 1/8-inch galvanized sheet wire 3 feet wide, about 2x4 mesh, to be welded together by electricity.

The new $1,000,000 plant of the Norfolk Portland Cement corporation is now completed and in full operation. The Norfolk Company is composed of interests identified with the American Cement Company of this city. Its product will be marketed under the American Cement Company's established brand, "Giant."

The city of Jacksonville, Fla., has engaged the Scofield Engineering Company, of the Arcade Building, this city, to plan, supervise and construct an electric light plant. Estimated expenditure, $2,800,000. W. M. Bostwick, chairman of board trustees.

The Mammoth mills, dock and warehouses of the United States Gypsum Company at Alabaster, Michigan, burned on Sunday at an estimated loss of more than $400,000. The fire started early in the afternoon and in five hours the plant was destroyed. The origin of the blaze is not known. The village contains about 1000 inhabitants and is practically dependent on the mills for existence. Thomas F. Robinson, manager of the company, announced that the plant would be rebuilt.

The Galloway Terra Cotta Company has taken title to the group of factory buildings at the southwest corner of Thirty-second and Walnut streets, lot 306 by 98 feet, for a nominal consideration, subject to a $39,150 mortgage. The assessed value is $51,000.

Henry C. England, aged about 65, died at Reading, Pa., on Sunday after a brief illness. He went to Reading when a young man and was for many years treasurer of the Reading Hardware Company, and it was largely due to him that this became one of the largest establishments of the kind in America. He left the company some time ago to devote his time to his large real estate interests.

BIG CEMENT TRUST IF COURT FAVORS.

Steel and Oil Combines to Control Cement Output if High Tribunal Sustains Monopoly.

Big business interests are only waiting for the United States Supreme Court decision in the Tobacco Trust case to proceed to acquire the Portland cement industry of America, according to reports current in Allentown, which is the national headquarters of the business.

A good many owners and managers here are said to have been approached about the matter, and the plan is not at all an impossible one, as already the United States Steel Corporation and the Standard Oil Company control 60 per cent, of the cement output, which last year was 63,000,000 barrels, of which 21,000,000 barrels were made in the neighborhood of Allentown.

The big wedge in securing this control was driven by the United States Steel Trust, Cement Company, whose capacity is 20,000,000 barrels in a year. Prior to that the Universal Portland Cement Company, which is the cement department of the Steel Trust, had an output of 22,000 barrels a day from its three mills at South Chicago, Buffington, Ind., and Universal, Pa.

A Large Present Capacity.

The last annual statement of the Trust stated that $7,500,000 had been put aside to enlarge the cement department, and it has lately been learned that this money will be spent on two large new proposed plants at Gary, Ind., and Duluth, Minn., which will bring the product of the Universal Company to about when it acquired domination over the Atlas 40,000 barrels a day or in the neighborhood of 15,000,000 barrels a year.

To strengthen the situation of the Steel Trust in the trade is the close friendship with the Alpha Cement Company, which, as a cement concern, is the richest of all, owned by Standard Oil interests, headed by the Lockharts, of Pittsburg, with Henry Gassoway Davis, and United States Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, as large and influential stockholders. The plants of the Alpha turn out 7,000,000 barrels a year and the two big interests Oil and Steel, which work in perfect harmony, themselves control mills capable of producing upward of 40,000,000 barrels of cement a year.

Can Do It For $100,000,000.

While there are in this country about 105 cement manufacturing concerns, there are less than a dozen outside of those owned by United States Steel and Standard Oil that can produce 1,000,000 barrels a year, the larger being the Lehigh Portland, the American, the Lawrence, the Vulcanite, the Coplay, the Penn-Allen, the Nazareth, the Bath, and the Allentown Portland, all in the Lehigh region.

From Standard Oil sources comes an estimate that the entire industry could be brought under control for about $100,000,000, only half of which would need to be cash expenditure, and the further remark was made that it was not the money that was lacking, only "the way to do it had not yet quite been worked out."

Increasing Value of It.

The great extent of the cement industry in Pennsylvania is dealt with by Chief John L. Rockey, of the State Bureau of Industrial Statistics in a report just issued. In 1909 the investment in 23 plants in this State was $44,031,955, an increase of $3,500,000 over the previous year. The value of the production was $15,692,210, a gain of a million over 1908, or while the output was 19,592,335 barrels against 17,831,195 in 1908.

The industry employed 9540 persons to whom was paid $4,687,807, an increase over 1908, when the wages paid reached $3,823,725. Of the number of employees 3598 were reported as Americans. Managers and office help numbered 516, receiving $601,949.

The petition of Morris, Wheeler & Co., iron masters, at 1606 Market street, that a change be made in the paving of the approaches to Market street bridge, is one that should be heeded by Councils. Morris, Wheeler & Co. is one of many firms required to do considerable heavy draying over this bridge in the winter season.

The fact that wood block makes an excellent paving has been too thoroughly established abroad to admit of any question here regarding its utility. For level surfaces it is undoubtedly a thoroughly effective, durable and practicable pavement. One may, however, concede this and still recognize its inadaptability to steep grades such as mark the approaches to the Market street bridge. THE RECORD AND GUIDE finds a general concert of opinion among firms who haul over this highway in favor of granite block where the roadway begins the ascent to the bridge and its reverse incline on the opposite side. There is still time to make this change, if Councils act without delay.

Wood block, on a slippery, wet day, with a grade steep enough to be difficult even under the best of conditions, could hardly fail to be hazardous to teamsters generally.

The Morris, Wheeler petition should be acted upon favorably.

Philadelphia owes some consideration to those Market street merchants whose lines involve heavy draying over the Schuylkill.

More or Less Personal

C. C. Wingate, of 305 South Fifty-second street, West Philadelphia, has closed several deals in realty in that section within the past few weeks of a size calculated to make some of the veterans sit up and take notice. Although new to the real estate field, Mr. Wingate, whose general business experience has been extensive, is rapidly establishing a most successful business. His judgment of property values is first class, his methods careful and conservative, and his financial standing of the caliber that inspires confidence.

George C. Barber, 3d, of Reed A. Morgan & Co., has been elected to the directorate of the Republic Trust Company.

Architect Oliver Randolph Parry, of this city, had a very entertaining article in the New York American of Sunday last on the subject of "Bungalow Building."

Herbert F. L. Allen, formerly of the Sterling Company and Babcock & Wilson Co., is now special representative for the Hydrex Felt and Engineering Company, Washington, D. C.

Comptroller Prendergast has prepared a chart showing that in twelve years New York City has borrowed $649,609,162. And it was a New Yorker who presumed to stigmatize Philadelphia as "corrupt and contented."

Rumor has it that Charles H. Scheerbaum, present purchasing agent of the Abram Cox Stove Company, of this city, is to succeed John P. Dornan as superintendent of the Philadelphia plant. It is understood that Mr. Dornan contemplates resigning, with a view to engaging in business for himself.

It is whispered in trade circles that Mr. Edward E. Pennewiel, of the Thomas, Roberts & Stevenson Co., is to take unto himself as bride in the very near future a beautiful daughter of sunny Tennessee.

W. J. Serrill, of the United Gas Improvement Company, is to read an important paper on "The Value of Illuminating Engineering to the Commercial Man" before the fourth annual convention of the Illuminating Engineering Society at Baltimore, October 24-25.

J. G. Felton and E. G. Brady, of the United Gas Improvement Company, of this city, and Norman Macbeth, of the Welsbach Company, of Gloucester, N. J., are to read papers before the coming convention of the Illuminating Engineers.

Walton Clarke, M. E., president of the Franklin Institute, and third vice-president of the United Gas Improvement Company, of this city, and Charles O. Bond, manager of the photometric laboratory of the same company, are to figure prominently in the coming convention of Lighting Engineers at San Francisco.

John W. Gates, the widely known Chicago millionaire, is the controlling force behind the Texas Company, the oil-producing concern that is meeting the Rockefeller company on its own ground.

James E. Lennon, of the South Philadelphia Business Men's Association, is at the head of a movement the object of which is to induce Mayor Reyburn and Electrical Chief McLaughlin to extend the new arc lights in use on Market street all the way down Broad street to the Navy Yard. The new lights now extend only to Spruce street.

James W. Baird, well known in local real estate circles, is credited with the intention of erecting a commodious, elaborate and thoroughly modern apartment house on South Broad street, this city.

South Philadelphia real estate men are of opinion that values in that section are in for a big boom within the next year. They base this optimistic attitude first on the fact that values in this locality have now touched low water mark, and, second, that the constant influx of immigration is certain to produce and to sustain an immense and continuous demand for South Philadelphia realty.

The Whiting Manufacturing Company, of Robeville, N. C., and this city, has amended its charter so as to increase its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Who reads The Record and Guide?

That's a fair question. It's a question every advertiser has the right to ask and a right to have answered. We have no use for the advertiser who "throws his money at the birds." This class of advertiser doesn't stay long when he does come in and as a rule isn't able to pay his bills when they reach him. The advertiser we cater to is the hard-headed, level-brained man of business—the fellow "who wants to know."

"Who reads The Record and Guide?"

In Philadelphia everybody, structurally speaking, who is anybody; outside of Philadelphia (extending north, south, east and west, this side of the Mississippi), architects, builders, contractors, city engineers, manufacturers, material and equipment men, projective owners, financiers, railroad men, town-builders, board of trade promoters, men of every class and kind who are interested in structural work above or below ground.

About seventy per cent. of these are subscribers

The others are honored with "sample" or "marked" copies because more or less directly concerned in important constructive enterprises. All are promising raw material for the advertiser with a proposition in the structural line.

It is the highly specialized nature of the circulation of THE RECORD AND GUIDE which gives it its peculiar and unique value as a medium.

Everything of a structural sort falls within the zone of our influence

If you doubt this try us out. Send along a test "ad." What we are asking is simply a chance to prove our claim that THE RECORD AND GUIDE "makes good."

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Entered at the Post Office at Philadelphia as

Business Note.

Mr. Aubrey McConnell, former vice-president of the Building News Publishing Company, has disposed of his holdings in the company to Mr. Louis A. DeLone and is therefore no longer connected in any capacity with THE RECORD AND GUIDE or Daily Building News.

Philadelphia, October 22, 1910.

The new Central Free Library Building to be constructed on the line of the Parkway between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets is to cost approximately $1,000,000. In a reasonable view of all the circumstances it should be an edifice of unusual and striking architectural beauty. Ordinarily THE RECORD AND GUIDE is opposed to the system of competitive plans. Here, however, is an instance in which we feel that the competitive system would work out to conspicuous advantage. Philadelphia has a colony of architects, the equals in taste, professional skill and achievement of any in the world. She has men here, little known to the great outside public, who are recognized as masters of chaste, dignified, impressive and correct design. Why not offer some inducement to these men to give to their home city or to the city of their adoption—as the case may be—a building worthy of its dreams and traditions? Let us have an open competition for the plans of this great, new Central Library. Let us throw down the bars and make it free for all. Let us pick a jury of men who know something of architectural beauty and allow them to select without fear or favor the design that most completely approaches the highest artistic ideals. Mayor Reyburn has on more than one occasion displayed his possession of a keen and well-nourished artistic leaning. May we enlist the interest of his Honor the Mayor, in such a competition as we here outline? The experiment is one that has worked out well in other cities and that is at least eminently well worth a trying-out here. Let us build the new Library after competitive design!

The new convention hall to be erected in this city should be located on South Broad street, preferably somewhere about equidistant from Chestnut street and say Wharton street. Broad street, being easily the finest of Philadelphia thoroughfares, should have more consideration than it has received as a site for showy and important public buildings. The tendency to favor North Broad street in this respect is unfair to the established trade centers in and about Chestnut and Walnut streets. Buildings such as the convention hall now under discussion, elaborate hotels like the Majestic and handsome and spacious entertainment temples such as Hammerstein's not only exert a strong tendency to influence the tide of trade but seriously disturb established values. The privately capitalized enterprise may go where its proprietors elect, the selection of the site being a matter in which the public, other tradesmen, and vested realty interests can have no voice. Public enterprises such as the new convention hall belong in quite another category. Market street is commonly regarded as the city's centre. Chestnut street is unmistakably the city's business street par excellence. Any movement calculated to divert the tide of trade away from this section cannot be defended as good public policy. In the matter of showy municipal buildings, North Philadelphia has already been awarded more than its just share. There ought to be enough sectional pride in South Philadelphia to take a pretty firm stand upon the question of the site for this new hall.

604-10 Pennsylvania Building
15th and Chestnut Sts. Philadelphia

What is the significance of the fact that a number of well-known builders are utilizing Electrical equipment in the houses they are building? Because they have learned by experience that such equipment hastens the sale and increases the value of their properties. It really means that the Philadelphia public now-a-days demands conveniences which can only be obtained by the use of Electricity.

Caul Company, Tenth and Sansom streets, are figuring.

Sunday school, Twenty-second and Federal streets; $20,000. Architects, Druckenmiller, Stackhouse & Williams, Land Title Building. Owner, Grace Presbyterian Church, Rev. N. Culver, 1410 Lombard street. Brick; one story; 48x60 feet; slate roof; steam heat. Will contain gymnasium. Plans in progress.

Baily & Bassett Designing Large Suburban Apartment House.

Baily & Bassett, 421 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, have been commissioned by Mr. Frank H. Mahan to make plans for a four-story apartment house, to be built at the northeast corner of Montgomery avenue and Gray's lane, Haverford, Pa., within two minutes' walk of station. It is understood that no better situation for an apartment house could have been selected on the Main Line. The building is to be fireproof, and will be in every way a high-class apartment house appropriate to the neighborhood.

The suites will vary from one to seven rooms, with private and public bathrooms, and single rooms and shower baths on the upper floor. There will be an exchange, parlor, smoking-room, billiard-room, a large living-room with open fireplaces, with central dining-room and private dining-room, kitchen, etc., all on the first floor. A garage and stable will also be built on the property.

Material and Equipment Notes

The Keasby & Mattison Company, of Ambler, Pa., is using one of the cleverest ideas in the way of mailable advertising matter to be met with in the structural field. It consists of a series of exceedingly attractive post cards, each containing a well-executed photograph of a building roofed with "Century" asbestos shingles. The wide range and substantial character of the buildings illustrated is a strong endorsement of the Keasby-Mattison product.

"Konkreto" is manufactured by the Murphy Varnish Company, of Newark, N. J., is a dustless, damp-proof, sanitary finish for concrete and cement. It is said to be easily applied, to be inexpensive, to wear and sweep like tiling, and to relieve completely that ugly, strong finish peculiar to concrete. The company issues a free explanatory booklet which can be had on request.

The A. C. Horn Company, 180 Water street, New York, are experts in waterproofing. "Suiting the methods to the conditions; materials to the methods" is the catch line of the advertising being done by this concern in the interest of its widely-employed waterproofing compounds, "Hydratite" and "Symmentrex," both of which enjoy a big sale in the trade. The company invites correspondence with firms interested in waterproofing.

The Automatic Sash Holder is a neat device that holds the sash automatically at any point desired. Its use completely eliminates weights, cords and pulleys, and costs less than these cumbersome, annoying and obsolete sash contrivances. The automatic holder can be applied to any window, will outlast the ordinary weight and rope equipment, and never gets out of order. The Automatic Sash Holder Company, manufacturers, 277 Broadway, New York.

"Better than brick or terra-cotta, because stronger, more fire-proof, and less porous, and almost as cheap as ordinary frame construction," is the claim made for the Pauly Concrete Hollow Tile, made by the Concrete Stone and Sand Company, of Youngstown, Ohio. Companies with large capital have erected plants in various parts of the country for the manufacture of this tile, and are running to full capacity. Exclusive territory can still be guaranteed in certain sections. The company invites correspondence with responsible parties only.

The Kinser Construction Company, of Chicago, have been using bricks of carborundum to remove form marks and mold ridges from concrete construction done by them at Lock No. 8 of the barge canal at Fort Edward, N. Y. They write that a carborundum brick will do twice the surface that a cement block or fire brick will, and that it wears even under rough usage about thirty days. Write the Carborundum Company, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

A double-headed nail, especially designed for concrete form construction, is the specialty of the F. A. Neider Company, of Augusta, Ky. This nail can be pulled and used many times over, being so made that no amount of pulling will break the thickly reinforced head, and yet so rigged with a square iron washer that it can be driven home and made to hold better than any ordinary nail used for this purpose. Samples and prices furnished to parties interested.

The Kokomo Level Company, Kokomo, Ind., is advertising a level for the use of cement workers and bricklayers that fits over the finger like a finger ring: is never in the way, is always accessible and does the work with all of the precision of a more expensive tool. The level sells at a dollar, and the company offers to refund the money to any buyer who finds it unsatisfactory. The size of the finger must be sent when ordering.

The Genuine Bangor Slate Company, Record Building, Easton, Pa., has issued a booklet, entitled "Impartial Roof Thoughts," that should be in the hands of every architect and builder who seeks to keep abreast of the times. This booklet naturally sounds the praises of slate as a roofing material, but it does it so well, so entertainingly and so convincingly that one is tempted to overlook the fact that it is an advertisement. The facts cited in this little booklet are of the sort to appeal to common sense builders. Write for a copy.

For certain kinds of roofing, slag is hard to beat. It is fire-proof, weather-proof, water-proof, and practically indestructible. And of all slag roofs the Ehret roof is easily best. For details regarding cost, etc., write the Warren-Ehret Company, Land Title Building, Philadelphia.

The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, Frick Building, Pittsburg, Pa., manufactures what are known as good tern plates, the "Mf" brand, holding a 32-pound coating of roofing tin. "Mf" is made by the old process—hand dipped and pure palm oil. It is said to be one of the finest roofing tins for all-round good service in the market.

A solid steel sash, strong enough to hold innumerable panes of glass, yet light enough and so nicely adjusted as to be easily operated, is the "Detroit-Fenestra," a window sash that is coming into general use in large factories and workshops. This sash is made by the Detroit Steel Product Company, of Detroit, Mich., who furnish a neat pamphlet, setting forth in detail its many advantages.

Here, There and Everywhere

Officials of the General Asphalt Company announce that earnings are running ahead of those of last year.

An orphanage, home, and hospital, to cost $300,000, is to be erected by the Knights of Malta at Granville, Mifflin County, Pennsylvania. Work is to be started early next spring.

The Walnut Street Business Men's Association, of Philadelphia, has called a public meeting to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford on November 1, the object of which is to influence the selection of a central site for the new convention hall projected for this city.

The city council of Easton, Md., has engaged Clyde Potts, 30 Church street, New York, to prepare plans for sewers and sewage disposal.

Lebanon, Pa., will vote, on November 8, on a proposition to increase the bonded indebtedness of the city by $110,000, the money thus secured to be expended upon a sewerage system.

Bids will be received by city council until November 14 for the construction of a storm water drainage system at Atlantic City, N. J.

The Scofield Engineering Company, Arcade Building, this city, are at work on plans for a three-story and basement warehouse at Hazelton, Pa., for the Latimer Supply and Machinery Company, of Latimer Mines, Pa.

The plans of Ballinger & Perrot, of this city, for the dormitory to be erected for the Western Theological Seminary at Pittsburg have been approved. I. G. Marvin, of Bryn Mawr, is chairman of the Building Committee.

John L. Crary, street commissioner of St. Augustine, Fla., wants prices on an asphalt paving plant and on machinery for mixing concrete.

Newark, N. J., is experimenting with a granite block paving, the novel feature of which is that the surface of the block is smooth-dressed and the grouting heavy and thorough. Newark officials claim the new paving is superior to asphalt.

The new plant of the Norfolk Portland Cement Company, on a branch of the Elizabeth River at Norfolk, Va., is now practically complete and in operation. It is said to be one of the finest plants of the kind in the world. The Norfolk Cement Company is controlled by interests identified with the American Cement Company, of this city. Its product will be handled by the Lesley & Trinkle Company, general agents for the American Cement Company.

The Kingston Coal Company, Morton's Gap, Ky., wants prices on a heating plant for a 20-room hotel.

The enlargement of the plant of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel Company, manufacturers of light steel dump cars and portable tracks, is under way. The plant is at Koppel, Pa., situated about thirty miles from Pittsburg, a town built by the Koppel Company.

Work is to start at Gary, Ind., within ten days on 200 detached houses for workingmen employed by the United States Steel Corporation in one of its subsidiary corporations, the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company. About $250,000 is to be expended on the houses, which are to be monolithic concrete, steel reinforced.

C. T. McCreminon, Miami, Fla., wants prices on plumbing for a hotel, including 10 bathrooms and 39 to 50 lavatories.

The Eastern Railway Supply Company, 413 American Building, Baltimore, Md., wants prices on a No. 1 and No. 2 O. Thew steam shovel.

Manufacturers of steel for store building are invited to quote figures to J. W. Barratt & Son, Trenton, Tenn.

I. Selton & Co., Cairo, Egypt, ask correspondence with manufacturers of tin plate.

C. H. Peterson, who has been associated with the Chicago office of the Baltimore Locomotive Works and the Standard Steel Works, has been appointed Southwestern representative for those companies, with headquarters at St. Louis. Edward B. Halsey, who has been in charge of the St. Louis office, is now with the sales department in this city.

The roof of a tomb, constructed by the Romans at least one hundred years B. C., on the Via Appia, has been found to be nothing less than a slab of lime concrete with bronze reinforcing rods.

W. B. Wilkinson, a plasterer of Newcastle-on-Tyne, is the modern inventor of reinforced concrete. He took out a patent on the process in 1854.

The REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS' GUIDE visits weekly and continuously, architects, engineers, builders, real estate men, material and equipment supply houses in the Eastern States. It goes to lots of other people more or less directly interested in building and structural work. As a medium for reaching the best people in these particular lines, it is without a peer. An advertisement voicing the merits of anything connected with building construction, machinery, bridges, water works, sewers, street improvements, electric light plants, electric railways or concrete construction could have no better medium. Let us have a trial advertisement. We'll agree to convince you!

Publications Received.

We are in receipt from the William T. Comstock Company, 23 Warren Street, New York, of "A Primer of Architectural Drawings for Young Students," by William S. B. Dana, B. S. of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

This little book is one of the most admirable presentations of the elementary principles of architectural drawing that we have ever examined, being a progressive series of simple and easily grasped drawing board problems derived from the practical experience of the author while a teacher in the Mechanical Institute. The book avoids technical phraseology, explains fully such technical terms as the author finds it necessary to use, and is illustrated by a number of very good line drawings. It is nicely printed, bound in cloth covers and should make a most desirable text book for the architectural beginner.

More or Less Personal

Lawrence Clark, William E. Groben and William V. K. Shepard have opened offices at 1021 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia. The new firm, which is composed of three well-known architects, has a number of important commissions well under way.

Louis J. Bergdoll, of Philadelphia, has transferred to the North Broad Street Realty Company over $400,000 worth of Quaker City real estate. Mr. Bergdoll is said to control the Realty Company.

At the monthly banquet of the Unit Club at Zeiss' Hotel, plans were laid looking to the formation of a permanent association among realty salesmen in Philadelphia.

A committee consisting of Mayor Reuburn, Colonel J. Loudon Snowden, Sydney W. Keith, Fred T. Dunlap and Jesse I. Vodges are visiting sites suggested for the proposed new convention hall to be erected here in Philadelphia.

John Lambert, a former partner of John W. Gates, has been elected a director of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, succeeding L. C. Hanna.

Horace Trumbauer, one of Philadelphia's leading architects, has furnished the plans for three fine residential edifices in process of erection on Fifth avenue, in New York City, for George Gould, James B. Clews and James B. Duke. Mr. Trumbauer has opened permanent New York offices.

W. E. Harkness, former sales engineer for the Western Electric Company, is now assistant general manager of the United States Electric Company at 284 Pearl street, New York City.

Winthrop Smith, the widely-known Philadelphia banker, was sixty-five years old on Saturday last. His friends fittingly observed the event with floral offerings.

Henry & West, William Saloman & Co., of New York, and J. I. Wilson, Jr., & Co., of Baltimore have financed the Charles Warner Company, of Wilmington. The syndicate is said to have purchased $570,000 of first preferred seven per cent. stock. The Warner Company operates extensive and highly productive limestone quarries.

President Keeley, of the American Steel Foundries Company, says the annual statement will show earnings applicable to dividends on the capital stock of six per cent.

Special Inspector Samuel Young of the Highway Bureau, of this city, is said to be an authority in his line upon the question of creosoted wood block paving.

Ex-Highway Chief William H. Brooks is an enthusiastic supporter of Mayor Reuburn's proposition to organize a permanent city street repair gang.

The New York American pays a deserved tribute to Mr. Wilson Eyres, one of Philadelphia's distinguished architects. Commenting on Roland B. Conklin's "Rosemary Farm," near Huntington, L. I., the buildings upon which blending the English manor and Italian styles were planned by Mr. Eyre the American says: "the buildings have the unique distinction of the originality."

Simon Gratz, of the Board of Revision of Taxes is keenly elated over the vindication which has come to his judgment of the so-called Somers system. Denounced by real estate men, opposed by builders and business men, pronounced absurd by Geo H. Earle, antagonized by Felix Isman, repudiated by the Board of Trade and the subject of a suit in the courts to test the legality of its bill, the Somers idea is certainly experiencing rough sailing.

Lawrence Clark, Wm. E. Groben and

Wm. V. K. Shepard, have opened architectural offices at suite 1021 Witherspoon Building, and desire catalogs, etc.

Louis V. Scherr has opened an architectural office at 324 Weightman Building, 1524 Chestnut street, and desires samples and catalogs of building materials.

The Warsaw Elevator Company is installing the elevator in the new building at 339 North Third street, for Hale & Bro. Stuckert & Sloan, architects.

Practical Floor Lighting.

The popularity of Berger's system of sidewalk lights is attributable to the quite unusual merit and adaptability of this novel system. Constructed of a series of permanent forms of heavy galvanized steel, combined with glass, steel reinforcing rods, and concrete, these lights are far in advance of anything of the kind in the market. The heavy steel forms, four inches on center, interlock, forming a rigid base for receiving the glass and concrete, make a neat, attractive surface underneath, which can be decorated without danger of discoloration from the concrete, hold the glass firmly on all sides, thus so equalizing and distributing the strain as to double the durability of the panes, and has a leg or brace attachment which effectually prevent the glass from slipping or shifting out of place. The glass used in the Berger system is thoroughly annealed, and therefore not subject to the cracking and chipping common to other products of the kind, is made with grooves or recesses on all sides, which engage the concrete and prevent leakage, is so laid that each form containing a single row of glass may be shifted or moved at any time before the concrete is placed, and requires less time, trouble and expense in installation than other systems using false or wooden centering.

Another advantage of the Berger system is that with it, it is possible to use any design of reinforcing rod. Rigorous tests have shown that a quarter-inch rod is amply sufficient. The concrete entering into this construction should be made of the very best Portland cement and clean, sharp sand.

The forms used in the Berger lights are made from special analysis, open-hearth steel, heavily galvanized, and of full number eighteen gauge stock. They are of four inches, effective covering width, and are furnished in depths of one, one and a half, and two inches, according to the span and the load to be carried.

The Edison House at the Cement Show.

The concrete house invented by Mr. Thomas A. Edison will be the principal feature of the Cement Show, to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York City, December 14-20. The fact that Mr. Edison is to personally install and supervise this exhibit adds measurably to the interest with which it is regarded. Mr. Edison seeks to demonstrate by this house that it is possible to pour a complete cement building at one operation. The whole house can be poured in six hours with the aid of a special concrete devised by the inventor, which is reported to flow like water, holding the aggregates in suspension and securing a uniform distribution of the concrete throughout the molds. The house to be shown will be about 25 feet by 30 feet, and can be built in gross lots for $1,200.

The gold medal concrete cottage, which won the prize in the competition held by the Anti-Tuberculosis Congress last year, will also be a feature of the show. This cottage is a sanitary, inexpensive home for a workingman, the design of Milton Dana Morrill, of Washington, D. C.

Had the city been properly alive to its opportunities when the original plans for the present city hall were being mapped out, this imposing municipal building would have been surrounded by a splendid space of green stretching from Chestnut or Walnut street to Arch and from 13th to 15th. And fronting on this square on all sides might have been built up a series of splendid buildings educational and governmental, the whole forming not only a fitting terminal for the series of parkways now being planned, but a species of highly attractive municipal centre equally accessible from every point of the compass. Here could have been grouped attractively such edifices as the new mint, the projected Carnegie library, the new Manual Training School, the new high schools, the new custom house and other stately and beautiful structures of a public or semi-public interest. There would have been a sound geographical wisdom in so locating these buildings aside and apart from the fact that they would have beautified the town. Placing buildings intended for public use at the park entrance to the new boulevard is unfair to a considerable portion of the public. The dream of a city centre along the lines here outlined is, under existing conditions, a dream of the unattainable. Still, if future buildings of a municipal, governmental or semi-public sort must be confined to the new parkway, let us have them, not at the park entrance, but as close to the city's centre as is feasible. If the sites for the many edifices of the kind now planning and in prospect shall be chosen wisely the new parkway will be a boulevard of some note. If on the other hand these buildings are bunched at the park end, made inaccessible to thousands of the city's population, and located without any care either as to grouping or beauty of effect in the mass, the result will be discouraging to men with discriminating architectural ideas. The dream of a City Beautiful is not to be realized by smearing all the beauty at one highly localized point. Municipal, governmental and educational edifices of more than ordinary beauty of design should be placed on the city's show streets—such streets as Broad street, and the new parkway,—in obedience to a carefully considered and shrewdly planned system of municipal development and not as the result of blind chance or at the dictates of whim or greed of petty officials or plotting speculators. The RECORD AND GUIDE cherishes a deep and abiding faith in the future greatness of Philadelphia. It believes that it is destined to be one of the most attractive of American municipalities. It stands ready to aid in every way the fullest realization of the dreams of those who plan the City Beautiful. Hence these carefully pondered reflections. Let the growth of the city take care of the park boundaries. Centralization is the keynote to real municipal development.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

In Re Wood Block Paving.

EDITOR REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS' GUIDE.

Dear Sir: I am interested in seeing that you reprint, in your number of Oct. 12th, my opinions in regard to wood block paving. Since my letter appeared I have had criticisms of it from one or two persons, the most important being that with a tar grout, the tar would eventually rise to the surface and track into the house. In London this grouting is prevented from doing so by covering the surface of the pavement after the tar has been spread with a thin coating of Portland cement and rolling gravel into this. I have never seen any evidence of a nuisance having occurred by a tar grouting in London.

Yours very truly,

Clifford Richardson.

Competition for Architectural Designs of Small Houses.

In connection with its permanent exhibition of building materials on the second floor of the Builders' Exchange, 30-34 West Thirty-third street, New York City, the Building Trades Employers' Association announces an architectural competition. Designs are asked for a four-room house, to cost not more than $2,500, and for an eight-room house, to cost not more than $4,500. Walls may be of concrete block or of terra cotta block, in either case to be finished in cement stucco; or of hollow concrete block, plain, panelled or bush-hammered; or of monolithic construction; or stucco on lath.

As there are two classes, six prizes will be awarded—First prize, first class, $100; second class, $150. Second prize, first class, $50; second class, $75. Third prize, first class, $30; second class, $50.

By addressing the Association, full terms of the competition may be obtained. The prize-winning designs will be used in the construction of models which will be made a permanent exhibit.

The old "favored contractor" cry has been raised by disgruntled bidders in the matter of the Arch street paving, based on an alleged "joker" in the specifications, the effect of which it is contended will be to give the supplying of the block to the United States Wood Preserving Company and the supplying of the saturating or impregnating oil to the Barrett Manufacturing Company. The crux of the contention seems to be that the best obtainable block for paving purposes is cut and controlled by one of the concerns mentioned, while the most effective preserving oil is made and controlled by the other. This being the case the controversy is not likely to engage any considerable amount of public sympathy outside of the coterie of concerns directly interested. If the United States Wood Preserving Company is in a position to furnish a quality of block superior to that manufactured by rival concerns and the Barrett Manufacturing Company is able to furnish a preserving oil better adapted for the purpose of impregnation than other oils of the kind the public is fully prepared to endorse any clause in the specifications calculated to debar inferior substitutes. Raising the cry of "favored contractor" will not avail to change the popular attitude in a controversy the merits of which are so clearly with the men whose duty it was to frame these specifications. Edwin H. Vare, as the contractor for the Market street paving, used blocks furnished by the companies mentioned. The result is what is regarded by engineering experts as one of the best examples of wood block paving in the United States. If the "joker" made the theme of complaint in the present instance shall operate to furnish an equally acceptable pavement on Arch street, the masses will find it difficult to work up much sympathy for firms figuring as unsuccessful bidders.

Who reads The Record and Guide?

That's a fair question. It's a question every advertiser has the right to ask and a right to have answered. We have no use for the advertiser who "throws his money at the birds." This class of advertiser doesn't stay long when he does come in and as a rule isn't able to pay his bills when they reach him. The advertiser we cater to is the hard-headed, level-brained man of business—the fellow "who wants to know."

"Who reads The Record and Guide?"

In Philadelphia everybody, structurally speaking, who is anybody; outside of Philadelphia (extending north, south, east and west, this side of the Mississippi), architects, builders, contractors, city engineers, manufacturers, material and equipment men, projective owners, financiers, railroad men, town-builders, board of trade promoters, men of every class and kind who are interested in structural work above or below ground.

About seventy per cent. of these are subscribers

The others are honored with "sample" or "marked" copies because more or less directly concerned in important constructive enterprises. All are promising raw material for the advertiser with a proposition in the structural line.

It is the highly specialized nature of the circulation of THE RECORD AND GUIDE which gives it its peculiar and unique value as a medium.

Everything of a structural sort falls within the zone of our influence

If you doubt this try us out. Send along a test "ad." What we are asking is simply a chance to prove our claim that THE RECORD AND GUIDE "makes good."

"Grouch" Objections to Public Improvement.

The protest filed by a number of local horse owners against the use of a certain tar oil on an uptown street is one that should not be heeded until after the most careful investigation. There is observable a growing disposition upon the part of various fussybody organizations to file exceptions of one sort or another to about every move of the administration that spells intelligent municipal progress. The parkways met with the opposition of this element, wood block paving fell under their displeasure, public playgrounds incurred their august disapproval and now oiling the roadways comes in for the same whining disapprobation. We suppose that among the people back of this latest protest are a number of fogies and pull-backs who won't be really happy and self-satisfied until Philadelphia gets back to the old and obsolete method of cobble paving. Roadways are oiled elsewhere without kicking up a storm of protest and there is little or no reason to believe that the objections urged here are well founded. The contention that oiling the roads renders them dangerous for driving will sound to most ears a trifle far-fetched. When the Market street wood block was being laid the team owners were noisy in declarations that it would be impossible for horses to keep their feet on it. Since the paving has been completed, horses traverse it every day without accident. A good many of these hastily conceived protests against new ideas in paving and municipal development generally seem to be of the grouch order; that is, they are made by people with a propensity to kick without reference to either the timeliness or the merit of the underlying cause.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Was Pleased With "Trade Exhibit."

Dear Sir:

I have read your article on "Trade Exhibits" with genuine appreciation. You've got the right idea. Half the trade exhibits now running are so thoroughly tinctured with old foggyism that they are "exhibits" in name only. Trade exhibits should be advertised in the trade press so that people interested would know where to find them. The notion that a visiting buyer is going to hunt up an exhibit of which he has probably never heard savors of antiquated business methods. For business reasons do not use my name. I strongly endorse every line of your stand on Exhibit. More power to you!

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Dear Sir: Just glanced through your article on "Trade Exhibits." Good stuff. My compliments on the immense and noticeable improvement in THE RECORD AND GUIDE under its new management.

Dear Sir: THE RECORD AND GUIDE grows bigger and better all the time. Your last number contained more real "meat" of interest to the structural trades than many of the bigger papers in your field. Continue to stir them up.

What is the significance of the fact that a number of well-known builders are utilizing Electrical equipment in the houses they are building? Because they have learned by experience that such equipment hastens the sale and increases the value of their properties. It really means that the Philadelphia public now-a-days demands conveniences which can only be obtained by the use of Electricity.

Material and Equipment Notes

Tapestry brick has been described as bearing about the same relation to ordinary brick that arts and crafts furniture does to the gilt and velvet of the last century, or that burlap and bookbinder's linen do to shiny wall paper, which is merely another way of saying that tapestry brick appeals to people who have cultivated taste and are able to recognize the wide breach between the merely serviceable and utilitarian and the picturesque and artistic.
This brick is now made in all the soft shades and delicate tones of the finest Persian rugs.
To begin with, the colors are all soft and rich, nothing glaring, nothing pronounced, nothing suggesting extreme contrast. Starting from Indian red this brick is made in coppers, olive greens, purple browns, deep blues, brownish grays, creams, coffees, russets and tobacco browns, not to mention such delicate tints as rich old buffs, chamois and deep golden browns. They may be had as well in all of the intermediate shades, thus making possible structures of an almost fairy-like beauty and artistry. There are no polished finishes in tapestry brick to offend the canons of good taste. Roughness of texture and that dull finish which suggests the very atmosphere of monastic elegance is the prevailing mode. The brick is in the very highest degree artistic, is practically non-porous, and is burned to a hardness comparable almost to iron. Any brick maker can turn out colored brick. Tapestry brick is another medium. There is no coloring matter used in the genuine tapestry, the delicate shades and tints being the result of a skillful blending of the clays and the expert application of intense fire. It is to the ordinary colored brick what the real Daghestan is to commercial Brussels. Used in the construction of a house, this brick conveys to the exterior the charm, the distinction, the air of quiet taste and discrimination that marks the interior. It stamps the structure as distinctive and individual, yet this beautiful brick actually costs no more than many well made conventional bricks. Regarded from the angle of an investment the extra value with which it endows a house makes it almost as cheap as common brick. There are cheap imitations of the genuine tapestry brick, just as there are cheap imitations of the rare old rugs of the Orient, but no architect can be deceived by these crude, inartistic, and feebly fashioned substitutes. For the protection of the public the genuine article is stamped "Tapestry" on the brick itself and the name duly registered as the trade mark of the firm making it. The manufacturers, having devoted years of study to the effect capable of being produced by the skillful use of this structural medium, are prepared to take the question of selection up with architects and owners and to suggest combinations particularly adaptable to each individual case. The firm not only furnishes colored sketches showing pattern work and special bondings applicable to certain varieties of design, but where necessary, have their own masons lay up the actual bricks in different styles of bond and mortar joints until the right effect is obtained. Mr. S. B. Dobbs, 1218 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, is the sole agent for the genuine "Tapestry" clay product and will be pleased to show samples, color sketches and built-up patterns of this wonderful brick.

Some of the combinations on display at his offices are of a beauty and delicacy that compel the admiration of visitors possessing the artistic impulse.

The "Farquar" sanitary furnace is devised especially for heating residences and buildings where a continuous and regular heat is required. It is offered in open competition with the best steam and hot-water heating, with the claimed additional advantages that it maintains correct sanitary conditions indoors.
The manufacturers of the "Farquar" guarantee a change of air in a room 4 to 6 times an hour, without extra fuel and for every person upward of 2,500 feet per hour of fresh outdoor air, mildly heated, as the health authorities direct. The "Farquar" burns any fuel, produces no clinkers, has an automatic draft attachment and a self-closing door. It is said to be the easiest operated heater on the market, to be practically indestructible and to cost less for and require fewer repairs in service than anything of the kind before the public. L. I.
Edwards & Co., 14 South Eighteenth street, Philadelphia, handle the "Farquar" and announce that they will be pleased to furnish descriptive literature, estimates, etc., to parties interested.

The Champion Safety Lock Company,
Geneva, O., manufactures the "Monitor" sash lock, a sash-fastening device for which it claims advantages not possessed by any other contrivance of the kind. Made of very heavy gauge metal and carefully constructed, the Monitor lock is said to outwear everything of the kind on the market, being almost unbreakable. If the upper plate drops, the Monitor will pick it up from a lower point than any other, adjust the sashes perfectly, prevent all rattling or vibration and lock securely so that the sash cannot be opened from the outside.
The Monitor is made in two sizes.

"Bishopric" wall board is a material made of kiln-dried, dressed lath, imbedded in hot asphalt mastic, under pressure of 500 pounds to the square inch, surfaced with sized cardboard and cut at the factory into sheet 4x4 feet, $\frac{3}{8}$ of an inch in thickness for quick nailing. This makes a wall that is guaranteed not to shrink, warp, crack, flake or blister; that is clean, sanitary and odorless; that is proof against moisture, heat, cold or vermin, and that is ready the minute it is nailed to receive wall paper, paint, burlap or any other covering possible in the case of a plastered surface.
It is not unduly expensive, is carried in stock by the manufacturers in large quantities ready for immediate shipment and is carefully protected by patent right. It is made by the Mastic Wall Board and Roofing Company,
Cincinnati, O., who will forward samples, etc., on request. The same firm makes "Bishopric" sheathing, said to be quite as effective as lumber for this purpose and much less expensive.

Helm presses for making plain and ornamental cement brick and dry wall two-piece blocks are manufactured by the Queen City Brick Machine Company, 170 Bank Building, Traverse City, Mich. The company issues a free book that fully informs the uninitiated how to use this money-making machine and the cost of installing and operating it. The book contains a mass of valuable information concerning concrete and concrete products and details how many of the most successful men in this field found their first start on the road to success and fortune.

The Moss Mantel Company, Inc., 828 South Sixteenth street, Louisville, Ky., has been building mantels exclusively for more than 25 years. They build every style and design from the plain and inexpensive up to the most elaborate and costly. The company employs expert cabinetmakers, uses only carefully seasoned woods and finishes its products with the utmost care. As a result Voss mantels enjoy a high reputation in the trade. The company has a booklet, "Mantels for the Home," that fully covers the scope of its production in this time. A postal will bring it to persons interested.

J. W. Coulson & Co., 234 North Third street, Columbus, O., make a specialty of store front construction, the modern sort of store construction that is right up to the minute. This firm is supplying the store fronts for some of the biggest operations of the kind in the country and is reputed to be expert in this particular field. The firm's catalogue, E.800, illustrates many of the popular designs for up-to-date store fronts and furnishes other information of value to firms interested in this class of work.

The Sedgwick Machine Works, 128 Liberty street, New York City, manufactures dumb waiters, hand elevators, invalid lifts, trunk, carriage, sidewalk and freight elevators. Catalogues and estimates on request.

A circle-swing derrick, that is light in weight, speedy in operation, all malleable castings and with a capacity of from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds, that can be sold f. o. b. Chicago, for $35.00, with privilege of trial to responsible parties, ought to be a pretty attractive proposition. Such a derrick is made and advertised by Sasgan Bros., 2053-57 Racine avenue, Chicago, Ill., who issue a catalogue free to firms interested in this subject.

The feature about Amatite Roofing that will especially commend itself to men interested in roofing large industrial structures is the fact that this variety of roofing does not require painting, either at the time it is laid or thereafter. Amatite has a mineral surface embedded in pitch, with the result that it presents to the elements a strong, serviceable, pitch concrete exterior, able to stand the elements year after year, without repairs or painting. In price Amatite is no more expensive than the old-fashioned painted tin roof, and when painting and repairs are taken into consideration its cost is considerably less. Full information and free samples may be had from the makers, the Barrett Manufacturing Company, Land Title Building, Philadelphia.

The New York Blower Company, of Chicago, Ill., and Bucyrus, O., is the manufacturer of a device for purifying the air that is being installed in modern factory buildings as necessary to proper sanitary conditions. This device is known as the Peerless Air Washer, and is said to effectually remove the dust by moisture from the air pumped into the workrooms, while automatically regulating the humidity. The machine works in accordance with nature's own method and can be installed to meet the conditions in a building of any size or character. Emil A. Briner, 522 Lafayette Building, this city, is the local representative for the company.

Here, There and Everywhere

A ten-story structure of reinforced concrete with architectural stone trimmings, manganese spot brick, oak interior, marbleized fiber floors, 160 offices, each with fireproof vault, hot and cold water and running ice water and with a garden on the roof, is in process of construction at Huntington, W. Va. It is to be known as the Robson & Pritchard Building and is to cost complete about $300,000.

More than $30,000,000 was spent during 1909 on buildings of concrete construction.

Pennsylvania has 21 cement plants and produced 29,923,606 barrels of cement in 1909, valued at $14,746,755.

The Concrete Forms Co., of 55 Liberty street, New York, is introducing an arrangement of metal forms to take the place of the expensive timber false work necessary in monolithic concrete construction. A factory recently erected at South Elizabeth, N. J., with these patented forms was erected much more quickly and at much less expense than is usual in work of the kind. Ornamental walls, containing bas relief, medallions, conventional designs, etc., can, it is claimed, be made with these forms.

taining five large rooms and a bath on the first floor and two rooms on the second, have been designed and built recently by W. H. Parish, at Carnegie, a suburb of Pittsburg. All of them have modern plumbing and heating systems and cost complete less than $4,000 each.

The Open Shop Publicity Bureau, 34 West Thirty-third street, New York, is carrying on a campaign in favor of open shop conditions. The literature the bureau is sending out is well written and should prove effective.

The Tre-Ben Company, chartered recently at Brooklyn, N. Y., has for its officers, Geo. D. Benham, 1658 North Redfield street, Philadelphia, Pa., and Joseph C. Farrington and Albert C. Meierkle, of Brooklyn.

The Lackawanna Steel Company, 2 Rector street, New York, booked recently what is said to be the second largest order ever taken for sheet steel piling. The contract calls for 5,000 tons to be used by the United States Government in raising the battleship Maine.

Thomas Reilly, of 1616 Thompson street, this city, has been awarded the contract for the new St. John's Chapel, at Lafayette and Clermont avenues, Brooklyn. The new church will be built of lime-stone in place of the composition block originally decided on.

Charles B. Pond, treasurer of the Thompson-Starrett Company, 51 Wall street, New York, announces that the Board of Directors of this Company have declared the regular semi-annual dividend of four per cent. on its preferred stock, payable November 15.

F. B. Marsh, advertising man of the Edison Portland Cement Company, is doing a whole lot of effective work in the interest of this hustling young concern. A three-page advertisement in the booklet sent out by F. D. Lambie, president of the American Building Company, 299 Broadway, New York, describing the model cement house erected by him at Montclair, N. J., is one of Marsh's recent coups.

Plans are reported ready for the building of a trolley line between this city and West Chester, a distance of about twenty miles. Lewis Dalmas, with offices in the Morris Building, is president of the company.

Mayor Reyburn's plan to locate the projected new convention hall in Fairmount Park, is not approved by the Philadelphia Record, which says: "Although Mayor Reyburn now favors a location in Fairmount Park for the proposed convention hall, it is thought by many that to locate the building in so remote a section of the city and so far distant from the centre of activities is entirely wrong, and that a better location would be on the Parkway as near Broad street, as possible." THE RECORD AND GUIDE thinks the proper location would be on Broad street, almost anywhere south of Chestnut.

Big building improvements projected locally for the coming year include the annex to Temple College, at Broad and Brown streets, to cost $400,000; the Dropsie College, at Broad and York street, $250,000; a $100,000 synagogue for Adath Jeshurun congregation, at Broad and Diamond streets, and a $75,000 annex to the Kenneth Israel synagogue, on Broad street above Columbia avenue. In addition to these the $500,000 Phipps Institute for the Treatment and Cure of Tuberculosis, at Seventh and Lombard, will be under way next year and several large new buildings are to be erected by the University of Pennsylvania.

The Westlake Construction Co., of St. Louis, has been awarded the contract to build a Greater Reading Hotel, at Reading, Pa. All of the sub-contracts are to be awarded to Reading people.

Drawing comparisons between this and other cities, in a talk before the Civic Club, the other day, Chief Webster, of the Bureau of Surveys, said that since 1866 there have been taken out in this city 298,796 permits for buildings. There are now, he said, 358,796 buildings in this city, of which a little more than 83 per cent. are connected with sewers. In Paris he believed that there were 80,000 buildings of which 30,000 have no sewer connections.

Always foremost in manufacturing industries Philadelphia is shortly to have two plants for the manufacture of aeroplanes and other aircraft. Two concerns, formed for the purpose, have been incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware.

The first of these, incorporated October 15, has been formed by Philadelphians. It will be known as the American Aeroplane Manufacturing and Exhibition Company and ground will soon be broken in Holmesburg for the erection of a factory.

A second and larger company was incorporated at Dover, Del. It will be known as the International Automobile and Engine Co. The company's authorized capital on which it paid the State tax is $10,000,000.

Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., is to have a new building, to cost about $200,000, to be used for the Mechanical Engineering Department.

J. A. Brill, of the Brill Car Company, has offered $500 in prizes to members of the senior class of the Engineering Department, University of Pennsylvania, for the best thesis on, "The design for a light-weight car for city service." The first prize will consist of the J. A. Brill gold medal and $250. The second prize is $150, and the third, $100.

Paul Starrett, president of the Geo. A. Fuller Construction Company, holds bright views of the immediate future of the building business. He says the outlook is much improved. Within ten days his firm has booked six large contracts in various cities.

Who reads The Record and Guide?

That's a fair question. It's a question every advertiser has the right to ask and a right to have answered. We have no use for the advertiser who "throws his money at the birds." This class of advertiser doesn't stay long when he does come in and as a rule isn't able to pay his bills when they reach him. The advertiser we cater to is the hard-headed, level-brained man of business—the fellow "who wants to know."

"Who reads The Record and Guide?"

In Philadelphia everybody, structurally speaking, who is anybody; outside of Philadelphia (extending north, south, east and west, this side of the Mississippi), architects, builders, contractors, city engineers, manufacturers, material and equipment men, projective owners, financiers, railroad men, town-builders, board of trade promoters, men of every class and kind who are interested in structural work above or below ground.

About seventy per cent. of these are subscribers

The others are honored with "sample" or "marked" copies because more or less directly concerned in important constructive enterprises. All are promising raw material for the advertiser with a proposition in the structural line.

It is the highly specialized nature of the circulation of THE RECORD AND GUIDE which gives it its peculiar and unique value as a medium.

Everything of a structural sort falls within the zone of our influence

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Apathy of the Brick Men.

What is wrong with the brick interests of this country? Here is a great big industry, one producing a medium with many points of superiority over any other building medium yet discovered, boozing along in the underbrush of a foggy conservatism, while rival interests, such as cement, concrete and hollow tile make strides threatening its practical restriction. There is no scarcity of good advertising arguments in favor of the use of brick as a structural material. It is cheap, durable, fire-resisting, attractive, able to withstand acids and alkalis, subject to none of the miscalculations and disintegrations peculiar to concrete; can be set up without the supervision of high-priced engineers, and carries with it an element of certainty that is very often lacking in the mediums now rapidly superseding it. Why the brick men do not wake up to the opportunity that is theirs to get busy and present these arguments in a series of bold, clean, snappy and striking advertisements in the trade and magazine press of the country it is difficult for the lay observer to conceive. The cement men are among the largest, shrewdest and ablest advertisers of the country. They use every day in the year the newspapers, the trade press, the magazines and tons of well executed trade literature. From time to time they hold exhibitions here and there throughout the country, so managed as to direct public attention in a sharp and decisive way to their products. They are organized, progressive, enterprising and indefatigable, and they have forced the use of cement to a point at which it is not only taking the place of brick and of stone as a structural medium, but is superseding stone and steel for bridge work; stone, steel and timber for wharf and pier work, and all of these materials for important underground construction. That cement in the form of concrete, no matter how reinforced, is better than stone or brick, or a combination of these with structural steel for many of the purposes enumerated, is open to serious question. As we have remarked at the outset of these observations, there is no scarcity of argument with which to support the use of brick and of other mediums that cement is busily crowding out. That these arguments are not taken up and embodied into good advertising and trade literature shows an apathy on the part of the brick interests of the country as ill-advised as it is surprising.

Designing Hospital Wards.

A point of interest to architects is raised by Dr. W. Gilman Thompson in an article in The Century. In the construction of hospital buildings it has been the custom to have wards of considerable size and capable of housing many patients. This, Dr. Thompson points out, is a grave mistake. No hospital ward, in his judgment, should contain more than sixteen beds, and many should be much smaller, containing not more than four or five. In treating illness, environment is a question of signal importance. The patient suffering from insomnia should obviously not be placed next the patient suffering from delirium tremens, nor should the depressed neurasthenic be compelled to witness the death of the heart victim. The ideal condition is a series of small wards, where sufferers may be distributed according to their ailments and special needs. The large and more or less promiscuous wards now in vogue are not only wrong, but unfair to the patient, who has a right to expect at the hands of hospital authorities not merely decent treatment, but conditions favorable to the successful treatment of his malady—conditions not possible with wards in which sufferers of many kinds are placed in disagreeable and often fatal juxtaposition.

Personal Mention.

De Amond & Ashmead announce that they have formed a partnership with George Howard Bickley, formerly with Horace Trumbauer, and will continue the practice of architecture, with offices at 618 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

What is the significance of the fact that a number of well-known builders are utilizing Electrical equipment in the houses they are building? Because they have learned by experience that such equipment hastens the sale and increases the value of their properties. It really means that the Philadelphia public now-a-days demands conveniences which can only be obtained by the use of Electricity.

Material and Equipment Notes

Tapestry brick has been described as bearing about the same relation to ordinary brick that arts and crafts furniture does to the gilt and velvet of the last century, or that burlap and bookbinder's linen do to shiny wall paper, which is merely another way of saying that tapestry brick appeals to people who have cultivated taste and are able to recognize the wide breach between the merely serviceable and utilitarian and the picturesque and artistic. This brick is now made in all the soft shades and delicate tones of the finest Persian rugs. To begin with, the colors are all soft and rich, nothing glaring, nothing pronounced, nothing suggesting extreme contrast. Starting from Indian red this brick is made in coppers, olive greens, purple browns, deep blues, brownish grays, creams, coffees, russets and tobacco browns, not to mention such delicate tints as rich old buffs, chamois and deep golden browns. They may be had as well in all of the intermediate shades, thus making possible structures of an almost fairy-like beauty and artistry. There are no polished finishes in tapestry brick to offend the canons of good taste. Roughness of texture and that dull finish which suggests the very atmosphere of monastic elegance is the prevailing mode. The brick is in the very highest degree artistic, is practically non-porous, and is burned to a hardness comparable almost to iron. Any brick maker can turn out colored brick. Tapestry brick is another medium. There is no coloring matter used in the genuine tapestry, the delicate shades and tints being the result of a skillful blending of the clays and the expert application of intense fire. It is to the ordinary colored brick what the real Daghestan is to commercial Brussels. Used in the construction of a house, this brick conveys to the exterior the charm, the distinction, the air of quiet taste and discrimination that marks the interior. It stamps the structure as distinctive and individual, yet this beautiful brick actually costs no more than many well made conventional bricks. Regarded from the angle of an investment the extra value with which it endows a house makes it almost as cheap as common brick. There are cheap imitations of the genuine tapestry brick, just as there are cheap imitations of the rare old rugs of the Orient, but no architect can be deceived by these crude, inartistic, and feebly fashioned substitutes. For the protection of the public the genuine article is stamped "Tapestry" on the brick itself and the name duly registered as the trade mark of the firm making it. The manufacturers, having devoted years of study to the effect capable of being produced by the skillful use of this structural medium, are prepared to take the question of selection up with architects and owners and to suggest combinations particularly adaptable to each individual case. The firm not only furnishes colored sketches showing pattern work and special bondings applicable to certain varieties of design, but where necessary, have their own masons lay up the actual bricks in different styles of bond and mortar joints until the right effect is obtained. Mr. S. B. Dobbs, 1218 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, is the sole agent for the genuine "Tapestry" clay product and will be pleased to show samples, color sketches and built-up patterns of this wonderful brick. Some of the combinations on display at his offices are of a beauty and delicacy that compel the admiration of visitors possessing the artistic impulse.

The objections of sanitations to the common drinking cup used in schools, public fountains, playgrounds and places where children gather in large numbers has at last been met with a device that would seem to come as close to removing the disagreeable and dangerous features of the school cup as human ingenuity can come. This device is the Barrett Self-Closing Drinking Fountain, a faucet attachment, from which without direct lip contact the child can drink of a bubbling stream of clear filtered water. This fountain is being adopted in all of the big schools of the country, and should be installed in place of the contagion-spreading drinking cup everywhere. It is manufactured by the James Barrett Manufacturing Company, 48-50 Pearl street, Boston, Mass., who are prepared to send interesting descriptive literature to parties at interest.

HOW TO BOOM THE CITY.

Expert Tells Manufacturers They Must Buy Advertising.

Merchants and manufacturers of this city have been told that the opportunity to regain her position as the first city in the nation is at hand for Philadelphia, and that the method by which this may be accomplished is by advertising. The statement was made by Joseph Appel, general sales director of the John Wanamaker stores, at a meeting of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, at the Hotel Walton. In speaking on the subject of advertising Philadelphia Mr. Appel said in part:

"Philadelphia is the most American city, having a greater proportion of American-born and a smaller proportion of foreign-born than any other city in the United States. But being the typical American city carries with it the responsibility of becoming the best American city. Being a cultural and religious city, as we are, carries with it the obligation of making it a progressive and enlightened city.

"Being an industrial centre carries with it the obligation of making her products still more largely known, so that more people may enjoy them. The doctrine of noblesse oblige still holds. The greater our advantages, the greater our responsibilities. And now my proposition is just this: First, to advertise Philadelphia locally and nationally. To advertise Philadelphia as a city and for you manufacturers to advertise your products.

"Do you realize that a half a dozen stores in Philadelphia spend perhaps two million dollars a year in advertising, and yet you manufacturers, 16,000 in number, employing 250,000 skilled laborers, using $400,000,000 of raw materials and producing $700,000,000 of products annually, you 16,000 manufacturers, together with 1,000 more wholesale businesses, spend less than two millions a year in advertising. The comparison with other cities given to me from an accurate source is: New York spends $35,000,000 a year in advertising; Chicago, $18,000,000; Boston, $8,000,000, and Philadelphia, less than $2,000,000.

"But my proposition does not stop with your advertising. It includes the co-operation of our great newspapers, which are a Philadelphia product and depend for their livelihood upon Philadelphia. If you business men will spend some money with them and start advertising, with the great business and civic organizations back of you, you can go to our newspapers and demand that they set aside free a certain portion of their columns once, twice, three times a week, and perhaps daily, for the advertising of Philadelphia to Philadelphians, and to whomever will read the newspapers.

"This co-operation of business and civic clubs would mean that we would erect a great business building in Philadelphia, which would house all these clubs. It seemed a few years ago that the Manufacturers' Club would take the initiative in this. No matter who takes the lead, the thing to be done is to get together and to work for Philadelphia.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER.

Important Recommendations Considered by Local Institute of Architects at October Session.

The October and annual meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects was largely attended and very successful. Mr. Charles A. Ziegler, for the committee on Preservation of Historical Monuments, reported that the proffered assistance of the chapter in preparing plans for and supervising the restoration of Independence Hall and the designing and setting up of the ornamental lamps to be placed around Independence Square had been accepted by the city, and that his committee is now actively engaged with Chief McLaughlin, of the Electrical Bureau, in this work.

Mr. John H. Rankin, as chairman of the Committee on Competitions, directed attention to the fact that as a result of the labors of this committee, the programme of a number of competitions had been improved to the benefit of the profession and the public.

In an address delivered at the request of the chair, Mr. Frank Miles Day drew a graphic picture of the general improvement brought about throughout the country in the conditions governing competitions as a direct result of the work of the Institute.

Mr. Arnold H. Moses for the Committee on Biography and History stated that the history of the chapter upon which his committee had been at work would be ready for distribution within the near future.

The committee charged with receiving quarters for the chapter on the erection of a building for this purpose was ordered to continue its work.

Mr. Edward A. Crane reported that the committee of which he is the head was concluding arrangements for the annual dinner of the Chapter to be held November 11, at the rooms of the University Club.

After some discussion of the subject of the usual Architectural Exhibition a committee was appointed to confer with a committee representing the T Square Club, with a view to arranging for such an exhibit.

Mr. Milton B. Medary, Jr., strongly endorsed the recommendation offered in President Hewitt's address supporting the formation of a Philadelphia Society of Architects, with whom could be associated heads of other and allied societies interested in the arts and sciences. A committee was appointed to go into the question of organizing such a society.

Mr. D. Knickerbocker Boyd, chairman of the Committee on Public Information, presented a number of excellent suggestions considered in the work of that committee. One of these was that a fuller form of agreement be adopted as between architect and owner, not the brief perfunctory affair in use at present, but one setting forth in full and in detail the exact measure of responsibility attached to each in an entire operation. The other suggestion was that other chapters of the Institute be communicated with, advised of the work being done by the Committee on Public Information, of local chapter, and strongly urged to take up similar duties in their own communities.

Both suggestions were adopted. The election of officers resulted: William D. Hewitt, president; Jno. Hale Rankin, 1st vice-president; Horace Wells Sellers, secretary; Jno. P. B. Sinkler, librarian; Chas. L. Borie, Jr., treasurer; Executive Committee, D. Knickerbocker Boyd, Arnold H. Moses, Paul B. Cret, John Hale Rankin, Edward A. Crane, D. Knickerbocker Boyd, Chas. L. Borie, Jr., Charles A. Ziegler, Milton B. Medary, Jr., with W. D. Hewitt and Horace Wells Sellers, ex-officio, were selected delegates to represent the Philadelphia Chapter, at the convention of the Institute, to be held in San Francisco, January 17, 18, 19, 1911.

A City Planning Commission.

The twenty-second annual report of the City Parks Association, just issued, strongly emphasizes the need, here in Philadelphia, for the appointment of a city-planning commission like those already at work in other cities, to be composed of local architects and artists of the same calibre as Daniel H. Burnham, of Chicago; Frederick Law Olmstead, of Boston, and other men of the class now engaged in this work. The Association would have such a body work in co-operation with Director Stearns of the Department of Public Works and Chief Webster of the Bureau of Surveys, but would endow it with sufficient authority to insure the future growth of the city along lines of system, convenience and beauty, instead of after existing haphazard plans. The suggestion is a good one and will, we trust, commend itself to Mayor Reyburn. The fame of the Philadelphia architect is as widespread as that of the Philadelphia lawyer. We have here today within the shadow of the Mayor's office some of the finest minds in contemporary architectural affairs. Our artists are as famous abroad as at home. Why, with such material at hand to supervise the general trend of the City Beautiful, should we not avail ourselves of it? Let us have a city-planning commission, Mr. Mayor, composed of men whose views will command not merely local but national confidence. We have such men here. Let us make use of them.

Recent Trade Literature.

The J.-M. Roofing Salesman, a house organ issued by the H. W. Johns-Manville Company, 100 William street, New York, is one of the best publications of its kind that reaches this desk. It is bright, snappy, practical and well-informed.

The Trenton Potteries Company, of Trenton, N. J., a concern the fame of whose sanitary porcelain is widely recognized in the trade, sends out a little trade booklet that is a model of its kind. It is gossipy and entertaining as to text, exceedingly well printed and illustrated with excellent taste and discretion.

That G. M. Blackiston, who handles the advertising of the Berger Manufacturing Company, Canton, Ohio, is a live wire in his line is evidenced by the increased attractiveness of the advertising and printed matter sent out by this progressive concern. All of the ad matter bears the stamp of individuality—the kind of individuality that counts.

The N. & G. Taylor Company, of Philadelphia, manufacturers of tinplate, are preparing a number of clever advertising ideas to be used in the campaign of 1911. This fine old house has always been noted for the excellence of its product and maintains a commendable dignity in all of its advertising literature.

The Builder's Exchange Bulletin, issued by the Builder's Exchange of Baltimore, Md., bears the catch-line "An Organization Not for Profit: Every Dollar is Expended in Benefits to Its Members." This is the proper spirit.

The American Vault Company, 1 Alden place, Orange, N. J., issues a new catalog describing the "American" type of reinforced concrete burial vault. This vault has a number of new features that make it highly desirable as a place for interment.

More or Less Personal

Price & McLanahan, of this city, are the architects for the new Clarendon Hotel, now in process of erection, at Seabreeze, on the Florida East Coast. The Clarendon represents a layout of $275,000 and will contain 1,250,000 brick, 81,000 cubic feet of concrete and 185,000 pounds of structural steel. Dr. E. S. Potter, of this city, is interested.

J. Augustine Smith, former sales manager of the Ideal Concrete Machinery Company, of South Bend, Ind., is no longer with this company. Geo. B. Hopkins is advanced to the office of secretary and M. Wetzstein, president of the company, succeeds, for the time, to Mr. Smith's duties as sales manager.

Charles M. Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, denies as absurd the rumor that big steel interests are at work to wrest control of the local shipbuilding plant from the Cramps. The story of a Cement Trust engineered by the steel interests is classed as of equal absurdity.

An Italian, Annibale Guerini, of Middleboro, Mass., is manufacturing cement shingles, to be used in towns in Italy where earthquakes are troublesome.

The Bethlehem Cement and Construction Company, Bethlehem, Pa., has installed a cement brick machine with a capacity of 6,000 brick daily. C. J. Weippert, of Allentown, is president, James W. Foltz, vice-president and manager, and G. W. Richline, secretary and treasurer.

F. R. Hansell, J. A. MacPeak, and I. C. Close, of Camden, are the incorporators of the Philadelphia Sand-Lime Brick Company, recently chartered in Camden, N. J., with a capital stock of $100,000.

Daniel A. Leonard is president of the Siegart Beam Co., of Baltimore, now negotiating for a site for a concrete plant with an annual output of 100,000 beams.

A. F. Sheehan has been appointed Eastern district sales manager for the Pressed Steel Radiator Company of America, with offices in the Fourth Avenue Building, New York.

H. Hale Marshall, a well-known Philadelphia engineer, is now connected in a responsible capacity with the W. G. Cornell Company, heating, ventilating and illuminating engineers, Everett Building, Union Square, New York City.

M. S. Baldwin, general advertising manager of the Otis Elevator Company, is an enthusiastic motorist. He uses a Sultanette, made by the Sultan Motor Company, in which the Otis concern is reported heavily interested.

W. P. Corbett, Eastern sales manager of the American Alsen Portland Cement Company, was a recent visitor to Philadelphia. Mr. Corbett reports the spring outlook in the cement trade highly encouraging.

Competition Conducted by the Building Trades Employers' Association of New York.

Design to be for single or detached buildings providing the following accommodations:

First—Four rooms—one or one and one-half stories high, cost not to exceed $2,500.

Second—Eight rooms two or two and one-half stories high, cost not to exceed $4,500.

The number of rooms stated does not include bathrooms, although provisions in each design must be made for the same.

A cellar is to be provided for in each design, either under part or whole of the house.

Walls of the buildings may be of concrete blocks or terra cotta blocks, in either case to be finished with cement stucco or hollow concrete blocks of plain, paneled or bush-hammered face—or they may be of monolithic construction—or lath, finished with cement stucco.

Wooden floor joists and roof timbers may be used; roof coverings may be of cement, tiles, slate, shingles or ready roofing. Chimneys either brick, concrete or stone; cornices, porch rails and other details of wood or concrete, but whatever material is used, simplicity of design is suggested.

Plumbing, water supply and heating system and electric wiring to be provided for, but the costs stated above are not to include the same.

Each design must show plans of all stories above the cellar, three elevations and a section, all at the scale of one-quarter inch per foot. The competitor may substitute a perspective and one elevation for the three elevations if he so desires.

Each design must be accompanied by a brief typewritten specification, also a statement containing cubical contents and itemized cost of materials and labor.

This competition is to be conducted anonymously; therefore, no cipher, nom de plume, identifying mark or name shall appear on any drawing or wrapper, but each drawing shall be accompanied by a card, bearing the name and address of its author sealed in a plain envelope and addressed to the Committee on Competition, Building Trades Employers' Association, 34 West Thirty-third street, New York City.

There being two classes, prizes will be awarded as follows: First prize—First class, $100; second class, $150; second prize, $50 and $75; third prize, $30 and $50.

For each additional design awarded honorable mention, not to exceed three in number in each class—$20 to be paid.

Any competitor may submit as many designs in one or more classes as he may choose, but all such designs must be enclosed together, and must contain a plain envelope and card as provided for above.

All designs to be submitted on or before December 1, 1910.

The committee to judge the designs submitted will be: William A. Boring, Donn Barber and Grosvenor Atterbury.

A toilet paper cabinet that is an ornament to the room in which it is placed, made of high-grade pressed steel, finished in nickel, seamless in construction and with rounded corners. This cabinet has no complicated interior mechanism to get out of order, can be refilled quickly and easily, and carries 1,000 sheets at a filling. The beauty of the cabinet may be inferred from the fact that it has been adopted in all of the Government and most of the fine residence buildings throughout the United States. Manufactured by the A. P. W. Paper Company, North End Building, Albany, N. Y.

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Entered at the Post Office at Philadelphia as Second Class Matter.

THE DOCTRINE OF QUID PRO QUO.

In last week's issue of the RECORD AND GUIDE space was given to an account of the proceedings at a meeting of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association at the Hotel Walton, at which Mr. Joseph Appell, general sales director of the John Wanamaker stores and one of the ablest advertising men in the country, was the principal speaker. Mr. Appell said in part:

"Philadelphia is the most American city, having a greater proportion of American-born and a smaller proportion of foreign-born than any other city in the United States. But being the typical American city carries with it the responsibility of becoming the best American city. Being a cultural and religious city, as we are, carries with it the obligation of making it a progressive and enlightened city.

"Being an industrial center carries with it the obligation of making her products still more largely known, so that more people may enjoy them. The doctrine of noblesse oblige still holds. The greater our advantages the greater our responsibilities. And now my proposition is just this: First, to advertise

Philadelphia locally and nationally. To advertise Philadelphia as a city and for you manufacturers to advertise your products.

"Do you realize that a half dozen stores in Philadelphia spend perhaps two million dollars a year in advertising, and yet you manufacturers, 16,000 in number, employing 250,000 skilled laborers, using $400,000,000 of raw materials and producing $700,000,000 of products annually, you 16,000 manufacturers, together with 1,000 more wholesale businesses, spend less than two millions a year in advertising. The comparison with other cities given to me from an accurate source is: New York spends $35,000,000 a year in advertising; Chicago, $18,000,000; Boston, $8,000,000, and Philadelphia, less than $2,000,000."

The crux of Mr. Appell's argument is that Philadelphia is to a great extent lacking in the spirit of civic pride which obtains in other cities. In the structural field, at least, we know this charge to be well-founded. Take the RECORD AND GUIDE as a concrete example. Here is the only paper devoted exclusively to the structural trades in the entire State of Pennsylvania; a paper with twenty-five years of honorable business dealing behind it; an intelligent conception of its obligation to advertiser, subscriber, and the interests it aims to serve; a paper capably edited, widely circulated, and of real and positive value to its advertisers as scores of appreciative letters on file at this office go to prove. Issued from any of the hustling Western cities in which the "home town" sentiment is a living factor this paper would carry the card of every structural, material and equipment concern in its immediate field. It would probably be compelled to get out a sixty-page number every week to accommodate the influx of "home" business. Here in Philadelphia, the home of the biggest concerns in the trade, the RECORD AND GUIDE finds itself the subject of flattering remark, honeyed commendation, outspoken approval, but—! Trade papers are supported by their advertisers. They are given their character, tone and position in the field to which they dedicate their activities by the class and volume of the advertising support extended them.

They are made great or little, important or insignificant, commanding or ordinary in exact ratio to the measure of support they receive from the interests to which they cater. The RECORD AND GUIDE should have the advertising of every important structural trade concern in Pennsylvania to the end that its publishers might be enabled to develop it into the representative relation it should occupy to its field. Be pleased to understand this is not to be regarded as an argument in favor of spending money on a sheer "civic pride" basis. The RECORD AND GUIDE asks no advertiser to put money into this publication without hope of a reasonable return. But we do think with Mr. Appell that, other conditions being equal, Philadelphia and Pennsylvania manufacturers should show some consideration for the home trade paper, more particularly so, when, as in the present instance there happens to be but one such paper in the field. If a convention of any structural interests comes to Philadelphia the RECORD AND GUIDE is expected to get out and cover it, take care of the local manufacturers represented in bang-up style, boom Philadelphia as a buying center until the cows come home, see that outside buyers are given space in the personal gossip incident to such a gathering, and expend money, time and brains and space to make the event a success. And yet the self-same manufacturing interests who ask all this when approached upon the subject of advertising talk about exhausted appropriations, the futility of advertising in a field "completely covered by the home office," the necessity for using the money "in Western and Southern publications," etc., etc. We believe in Philadelphia. We also believe in reciprocity. What Philadelphia industries need is a little light on the doctrine of quid pro quo.

Material and Equipment Notes

It is the proud boast of the Royal Ventilator Company, 415 Locust street, this city, that its business has been built up by satisfied architects and patrons. This house manufactures ventilators not "as a side line," like most of the advertising concerns in its field, but as a business, and it claims to be able to furnish better ventilators for the money than any other house in the trade. The strong point of the Royal ventilator is the sharpened bottom cone; this and the double deflector. The result is a ventilator that exhausts more air per minute and one that offers the least resistance to natural or forced draft. The Royal is made in every size and shape to suit every condition. Round, square, rectangular, glass and metal top, of galvanized iron, charcoal iron and cold rolled copper. In a word the Royal is the best. A postcard will bring a booklet issued by the Royal company, entitled "Ventilation by the Royal System," which contains a mass of carefully collected and entertainingly written information upon the general subject of ventilation. A copy of this booklet should be in the hands of every architect. It contains illustrations of important buildings throughout the country in which the Royal is the accepted type of ventilator.

The Webster Air Washer, manufactured by Warren Webster & Co., Camden, N. J., is not only simple in construction, but most effective in operation, removing from the air about 98 per cent. of all dust, dirt and foreign matter. In one installation thirty-five cubic feet of dirt are removed each week. The spray device, a feature of the Webster Washer, is self-cleaning and non-clogging. Persons interested will find full descriptive data in Booklet 6-A, issued by this company.

In the matter of roofing specialties the Mewrer products enjoy an enviable reputation, based on years of excellent service and the maintenance of a high standard of quality. In tinplate, metal Spanish tile, unique metal slate and "Anchor" ventilators the output of Every up-to-date real estate man, now-a-days, knows that the properties he offers for rent or for sale, whether they be dwellings or places of business must be equipped for the use of Electricity. Every prospective tenant now-a-days has a right to insist upon such equipment before signing a lease.

Remember, "If it isn't Electric, it isn't Modern!"

this concern has few equals. The company issues a handbook of metal roofing specialties that should be in the hands of every architect and builder. Address Mewrer Bros. Company, 575 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Thomas Maddock's Sons Company, Trenton, N. J., have been manufacturing vitreous china earthenware for over half a century and rank high in the trade. The company's product embraces a full line of sanitary earthenware, such as closets, lavatories, bathtubs, drinking fountains, etc. Catalogue on request.

The Ideal Sash Ventilator is said to be the neatest, most effective and inconspicuous device for supplying pure fresh air known. It operates wholly by natural means, giving an adequate amount of air without the dirt, dust and insects. It is practically indispensable in offices, homes, schools, etc. Details, prices, etc., on request. Address Ideal Manufacturing Company, Erie, Pa.

An office directory that will hold the names of all tenants in a modern office building, in neat and readable form, and that admit of changes whenever necessary, is the Changeable Letter Directory, manufactured by the United States Changeable Sign Company, 3 West Twenty-ninth street, New York City. The most prominent office buildings, hotels, clubs and fraternal organizations in the country are using these directories. Architects specifying this board save a considerable item, while giving their clients perfect and lasting satisfaction.

The Richter Manufacturing Company, 20 Franklin avenue, Tenaflly, N. J., manufacture wall coverings of a high grade of durability and attractiveness. Their product is known as "Tapestrole" burlaps and canvases. Architects, builders, decorators and owners who have used these products highly commend them. Illustrated booklet and samples on request.

Janney, Steinmetz & Co., of this city and New York, are specialists in the manufacture of gasoline storage outfits for the equipment of garages, motorboats, etc. Welded steel seamless tanks, carrying from 55 to 110 gallons, direct lift and long distance are some of the strong features of the Janney-Steinmetz system. A postcard request will bring to persons interested the firm's big and beautifully illustrated catalogue.

A frostproof closet is a necessity, the value of which requires no demonstration. One of the simplest in construction, and at the same time one of the most efficient and durable devices of the kind, is the Vogel Closet, manufactured by the Joseph A. Vogel Company, Wilmington, Del. This closet has no elaborate mechanism to get cranky and go out of order, requires no pit, carries but one small bib washer below the floor, and is absolutely guaranteed not to freeze.

To the householder or home builder who wants the best, or who, in making improvements, wants to take a step that will solve the boiler question in his home for all time, the Wilhelmi Copper Range Boiler is the proper thing. Here is a boiler built of the best lake copper throughout, reinforced internally by six rings of brass—rendering collapse or structural weakening impossible—tested to a working pressure of 100 pounds, and absolutely guaranteed in every way. This boiler is manufactured by the Hayes Manufacturing Company, of Paterson, N. J., who will forward catalogue on request.

The Crandon Manufacturing Company, Belows Falls, Vt., make what is known as the Crandon Automatic Thermostat Damper Regulator. This device automatically regulates the dampers and drafts, adjusts itself to every variation of weather, insures evenness of temperature throughout the house, and does away entirely with the annoying duty of looking after this phase of home heating. It is not expensive, is easy to install, is simple in construction and dependable. The company has some interesting descriptive literature which it wants to place before furnace men, architects and heating and ventilating engineers.

Recommended Changes as a Result of Conferences Between Builders and Architects.

After a number of conferences between committees representing the Master Builders' Exchange, of this city, and the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects it has been agreed:

That plans be drawn to scale of not less than one-eighth inch to one foot.

Where party walls are used, that a clause be inserted in the specifications requiring that such walls, including measurer's and other costs be borne by the owner.

That wells or cisterns not in evidence or not noted on plans or clearly called for in specifications be considered as extra and paid for as such.

That information relating to proposals be supplied to sub-contractor by the general contractor and that inquiries regarding plans, etc., be sent by the general contractor to the architect.

That the depth of all foundation walls be plainly marked on the plans, changes requiring greater depth or additional excavation to be paid for as extra work at a price to be agreed upon before the work is begun.

That where it is evident that the soil is rocky and blasting will be a feature of the work this fact shall be noted in the specifications. That a similar course be pursued in plumbing where in excess of ordinary.

That plans shall be fully completed before being placed in the hands of contractors and that ample time be allowed for making up estimates.

That in cases where an apparent disagreement between plans and specifications comes to light, the attention of the architect shall be called to the matter and the contractor notified of his decision.

That where walls are to be furred this fact shall be mentioned in the specifications and noted on the plans.

That all partitions are to be plainly marked as to thickness required and material to be used.

That where partitions on one floor are to be the same as those on another floor and it is considered unnecessary to draw them in, the plans shall be clearly and conspicuously lettered "partitions same as — floor."

That the detail construction of corridor partitions in office buildings, etc., be either shown on scale drawings or so specified as to fully inform the contractor touching the work required to be done.

All of these recommendations are eminently sensible and well-advised. Stated as a general proposition there should be a concert of effort on the part of architects to see that everything in plans and specifications be made perfectly plain, clear and understandable. An immense percentage of the disagreements incident to construction work could be avoided by the exercise of a little extra attention on the part of draftsmen to these minor details. Mistakes, in the construction field, are always costly. For this reason, if no other, the effort of the builders and the men who furnish the plans, to arrive at a clearer understanding is in the highest degree commendable. The changes here noted are said to be preliminary to other and more important changes still under consideration.

More or Less Personal

The consensus of opinion in the cement trade is that the entrance of J. P. Morgan into the field will help rather than hurt existing conditions. With the manufacturers' rightful profit cut in half and the dealer reduced to a margin of five cents a barrel, the influence of a business executive of the Morgan calibre, it is figured, cannot prove other than helpful.

The Harbinson-Walker Refractories Company has a new chief engineer in the person of Mr. Kenneth Seaver.

F. W. Whiteman, of this city; S. Deyer and H. Peck, of Newark, N. J., are incorporators under the laws of New Jersey of a new lumber company capitalized at $50,000.

Samuel M. Hildreth has been appointed secretary and general sales manager of the Ideal Automatic Manufacturing Company, 125 Watts street, New York City.

E. E. Boyer, of Columbus, O., has opened an office at 242 Fourth avenue, New York, in the interest of the E. A. Ebinger Company, of Columbus, O. The Ebinger company manufacture a line of sanitary appliances for schools and public buildings and has an extensive plant.

John I. Rogers, formerly with the Midvale Steel Company, of this city, has opened offices in the City Investing Building, 165 Broadway, New York, where he will take up consultation practice and general iron and steel engineering.

W. C. McAdoo, former representative of the Kote Paint Company, of this city, is now general agent and manager of the paint department of the Schoellkopf, Hartford & Hanna Company, 30 Church street, New York City.

Warren Webster & Co., of Camden, N. J., have had published in pamphlet form the lecture of William G. Scion on "Ventilation and Its Relation to Health." Copies may be had on request.

A feature of the forthcoming New York Cement Show to be held at Madison Square Garden, December 16 to 20, will be a series of timely and authoritative lectures. Rudolph P. Miller, Superintendent of Buildings, of New York City, will speak on "Fire-proof Materials;" Calvin Tompkins, Commissioner of Docks and Terminals, New York City, on "Transportation Terminals;" Director Logan W. Page, of the Bureau of Roads, Department of Agriculture, on "Rural Highways," and C. P. Goodrich, consulting engineer of the City of New York, on "Important Reinforced Concrete Structures."

F. Irving Fletcher is in charge of the publicity department of the Thompson-Starrett Company. Mr. Fletcher is an Englishman, but a first-class judge of advertising media and one of the cleverest constructors of structural advertising copy that the old country has ever sent across. His advertisements for the Thompson-Starrett concern are of the "live-wire" variety.

Frank Miles Day, Rankin, Kellogg & Crane, and Kelsey & Crett, are reported to be Philadelphia competitors for the Department of State building to be erected in Washington, D. C., under the supervision of Mr. J. Knox Taylor.

The New Jersey Terra Cotta Company, Singer Building, New York City, is supplying the architectural terra cotta for the new Vanderbilt Hotel, to be erected at Thirty-fourth street and Park avenue, New York. The contract is one of the largest terra cotta orders ever placed in the East.

Another live-wire advertising man who sees the value of trade journal advertising, is W. R. Fox, president of the Fox Typewriter Company, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who is putting out an offer to contractors and builders, in the industrial trade press that should prove a strong puller. Mr. Fox makes a first-class typewriting machine and offers builders and contractors a most attractive proposition.

Dodge, Day & Zimmerman, of this city, have an unusually attractive page display in the Engineering Record of November 5, illustrating the new plant of the United States Light and Heating Company, designed by this firm and erected under their supervision at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The magnificent new building of the Curtis Publishing Company, now approaching completion, at Sixth and Walnut streets, this city, was designed and the construction supervised under the direction of Frank C. Roberts & Co., and Edgar V. Seeler, architects and engineers. Doyle & Co. are the contractors. The structural steel work involved was made and erected by the American Bridge Company, of New York, and the reinforced concrete floor and roof slabs by the Roebling Construction Company, of Trenton, N. J.

The seventh annual convention of the American Road Builders Association will be held at the German House, Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 6, 7, 8 and 9. The headquarters of the association are at 150 Nassau street, New York.

John McNeal, former City Engineer and Commissioner of Highways at Easton, Pa., has been appointed City Engineer of Columbia, S. C., effective December 5.

The Scofield Engineering Company, Arcade Building, this city, is authority for the statement that the Penn Bridge Company, of Beaver Falls, Pa., has been awarded the contract for the bridge to be erected over the Susquehanna river between Plymouth and Hanover. The successful bid was $376,973.

John Mack's Barber Asphalt Paving Company is the successful bidder on a big batch of improved paving in the Bronx district, New York City.

Albert E. Westover, of this city, is the consulting architect of the new Keith's Theatre to be erected at Toledo, O.

Here, There and Everywhere

Architectural terra cotta and terra cotta block is in for a boom. It is beginning to dawn upon builders that this medium is one of the most inexpensive, fireproof, vermin-proof and sanitary building mediums to be had.

A gentleman named Brooks is saying some very damaging things regarding reinforced concrete construction. We know what concrete construction is. Who is Brooks?

Jack Brothers, New York, furnished over 60,000 gallons of paint for use on the new terminal station of the Pennsylvania Railroad at New York City.

Manufacturer Thomas R. Devlin, of the Brohard and Devlin Manufacturing Companies of Philadelphia, entertained the members of the Foundrymen's Association at the Manufacturers' Club the other night with a highly entertaining talk about his recent trip abroad. Mr. Devlin is a witty and ready talker, and has the faculty of the raconteur.

A movement has been set afoot in London to secure the reading of simpler and more useful papers before engineering organizations. The complaint is made that many of the papers read by engineers are so overburdened with technical phrases and "shop" talk of a kind incomprehensible to laymen as to be practically worthless. Engineers are to be asked to reduce papers to be read before builders to clear and easily intelligible English, leaving out all technical and professional gibberish.

In a recent voting contest participated in by architects and architectural students these were returned as the ten most beautiful buildings in the United States: The Capitol and the Congressional Library, at Washington; the Public Library and Trinity Church, in Boston; Columbia Library, Trinity Church, St. Patrick's Cathedral, the City Hall and Madison Square Garden, in New York, and the Vanderbilt residence, Biltmore, in North Carolina. It will be noticed that not a word is mentioned about anything in Philadelphia or Pennsylvania. THE RECORD AND GUIDE would be glad to have the opinion of some of our local architects on buildings here that may be compared favorably with certain of the grandiose and over-elaborate structures mentioned. In our own judgment, we have a number of buildings quite as beautiful as many of those favored.

Announcement is made that the Government will receive plans until December 30 for erecting buildings for the Departments of State, Justice and Commerce and Labor at Washington, D. C. These structures are to cost $2,200,000, $1,900,000 and $3,650,000 respectively. Architects of New York, Washington, Buffalo, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore and other cities are invited to submit competitive plans. The State Department building will be three stories; ground area, 72,000 square feet; 325 rooms, including state dining room, two reception rooms and international conference room, occupying 6,000 square feet of floor space; cost, $2,200,000. Department of Justice building will be in three stories; ground area, 57,600 square feet; 225 rooms, including law library, which, with adjacent reading room, will have combined floor space of 7,500 square feet; main sackroom on mezzanine floor with 12,000 linear feet of bookshelves; cost, $1,900,000. Commerce and Labor building will be five stories and basement; ground area, 90,000 square feet; 450 rooms, including aquarium for Bureau of Fisheries, occupying 28,000 square feet of space, and department for Census Bureau, occupying 75,000 square feet of floor space; cost, $3,650,000. Plans limit height of exterior orders to forty-five feet, including columns and entablatures. James Knox Taylor, Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., has general supervision of Government buildings construction.

SPLENDID NEW KANSAS CITY FREIGHT STATION.

Kansas City has been coming to the front for a number of years and long ago took her place among the leading cities of the country. It is one of the most important railroad centers of the Middle West, all of which is well attested by the railroad improvements which have taken place there.

Concrete and every other improved method of modern conception have entered into the building improvements in Kansas City, as they have in every other progressive city.

Recently the contract was let by the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad for a splendid new freight station in Kansas City, to take care of the constantly increasing freight traffic, inbound and outbound, which had to be handled. H. T. Hawk, architect for the Rock Island lines, drafted the plans for the new station. Following other experiences in reinforced concrete building construction, he specified Ferro-Lithic plates manufactured by the Berger Manufacturing Company, of Canton, O. This Ferro-Lithic plate consists of dove-tailed cross-ribbed steel sheets which act both as form and reinforcement. The concrete is applied on the upper side, while a good plastering surface remains on the lower side.

This construction is to be used for the ceiling of the second floor of the new station which will be used by the office force. The building is under course of construction, the contractors being George B. Swift & Co., of Chicago.

As the result of this step in concrete construction taken by the Rock Island Lines' chief architect, it is expected that hereafter all similar buildings erected by the railroad along its route will include specifications for Ferro-Lithic. The Kansas City freight station is planned as a model in up-to-date railroad building construction and an object to the Middle West.

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Entered at the Post Office at Philadelphia as Second Class Matter.

An Important Departure.

With this issue the Builders' Guide drops from its columns the long and tedious list of realty transfers, which for the past twenty-five years has been one of its features. When the Guide initiated the custom of publishing this list a quarter of a century ago, the feature possessed an interest for investors and real estate men that for years gave it a peculiar and unique value. The copying of this feature by the dailies, along with the growing practice of concealing the consideration under the term "nominal," has so undermined the importance of this feature, statistically and otherwise, as to virtually strip it of all real value. For some time past the management of the Guide has been giving careful consideration to the question of the wisdom of abandoning this weekly list of transfers. The matter has been taken up with subscribers and advertisers, whose interests were most likely to be affected by the proposed change, and we are happy to be able to announce that the consensus of opinion thus obtained agrees with our own view, that the space thus employed can be more effectively utilized for "live" matter of an architectural structural and engineering news interest.

The relief we experience at being able to throw down the burden of these dead pages can be but dimly imagined. The new management of The Guide feels like some journalistic Sinbad, suddenly divested of a particularly burdensome and tenacious Old Man of the Sea. We feel rid of an incubus, free to grow, to improve and to expand into what we aim to become—a structural and architectural trade paper, worthy of the prestige of Philadelphia and of Pennsylvania as trade and manufacturing centers, and of our own long-neglected opportunities as the one and only organ of the building trades in this important field.

In counting confidently upon the hearty support of the big structural and material interests in our home city and State, we do so with the fullest understanding of the necessity imposed upon us to deserve this support.

We propose to give to Philadelphia a trade paper worthy of her position as an important structural center, a paper fit to compare with the ablest in its field.

This must not be taken, however to imply that The Guide is to be local in its interests. Nothing could be further removed from our plans. Under the present management The Guide is to be extended to cover as nearly as practicable that great, rich expanse of territory stretching from Maine to the Gulf States this side of the Mississippi. It is to be Philadelphian only in the pride natural to such a date line.

The dropping of these dry, tedious and uninteresting transfers is but one of the many improvements the new management have in view. The nature of these and the precise hour at which they may be expected to eventuate is our secret.

Watch us grow!

EDITORIAL

We take pleasure in presenting to our readers in this number an article by Mr. Maurice F. Benton, assistant secretary of the Land Title and Trust Company, of this city, on the subject, "The Combination vs. the Exclusive Bank or Trust Company Building." Mr. Benton's extensive experience as a trust company official and modern building manager has been such as to endow him with a special equipment for dealing authoritatively with this particular phase of banking economy. The facts, figures and details of method and system embodied in his article should give it a unique value to corporation heads contemplating this form of building investment. Mr. Benton, as a bank official, naturally regards his theme from the angle of the banker. His facts, however, are so applicable to the subject generally, and so clearly and forcibly presented, that this circumstance, we feel sure, will detract but little from their interest to investors outside of the immediate banking zone.

The soft-coal nuisance in this city has at last found its way to something approximating official notice. To be sure, electrification of the local steam passenger railroads is still a dream of the very remote beyond. Nevertheless, official notice that there is such an evil as the smoke nuisance, and that this evil exercises a depressing effect upon property values, both as regards their renting and selling utility, is to be found in the finding of the assessors of realty that certain property in West Philadelphia has materially depreciated because of this evil. Adjoining and in close proximity to one of the yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad in West Philadelphia is a group of fine residence properties upon which the board has been moved to reduce assessments, owing to their undesirability, whether for sale or rent. These properties are blackened and begrimed by the continuous smoking of the locomotives entering and leaving this yard, and are difficult to rent because of the constant poisoning of the atmosphere by the fumes of the engine smoke pervading the vicinity day and night. Whether the public attention drawn to this evil as a result of the action of the realty assessors will bear fruit in the shape of a campaign for the electrification of local steam roads remains to be seen. The subject is a living issue in other sections of the country. But then, as we are irresistibly reminded in more ways than one, Philadelphia is not infallibly to be judged by "the rest of the country."

The importance of the forthcoming Cement Show cannot be overestimated. Great as has been the growth of the use of cement as a structural medium, capable of the widest range of practical application, this material is still, to some extent, in its infancy. Originally classed in the same category with mortar as a binder, showing qualities of durability and adaptableness commending it in certain limited fields of constructive work, cement has developed and evolved, and disclosed new and unsuspected phases of utility, until to-day, in one or another of its forms, it bids fair to supersede all other mediums as a material for many classes of structural activity. As tile or block, it is in the hands of intelligent builders producing structures that are not only models of architectural skill, but examples of sanitary construction and rational fireproofing, at an outlay considerably below that necessitated by the brick and stone structures of an older era. As monolithic concrete, steel reinforced, it is producing commercial buildings that amount to a revolution in earlier building methods. Buildings produced by the use of this medium are practically fireproof, absolutely vermin-proof, attractive architecturally, durable as the best brick, and, if anything, a trifle more reasonable as to cost. Until recently the impression obtained that monolithic concrete could not be used for fine residential structures because of the absence of ornamentation common to structures of the kind. This drawback having disappeared, along with others prejudicial to the use of concrete, the cement residence is now almost as common as stucco. Architectural ornamentation is now done in cement and in terra cotta as effectively as in another day it used to be done in stone and in iron. It is possible now to build a pretentious residence of concrete which shall be as attractive architecturally as a house in any of the older mediums. All of these evolutions will enjoy intelligent exposition at the coming show. And in addition, Mr. Thomas A. Edison will have on hand for demonstration his much talked-about "Workingman's Home." After years of laboratory research and experiment, Mr. Edison has evolved a set of moulds and a constituency of concrete which will make possible the pouring of a complete house in six hours. These moulds are so arranged as to admit of a wide range in the matter of architectural effect, can be sold at a price well within the reach of the average contractor, are practically indestructible, and will make possible the erection at a cost approximating $1,800—ground and all—a house such as the workingman would or dinarily be required to pay at least $4,000 to own.

Mr. Edison promises to be on hand in person to demonstrate the use of these moulds. Every cement concern of any importance in the country will be represented by an exhibit, all of the manufacturing interests producing tools, implements, reinforcing material, machinery, moulds or other devices used in cement construction will be similarly commissioned. And to cap the climax, Sousa will be there with his band. Taken by and large, it will be a great show—the greatest thing in the cement line that has yet happened—so great that, when the next event of the kind is to be pulled off, we shall ask that it be held in Philadelphia. As the greatest manufacturing city in the greatest manufacturing State in the Union, and as the home office of many of the most important cement-producing concerns to be found on the map, Philadelphia has some claim to the next show. In the meantime, let us boom this one, as it deserves. Present indications favor the view that it is destined to be the greatest thing that has ever happened in the field of cement.

If the Builders' Guide had the ear of a young architect ambitious to rise to eminence in his profession, it would advise him to take up seriously, and with an artist's soul behind his pencil, the use of the medium known as tapestry brick. Here is a building material that in the hands of a master might conceivably produce results of a haunting and almost fairy-like beauty. Colored brick is no longer an experiment. The day of the glazed, varicolored variety of tinted brick is no more. To-day results are produced in this medium of an almost amazing artistry of effect. In the hands of an architect, who is not given to over elaboration, who has the true artist's eye for effect, who knows how to match the surrounding landscape to the product of his fancy, there is no medium extant fit to match the tapestry brick now manufactured by a few of the better brick-making concerns.

Architect D. Knickerbacker Boyd advances the novel and not unmeritorious suggestion that the new convention hall planned for this city be erected on the block between Twenty-first and Twenty-third streets, Market and Arch, extending over the Pennsylvania Railroad's elevated tracks. The Builder's Guide remains unchanged in its adherence to the views expressed in these columns weeks ago regarding the proper site for this improvement. Such a convention hall as it is now proposed to erect will stand, when completed, for years. Philadelphia will, in all probability, never again be called upon to provide another structure of the kind. The opportunity to place this improvement where it should be—right in the heart of the city—is now ours to grasp or neglect. The proper site for this hall is Broad street. The ideal site is South Broad street, not too far removed from the city's best hotels and the shopping center. Several blocks of dilapidated realty disfigure South Broad street, which it would be wise public policy to remove for an improvement of this caliber. The cost would, it is true, be a trifle greater than adopting Snyder's Woods or the river site, or Mr. Boyd's railroad suggestion, but the result would in the end justify the extra outlay.

If the city is pressed for funds with which to build this hall as it should be built, let us adopt the Western expedient of asking taxpayers to bear a few mills additional upon the present tax rate for this specific purpose. In any event, while we are convention hall building, let us do the thing right and avoid the regrets, the criticism and the heart burnings to come hereafter.

The Aberthaw Construction Company of Boston conducted some interesting experiments lately, with a view to determining the loss due to handling cement in sacks. Bags were stretched and beaten, when emptied, to recover as much as possible of the absorbed material and a careful record kept of the cement thus recovered. In 7,598 bags the amount of cement saved is given as 4,130 pounds.

Why the cement interests do not adopt the tongued and grooved barrel used abroad it is difficult to understand. Foreign cement is shipped here in these barrels with no loss in handling, with vastly better protection against dampness and climatic changes, and at, we are assured, little greater cost, losses considered, than the American custom of using sacks.

Material and Equipment Notes

"The Precise Heat Retainer" is a great little contrivance. Capable of being attached to any radiator, it regulates the amount of air and water without any corresponding loss of steam. This exceedingly useful device is manufactured by the Haynes-Thompson Company, of this city.

One of the new ideas evolved at the plant of the Monument Pottery Company, of Trenton, N. J., is a combination sink and tray specially adapted for use in apartments in which it is desirable to economize in space. It is a very handsome piece of porcelain and will appeal to the housewifely idea of handiness and economy. The same concern has a number of bathroom, kitchen and laundry suggestions calculated to be of interest to plumbers, architects and home builders.

The question of garbage disposal is definitely solved so far as hotels, schools, and large apartment houses are concerned by the Cragin Garbage Crematory, a furnace that first dries refuse and garbage matter and then uses it as a fuel for heating water. This furnace is no experiment. It is in practical use all over the country. It is doing precisely what is expected of it without odor, annoyance or disagreeable features of any sort or kind. It is manufactured by the Cragin Garbage Crematory Company, 746 E. Forty-third street, Chicago, Ill., who will be pleased to furnish prospective purchasers with descriptive literature, prices and a list of users.

The Hill-Canton Sanitary Dryer is a system adapted for use in private residences, apartment houses, hospitals, institutions, etc., for the quick and clean drying of clothes. It can be installed in any laundry, is made in a wide variety of sizes and designs, does the work quicker, better and with less labor than the old fashioned outdoor clothes line and is not unduly expensive to install. It is manufactured by the Hill-Canton Dryer Company, of Canton, O., who issue an illustrated catalog covering its many advantageous features.

Osborn roofing products enjoy a deserved reputation in the trade. "Open-Hearth," made according to the requirement of the National Board of Fire Underwriters; "Charcoal Old Style," specified by the United States Government; "Guaranteed Old Style" and "Charcoal Iron Roofing," specified for years owing to their excellent quality and durability. These products are made by the J. M. and L. A. Osborn Company, Superior avenue, N. W., Cleveland, O.. The company issues a booklet, "What is Roofing Tin."

The McCrum-Howell Company, Park

avenue and Forty-first street, New York City, which manufactures the widely known "Richmond" Stationary Vacuum Cleaning Systems, has adopted a ruling that should win this concern the active interest and cooperation of every plumber and steamfitter in the country. The custom has been where a vacuum cleaning system is to be installed for the company supplying the system to install it. The McCrum-Howell Company, recognizing the manifest injustice of this custom to the plumber and steamfitter has adopted it as a fixed rule that the Richmond system shall be installed only through the plumbing and heating trades. The company controls virtually all of the important patents covering stationary vacuum cleaning, advertising extensively, and by arrangements turns over all orders to the nearest dealer in the trade. Plumbers who want further information on how this plan works or who want to be listed for this class of business are invited to write the McCrum-Howell Company, who will furnish a catalog and price list for the trade containing full particulars.

The Yawman Sash Lift Ventilator is an air purifying device that is especially adapted for business offices, factories, schools and the home. This ventilator is an attractive little device that may be inserted in the lower rail of any window sash. It is made up of two parts: First, an inner plate attached inside the rail and fitted with an air valve to be opened or closed as the air current requires and, second, a perforated plate attached outside the rail excluding foreign bodies and serving as a kind of filter. The device is made by the Pullman Manufacturing Company, Rochester, N. Y.

The Hughes Electric Range, one of the products of the Hughes Electric Heating Company, Chicago, Ill., is one of the neatest and most serviceable electric cookers known to the trade. In appearance it is about the size and after the same general design as a first-class gas range, the body of blue steel, the top cast and polished, with nickle-plated edges, and the legs cast and nickled. The top has three burners, each consuming electric current as follows: High heat, 880 watts; medium heat, 440 watts; low heat, 220 watts. The heat for each burner is separately controlled. There is a cooking surface 15x35 inches. The stove itself is just thirty-three inches high.

The Vapor-Vacuum Heating System manufactured by the Vapor Vacuum Heating Company, of this city, has been installed in many of the finest buildings erected recently in this section of the country. Among them may be mentioned Fletcher M. E. Church, Philadelphia; Zionville Reformed Church, Old Zionville, Pa.; First M. E. Church, Salem, N. J.; residence of Henry Linde, Oak Lane, Pa.; residence of William Ralston, Royersford, Pa.; residence of I. R. Lynne, Harrisburg, Pa.; Gregg Carriage Company's building, Philadelphia; new building for Union and New Haven Trust Company, New Haven, Conn.; new building of Home National Bank, Brockton, Mass.; residence of W. A. Smalley, Germantown, Pa.; parish house, Old St. Paul's Church, Norfolk, Va.; new building for Michigan Avenue Trust Company, Chicago. The company has issued an illustrated catalog which can be had on request.

The American Heating and Ventilating Company, Perry Building, Philadelphia, has issued a handsome booklet entitled "The American System," showing a series of full-page pictures of important buildings in various parts of the country in which this system of heating and ventilating has been installed and is in successful use. The company, very properly, takes the stand that the best possible test of a heating system is its successful installation. Judging by the beautiful and important edifices in which the "American" is the adopted system there can be no doubt regarding the satisfactory results to be obtained from this method of heating. The booklet contains 94 pages, each page containing a building of substantial size and design in which the American system is now in use. This list is necessarily incomplete as the company has installed a number of heating plants in buildings, of smaller size and a number of other buildings contracted for since the volume went to press. A postal request will bring a copy of this beautifully printed booklet to parties interested.

Architects and builders who are familiar with it are a unit in asserting that the Waples Improved Metal Weather Strip, manufactured by H. R. Waples, 1625-27 N. Thirteenth street, this city, is one of the best devices of its kind ever introduced to the trade. It is simple in construction, comparatively inexpensive, easy to adjust and an immense saver of heat and fuel bills. It is said to not only render the windows draught proof and dust tight but to completely eliminate the annoyance incident to rattling sashes. Mr. Waples has spent years of study and experiment in the perfecting of this strip and claims that to-day it is absolutely without an equal in its field.

Recent Trade Literature.

The Texas Company, New York City, is sending out an interesting little booklet explaining what "asphalt" is, its uses as a bulider in road construction and an instructive chapter or two about Texas products and the purposes for which they are to be employed.

A pamphlet issued by the Schutte & Koerting Company, of this city, describes the water-jet eductors manufactured by this firm for draining cellars, pits and cess-pools, washing filter sand, discharging ashes from boiler rooms, etc. The pamphlet is illustrated.

The Joseph Dixon Crucible Company, Jersey City, N. J., has published a report by Prof. W. F. M. Goss on a large number of tests to determine the utility of graphite as a lubricant.

More or Less Personal

According to the Standard Paint Company, 100 William street, New York City, J. A. & W. Bird & Co., and the Flintkote Manufacturing Company are jointly prohibited, by a decision recently handed down by Judge G. W. Ray in the United States Circuit Court, from infringing the patents of that concern covering the process by which "colored rubberoid" is manufactured. This decision, if affirmed, reserves to the Standard concern the only colored roofing now upon the market.

A department of testing and inspection has been added to the business of the Richard D. Kimball Company, heating, ventilating and electrical engineers of New York and Boston. This new department is intended to supply fuel specifications and analysis, plant test and periodic inspections and a general promotion of plant efficiency.

The report that F. W. Roebling, of Trenton, had been elected treasurer of the Otis Elevator Company, succeeding the late Lynde Belknap, is denied by an official connected with that concern.

G. P. Blackiston, who is the man behind the advertising for the Berger Manufacturing Company, of Canton, O.; the Stark Rolling Mill Company, also of Canton, and the Never-Split Seat Company, of Evansville, Ind.; is doing brilliant and effective press work for all three concerns. Mr. Blackiston is one of the best all around "ad" men in the structural field and seldom misses an opportunity to keep the interests of his companies well to the front.

Lambert and Bronner succeed L. C. Hanna and E. W. Oglesby, resigned. The general offices of the company are to be removed, on July 1, 1911, from Pittsburg to Youngstown, Pa.

Vice-President Daniel Stewart, of the Empire State Surety Company, has just returned from an extended Western trip.

The Baltimore Bridge Company has appointed W. M. Bush, late of Levering & Garrigues, to the trusteeship of that concern with offices at Baltimore.

It is reported that the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company is figuring on a considerable enlargement of its plant at Wyland, Ala. The improvements are expected to more than double the plant's present capacity.

President W. D. Baldwin, of the Otis Elevator Company, who has been abroad since late in the spring, is expected back at his desk some time this month.

J. C. Covington has been selected assistant city engineer at Columbia, S. C.

Morris Knowles, the widely known Pittsburg engineer, has been commissioned by the city of Birmingham, Ala., to make an investigation of the condition and value of the light and water plants of that city with a view to necessary improvements.

Thomas Appleton, superintendent of construction in the office of the Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., has been ordered from East St. Louis, Ill., to Boston, Mass., where he will have charge of the alterations to be made in the Custom House and the construction of the new United States post office building at Chelsea.

A new engineering firm in the Osborn Building, Cleveland, Ohio, is the firm of Calvert & Griswold, recently organized. Their specialty is to be structural, concrete and pipe work, foundations and machine design.

Have you engaged space in our big "Cement Show Special Number" yet? There is still time if you act quickly.

Joseph W. Salus, one of the "live wire" business men of Atlantic City, is said to favor the paving of the thoroughfares of that town with wood block similar to that in use on Market street, this city.

Architect D. Knickerbacker Boyd advocates the building of the new Convention Hall at Twenty-first and Arch streets. The Guide is still firmly of the opinion that the proper site for this improvement is South Broad street somewhere in the vicinity of the old P. W. & B. depot.

Joseph Pennell, who has explored every byway of picturesque Europe, who is an authority on architectural design, who is regarded as the greatest of living etchers and an illustrator whose work possesses distinction and charm, electrified the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects at its recent dinner by declaring Philadelphia to be equal to the best examples abroad in chaste and pleasing architecture.

Contractor James P. McNichol is said to favor the Guide's idea of locating the new Convention Hall somewhere on South Broad street.

Councils will be asked to provide in the near future for a city garage and repair shop to be located on Washington avenue, below Broad. The funds for the projected improvement are to be had from the sale of the old and unused Board of Education building on Filbert street above Seventh.

The editorial printed in the Guide several weeks ago pointing out the adaptability of slum property for modern factory sites is being quoted extensively by the building trade press.

L. D. Eckard, son of L. H. Eckard, a well-known contractor of this city, and W. E. Powel, formerly connected with the Pomeroy Construction Company, and William A. Architectural Terra Cotta

Until comparatively recent years architectural terra cotta has not been recognized as a suitable material for the construction of an entire building such as the Peoples' Trust, from the first story up.

The most general use was limited to decorative members while the bulk of the structure was of brick or stone. Of late, however, the use of terra cotta to the exclusion of other materials has developed rapidly. This is largely due to the artistic and mechanical improvement some of the manufacturing companies have made in their product. Not only has the number of outer slips and glazes with which the terra cotta is sprayed, been increased, but the great number of colors available is now almost bewildering; moreover, the terra cotta body is less susceptible to warping and undue shrinkage than it used to be in the tremendous temperature it undergoes during the process of manufacture. Consequently, the mechanical effect, in the majority of instances, compares favorably with stone.

Other reasons for the rapid increase in the use of terra cotta are the possibility of combining two or more colors on the same piece, and the facility with which terra cotta may be modeled in ornamental design, thus permitting a wide latitude of architectural treatment.

Perhaps the most valuable practical quality of terra cotta is that it is absolutely fireproof. Burned in the kiln at a temperature approximating 2250 degrees Fahrenheit, a terra cotta building will stand uninjured through a general conflagration, even if the interior construction is of such a character that the building is completely gutted. A prominent instance of this property was the case of the Fairmont Hotel in the San Francisco disaster.

One of the best recent examples of the exclusive use of architectural terra cotta is the Peoples' Trust Building, at Twelfth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, Sauer & Hahn, architects. The light gray terra cotta was manufactured by the Atlantic Terra Cotta Company, of New York, with offices at 1308 Commonwealth Building, Philadelphia.

Designed from the start for architectural terra cotta, the building was erected in the most economical and most effectual way. To do this some understanding of the essential differences between stone and terra cotta is necessary. For example, terra cotta is lighter than stone and a corresponding form of steel or concrete frame construction is permissible, again, a great many similar pieces of terra cotta can be pressed out of one mould while each piece of stone must be separately cut. It will be readily seen that a considerable saving has been effected in the instance under consideration. Notice the number of intricately modeled spandrels that are exactly alike; to make these in stone would have involved an expenditure of from eight to ten times their cost in terra cotta. The plan ashlar pieces also repeat frequently, and the same is true of the main cornice and of practically every other feature.

Altogether it seems that the architects have been singularly happy in their choice of a structural material which adds architectural beauty to their excellent design, and which, at the same time permits the erection of a substantial and imposing building at a reasonable cost.

A large and well established bonding and liability insurance corporation of New York, with branch offices in this city, desires the services of an energetic man with an extended acquaintance among the Philadelphia contractors. A good opportunity for the party with the above qualifications. Address, Liability, Builders' Guide, Perry Building, Philadelphia.

Here, There and Everywhere

When it comes to fireproof roofing, it's hard to beat tin. If plain tin is too ugly to harmonize with the general design, there is metal tile. The Edwards Company, Cortright, Montross and other concerns make this tile in pleasing designs.

Ex-Governor Franklin Murphy, president of the Murphy Varnish Company, of Trenton, N. J., is the subject of a very pleasant biographical sketch in the November number of the American Carpenter and Builder. An excellent half-tone portrait of Mr. Murphy accompanies the text.

The Engineering Review for November has a very entertaining, well-written and instructive article, by H. N. Taylor, of the N. & G. Taylor Company, this city, on "Telling Arguments for Tin Roofing." Mr. Taylor is conceded to be an authority in this particular field.

The annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will be held in the Engineering Societies' building, 39 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, December 6-9.

The Makin Heating Company, of this city, has been organized to take over the business of John A. Makin, at 803 Locust street. The incorporators are John D. Makin, Albert H. Dunn, Jr., and Robert F. Morgan. The new company will manufacture a general line of heating and ventilating apparatus.

Norton & Porter, Hudson Terminal Building, 30 Church street, New York, have been appointed eastern agents for the Pennsylvania Bridge Company, of Beaver Falls, Pa.

The National Sheet Metal Roofing Company, of Jersey City, N. J., claims to have been the pioneer in the manufacture of metal shingle roofing material. The company was organized in 1882.

A new association, to be known as the National Housing Association, has been organized, with a board of thirty-seven directors, representing fifteen States. Mr. Robert L. De Forest, of New York City, is president and Mr. Lawrence Veiller secretary. The object of the new association is to improve housing conditions generally, to further the enactment of laws calculated to prevent the erection of unit types of dwellings, to induce the improvement of older dwellings, to secure reasonable, scientific and economic building laws, and to promote modern and improved building generally.

The Combination vs. the Exclusive Bank or Trust Company Building.

MAURICE E. BENTON, Assistant Secretary of the Land Title and Trust Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

The subject at issue, clean cut as it appears to be, involves an intricate, as well as momentous calculation in practical finance to-day. Yet the solution, after some of the more obvious and fogging factors are eliminated, proves to be but the ancient and honorable one of plain dollars and cents. Every year directors of banks and of trust companies are pinning their faith, with a cordial freedom from unanimity, on one or the other born of the dilemma. It may, therefore, be superfluous to admit that, so far as any consensus of opinion may go, the question must always remain an open one. The best that a partisan of either side can do is to adduce whatever substantial reasons he has for the faith that is in him.

The first, the oldest and the most apparent considerations which present themselves in connection with any depositary for moneys, stock, bonds and other valuables, are absolute security and the appearance of that condition. That absolute security can be attained in the combination building as completely as in any structure devoted exclusively to the uses of a bank or trust company, goes without saying in this era of concrete and steel construction, electric safeguards and burglar-proof vaults. In two of their common dimensions—sides and base—the combination building and the exclusive building are identical. The other dimensions—the roof—might possibly present opportunity for the uninterrupted work which is the necessary preliminary to invasion. The combination building, using its second floor for its own purposes or leasing the second floor space to tenants of whose character it can assure itself, surmounts its impenetrably constructed ceiling with a safety compartment, which is assuredly superior to the open sky. If there be any choice, the combination building has, therefore, some measure of advantage in perfection of safeguard over the exclusive building.

Of course, any new house of any pretense now being built is wired and equipped for the use of Electric Light—the builders, the architects, the people have been educated to that point.

We wish to call your attention, however, to the necessity for care in the matter of selecting economical and efficient fixtures and lamps. The logical and easiest time to tend to this matter is when the specifications are being drawn up. We are always ready to help you!

The question, however, is much more one of the appearance than of the reality of safety. Half a century ago, when a thief who knew his business rolled a safe out from the wall and cut out its back like so much cardboard, bank architecture had every reason to adopt as its model the Egyptian Monolith, with terrifying chevaux-de-frise for its decorations. To-day, the public knows perfectly well that the contents of the safes and vaults in a combination building are as safe from depredators as if they were enclosed in walls of triple brass—and probably more so. This affectation of superfluous security, for all practical intents now obsolete, has been notoriously exemplified by the Bank of England in its widely advertised submergible safe. The advertising it got has been as superfluous as the submerging was needless.

The advertising to be derived from exclusive occupancy resolves itself into the impression which such a building leaves upon the minds of habitual passersby. The combination building, bearing the name of the bank or trust company, advertises that name incessantly—through its hundreds or thousands of regular office occupants, its tens of thousands of visitors, and its millions of iterations in the written or the spoken word. This constitutes both general and direct advertising publicity, bringing both general and direct returns.

It must be evident that every consideration, both of actual safety and of profitable publicity, emphasizes advantages of the combination building. It is possible, however, to substantiate the argument as to publicity by statistics that are fairly exact. The Land Title and Trust Company, located on Broad street, extending from Chestnut to Sansom streets, in Philadelphia—where the name of the company dominates 1,400 offices—figures habitually in the conversation, correspondence and advertising literature applying to a population of 2,000 people, and is directly in the thought and conversation of visitors numbering over 25,000 daily, and impressed upon the many thousands of letters, parcels and money orders passing through the Land Title Building postoffice sub-station, located in the building, where all classes of mail matter are received, this name “stamped” thereon and distributed direct to the occupants or outgoing trains.

It is unreasonable to suppose, and it is emphatically negated by experience, that the business of a bank or trust company does not obtain beneficial returns from the tenants of its own office building. It is inevitable that both tenants and clients of tenants would be strongly influenced to patronize the bank or company for all the various services its charter may permit—deposit of funds, rental of safe deposit boxes, guardianship, trusteeship, title insurance and every other service it can render the general public. Notwithstanding the visible advantages accruing from ownership and occupancy of an office building by a bank or a trust company, there are certain other major considerations which should be taken into account before the enterprise is embarked upon. There should be a genuine need for such a building at the location contemplated, or, at least, a reliable prospect of such a need within a period sufficiently brief to ensure a profitable future. If it be at all possible, the location should be a corner one, because light, convenience, ventilation and view—all—constitute assets which are directly convertible into cash. Architectural and mechanical details apart, the height—whether ten, twenty or more stories—must be planned with the most scrupulous estimate of maximum patronage, and also as to the class of tenants to be sought—whether mercantile, industrial or professional.

The factors having been duly weighed, the nearer problems present themselves, such as the cost of land, cost of building, and interest lost during erection of building; the gross income, cost of operation and maintenance, taxes and insurance. The value of the site fundamentally determines whether necessity exists for the skyscraper. If land values reach or exceed $10,000 per front foot, and if the institution actually need ground floor space of 10,000 or more square feet, an investment of $1,000,000 is required for the site alone. A building, designed for the sole use of the institution, would cost $200,000 additional, at a moderate estimate. The annual expense of sole occupancy would, therefore, be conservatively itemized thus:

Interest (at 4 per cent. on investment of $1,200,000).....	$48,000
Taxes (at $1.50 on assessment of $1,000,000)	15,000
Insurance (at 10c. on $200,000) ..	2,000
Maintenance	5,000
Total	$70,000

That sum represents all the profit a banking institution can reasonably expect to earn from deposits ranging between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000. These charges are impossible of much reduction, for the banking institution, of all enterprises, must possess in its own right the most favorable location, which necessarily means the most expensive. It is clear that not economy merely, but self preservation, dictates the erection of office buildings which multiply the available floor space until the 10,000 square feet afforded by the site originally are increased to 100,000 or 200,000 square feet, at an additional cost for the building only. It is here that we begin to find the milk of profit in the previously hollow coconut.

The cost of the average building suited to such purposes, built of granite, preproof and erected on a site 100 feet square, would be, for a one-story structure, $200,000; for a ten-story structure, $400,000; for a fifteen-story structure, $550,000; for a twenty-story structure, $700,000, exclusive of machinery and fixtures.

I assume that it is practical and helpful information that is required on this subject, rather than controversy or vague argument. That must be my justification for referring, in dealing with the financial side of such an enterprise, to the statistics of the Land Title and Trust Company's building. These affairs are treated as a department of the company, under the direction of a superintendent, who is also the chief engineer. The business affairs of the building are handled as sub-departments nominally, but amount practically to nothing more than so many bookkeeping accounts which serve to facilitate a clear understanding of the various items involved.

Office rentals in the Land Title Building above the ground floor range from $1.50 to $2.50 per square foot per annum. The preferable locations, such as corner and front suites, as against inside or back corridor rooms, determine the difference in price. The renting of the offices is attended to by the real estate department of the Land Title and Trust Company as part of an extensive business in real estate management conducted with the general public. It may be worthy of note that no difficulty has been experienced in keeping all space rented, and there is always a waiting list of applicants. The Land Title Buildings are assessed by the City of Philadelphia for taxation purposes at a valuation of $5,500,000, necessitating an annual expense of $82,500 for city taxes alone.

It is, of course, vital to the proper management of any such office building that the items of expense incidental to its operation shall be recorded for ready reference and comparison. Most satisfactory results follow if the accounting is so arranged that all items of expense are charged up against the department or account which represents the service included with the office in the lease to the tenant. The accompanying form of “voucher” will make it clear how it is possible to know the exact cost of each of these services.

A diagram of the heart of Philadelphia will give at a glance a clear conception of what it would mean to such a city if the tenants of the Land Title Building occupied the same floor space on the adjacent ground instead of in the sixteen and the twenty-two stories which make up the total elevation of 315 feet. Dealt with statistically, the Land Title Buildings contain 440,363 square feet of floor space, an area exceeding 10 acres, of which more than six acres—278,403 square feet, to be exact—is rental floor space.

The best data on which to base calculations as to cost of operation and maintenance appear when they are reduced to the yearly expense per square foot. Those expenses, in the case of the Land Title Buildings, I find, from years of actual experience, to be: Operation—Cleaning, $8\frac{1}{2}$ cents per square foot; lighting $5\frac{1}{2}$ cents per foot; heating, $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents per square foot; elevator service, $8\frac{1}{2}$ cents per square foot; water supply, 3 cents per square foot; total, 27 cents per square foot. Maintenance—Betterments, 6 cents per square foot; total, 33 cents per square foot.

Unquestionably, the financial success or failure of an office building, considered as a business enterprise, depends largely upon the management of the employees. I consider it of prime importance to secure the services of a superintendent who is a man of exceptional ability, undoubted loyalty and dependable fidelity. He should be able not only to direct, but to instruct engineers, electricians, plumbers, elevator operators, and even scrubwomen. He should know when and how to buy to advantage the various supplies required. He should know when and how to make repairs—and when not to. These items, in the aggregate, amount to enormous sums; the man on whom rests the responsibility for such outlays must be reliable.

Perhaps no better illustration of the magnitude of detail involved in the successful operation of an office building can be given than that afforded by a careful consideration of the employees needed to furnish the services included in the amount of rent paid. This will show more clearly that the proposition is not simply the renting of empty excess space within the walls of the building—containing floors, windows and ceilings—but that these must also be kept clean, heated, lighted and provided with adequate elevator and other service at the expense of the owner. Cleanliness and a general faultlessness of condition are attained in the Land Title Buildings by the employment daily of no less than 171 persons, whose work is confined exclusively to the care of the building. Wages vary so much with locality that specific sums would be superfluous to mention; but the list of employees is important as showing precisely how many are required for the conduct of an office building of this size. The list follows: One superintendent and chief engineer (duties combined), one assistant to superintendent, five assistant engineers, one supply clerk, three firemen and one helper, eight oilers, one elevator machinist and one helper, one electrician and one helper, one plumber and one helper, two carpenters, three painters, six watchmen (five night and one day), two elevator starters and nineteen operators, one hardwood finisher, two marble cleaners, one head porter and twenty porters, two forewomen, twenty-two scrubbers (women), sixty-five cleaners (women).

I have endeavored to include in this article all information which I feel at liberty to disclose with regard to the conduct of the building with which I am identified. I have done so because years of observation and experience with the trust company type of office building have left no doubt in my mind as to the complete advisability of such an investment whenever and wherever those essentials exist which I predicted previously.

MODERN SHEET METAL.

The Logical Development of the Corrosion Theories of Cushman and Walker.

By F. M. ENGLISH.

The problem of the old-time iron master, in making the quality of sheet which he did, was infinitely simple as compared to the problem facing the modern iron or steel maker who undertakes to reproduce sheets having the corrosion-resisting qualities of the old-time goods, and which also combine all the other qualities requisite in a sheet which must meet modern requirements.

Had we to-day the same raw materials, the same workmen, the same furnaces and exactly the same conditions, sheets could be made in all respects equal to any that have ever been made, but—it's a big "but"—could the manufacturer with such facilities begin to supply the enormous demand of to-day, and could he reproduce sheets at a price which would permit of their use in the vast variety of ways in which sheets are now being utilized?

To meet the present-day demand for sheets—to enable the mills to keep pace with the ever-increasing consumption, because of the infinite variety of ways in which sheets are being employed—the slow, limited methods and processes of past days cannot be employed or reinstated.

The problem confronting the sheet manufacturer of to-day is how to make sheets having the old-time corrosion-resisting qualities, together with the necessary working qualities, and at a price which will not curtail their use, and the problem is no easy one. In other words, the sheet manufacturer of to-day must "make a dozen blades of grass grow" where one grew formerly—not at the same price and of the same quality, but at a lesser price and of better quality, and with higher labor, inferior raw materials, and to withstand much more exacting conditions.

The conditions today to which sheets are subjected as compared to earlier times are also entirely different—the demands and requirements of the trade are far more exacting. The sheet of to-day to meet modern conditions must not only have the highest corrosion resisting qualities but they must also have working qualities and be able to withstand strains and stresses, in shaping, forming and handling never dreamed of in the old days—to say nothing of the vastly changed atmospheric conditions to which they are now subjected. The sheet of today to meet all requirements demanded of it must be better than the old-time sheets, and not only better but cheaper.

It is an indisputed fact that the corrosion-resisting qualities of the early sheets were due entirely to their uniformity or homogeneity, which was made possible through the proper selection of raw materials through the principle involved in their handling and through the care and attention with which the iron was made. Plenty of time was given the raw materials while in the furnace, to eliminate any excess of foreign impurities present and to properly combine those remaining, and also by handling the iron after it came from the furnace in such a manner that segregation did not take the place during the reheating or working-up processes.

Through modern research and investigation we know that corrosion is caused by the carbon, sulphur, phosphorus and manganese becoming segregated, during the process of manufacture, this theory having been fully demonstrated both in the laboratory and under actual working conditions—the corrosive action taking place in the following manner:

When the impurities, carbon, sulphur, phosphorus, and manganese, become segregated in iron or steel—that is, when they are not equally and evenly distributed throughout the metal, occurring in small spots or areas—an electrical current will be set up between these segregated points whenever the sheet in which they are present becomes covered with a film of moisture from the atmosphere. Due to differences in composition, some of these points of segregation become positive, others negative, which, when connected by the film of moisture, set up numerous electrical batteries of greater or lesser energy, according to the extent of the segregation, so that there are limitless numbers of small electrical batteries continually at work throughout the sheet. It is a well-known fact that a current of electricity cannot be generated in a battery without destruction or dissolution taking place at the positive pole, so that in any sheet, iron or steel, in which segregation has taken place and the surface of which, through exposure to the atmosphere, has become covered with a film of moisture, there are numerous small electrical batteries at work, at the positive poles of which the iron or steel is being destroyed, resulting in the form of corrosion known as pitting, a form with which you are all too well acquainted. The more marked or strongly defined is the segregation, the stronger will be the electrical action; consequently the more rapid will be the destruction of the metal or sheet. On the other hand, the less well-defined the segregation, the weaker or milder will be the electrical action, and consequently the life of the sheet will be longer. Again, in a well-made sheet of iron or steel in which the impurities have been properly incorporated and segregation reduced to a minimum, the electrical action will be so slight that pitting will not take place, but, instead, an even coating of rust will be formed over the entire surface of the sheet in such a way that the rust will itself become, to a great extent, a protective coating, greatly retarding the process of decomposition or rusting. It was for this reason that the old-time iron sheets withstood so phenomenally the ravages of corrosion. It was not because they did not rust that caused them to last, but the way in which they did rust, that made them so long lived.

No iron or steel has ever been made or can ever be made that will not rust in moist air; because it is the nature of all products made from iron ore to rust and in time return to the natural state from which it originally came. But, the way in which the rusting takes place can be controlled, thus making the sheet long lived, durable and the most ideal metal for roofing, siding, eaves trough, conductor pipe, and similar other purposes.

It has generally been supposed that steel corrodes faster than iron, also that pitting is confined entirely to steel, but this is by no means the case. Both iron and steel pit and corrode, and badly made iron, of which we are getting a great deal today, lasts no better than badly made steel. The opposite of which is also true, namely, that properly made steel will withstand corrosion and pitting equally as well as iron, besides having far superior working qualities.

There may possibly be some question as to how electrolysis takes places in causing corrosion as regards the exact chemical reactions; but that electrolysis actually does take place, and that it is the true cause of corrosion cannot be successfully disputed. The fact that electrolysis does occur is proven conclusively by the ferroxy test, exhibits of which you have all examined. The object of this test is not to show the comparative lasting qualities of two or more pieces of metal but only to prove the theory of electrolysis by practical demonstration. The explanation of the test is this: At the poles of all electrical batteries two elements are always found to be present, namely hydrogen ions and hydroxyl ions. The hydrogen ions cluster around and indicate the positive pole. The hydroxyl ions in the same manner indicate the negative pole. The ferroxy testing reagent is composed of certain indicators, the reactions of which when brought into contact with these two elements have been known for years. Ferroxy is a weak acid and is of such a nature that when brought in contact with hydroxyl ions, it at once produces a pink color; while potassium ferricyanide when hydrogen ions are present, causing iron to be dissolved or corroded, produces a blue reaction. Both of these chemicals are present in the gelatine mixture in which are imbedded the samples which you have examined, the blue color indicating the positive poles where destruction or corrosion is taking place, the pink color indicating the negative poles. No piece of iron or steel has ever been found which when subjected to this test will not sooner or later develop the pink and blue reaction which you have witnessed.

The point involved then in the manufacture of iron or steel which is to resist corrosion is to so combine and work up the raw materials that these electrical currents which cause corrosion will be of the mildest form and whose action is not concentrated or fixed through excessive segregation.

Of the many subjects which are of interest to the sheet metal worker and the user of sheets there is none of such vital importance as the subject of corrosion, and what affects the sheet manufacturer, so that the cause and cure of corrosion is of common interest to both.

If the sheet metal business is to grow, expand and assume the position in the world of business which it should, it is absolutely necessary that the sheet metal workers strive in every way to use only such sheets as will stand up for at least a reasonable length of time and to avoid wherever possible the use of such goods as will prove disastrous to his business and his reputation.

With this necessarily incomplete outline of the subject of the corrosion of iron and steel, we leave the subject hoping it will receive from the sheet metal worker the further consideration which is its due. The subject is certainly one of vital importance to every sheet metal worker, because the development and growth of the sheet metal industry will largely be determined by the degree in which corrosion is manifested in the materials adopted and used. The use of highly corrosive material will retard and lessen the demand for the sheet metal work, while the use of better and more lasting material will stimulate and encourage the demand.

ARCHITECTURAL COMPETITION.

Three limited competitions for the selection of architects for the three buildings for the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce and Labor have been instituted, the program having been approved by the President, Secretaries Knox, McVeagh, and Nagel, and Attorney General Wickersham.

The buildings will occupy the land bounded by Pennsylvania avenue, the Mall, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. Provision has been made for an expert commission of award, to report on the relative merits of the designs, but the names of the judges will not be made public at this time.

With the exception of Daniel H. Burnham, of Chicago, and E. V. Seeler, of Philadelphia, who declined to enter the competitions, most of the eminent American architects are included in the list of sixty. Mr. Burnham declined in consequence of his position as president of the Fine Arts Commission.

The competitors are: Department of State—Nathan C. Wyeth, Washington, D. C.; Hornblower & Marshall, Washington; McKim, Mead & White, New York; H. Van Buren Magonigle, New York; Warren & Wetmore, New York; George Cary, Buffalo; John Galen Howard, San Francisco; Pond & Pond, Chicago; Arnold W. Brunner, New York; Frank Miles Day & Bro., Philadelphia; Rankin, Kellogg & Crane, Philadelphia; Kelsey & Cret, Philadelphia; Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, Boston; Allen & Collens, Boston; Parker, Thomas & Rice, Boston; F. M. Andrews & Co., Boston; James Gamble Rogers, New York; Wyatt & Nolting, Baltimore; Hubert G. Ripley, Boston; D'Oench & Yost, New York.

Department of Commerce and Labor—Wood, Donn & Deming, Washington; Peabody & Stearns, Boston; Bigelow & Wadsworth, Boston; Eames & Young, St. Louis; T. C. Link & Son, St. Louis; Babb, Cook & Welch, New York; York & Sawyer, New York; Donaldson & Meier, Detroit; Holabird & Roche, Chicago; Abram Garfield, Cleveland; Tracy, Swartout & Litchfield, New York; La Farge & Morris, New York; Francis H. Kimball, New York; Kenneth M. Murchison, New York; Thomas R. Kimball, Omaha; Green & Wicks, Buffalo; George B. of Justice is $1,900,000; the Department of State, $2,200,000; and the Department of Commerce and Labor, $3,650,000. The buildings for the Departments of State and Justice will be three stories and basement; that of Commerce and Labor will be five stories and basement.

The ground area of the building for the Department of Commerce and Labor will be 90,000 square feet; that of the Department of State 72,000 square feet; and that of the Department of Justice 57,000 square feet.

The competition will close December 30. The programs limit the height of the exterior orders to 45 feet, including columns and entablature; the style of architecture adopted must be in keeping with the best existing work in Washington; the designs must be executed by the regular office force of each competitor; colored perspective sketches are prohibited, and the primary object of the competition is the selection of an architect and not the designs at first submitted, as the creator of the three accepted designs must modify and restudy their plans until they shall form a harmonious composition.

The problem of each department is stated in detail in the table of requirements submitted to those who have been invited to enter the competitions.

The building of the Department of State will contain offices for the secretary, three assistant secretaries, director of consular service, councilor and solicitor, bureaus of accounts, of rolls and library, citizenship, appointments, trade relations, near Eastern affairs, far Eastern affairs, Western European affairs, Latin-American affairs, information and translations, and the telegraph office, office of chief clerk and the index bureau. Including offices for clerks and files, the total number of rooms will be 325. A feature of this building will be the state dining room, two diplomatic reception rooms, and an international conference, the last named occupying 6,000 square feet of floor space.

In the building for the Department of Justice, which will contain 225 rooms, accommodations will be provided for the attorney general, the solicitor general, the assistant attorney general, seven assistant attorneys general, the chief clerk, mail and files division, superintendent of prisons, bureau of investigation, library, public lands division, appointment clerk, attorney in charge of titles, assistant attorneys, division of accounts, stenographic bureau, etc. A feature of this building will be the law library. This room and the adjacent reading room will have a combined floor area of 7,500 square feet. The main stack room, which will be located on a mezzanine floor, will have 12,000 linear feet of shelf space.

Fewer Unsettled Suits

Than any other important liability insurance concern now doing business.

Know what this means?

It means that, when possible we settle our claims out of court, avoiding the annoyance, publicity and disagreeable features incident to litigation.

Let us send a representative to talk over the cost of this kind of protection —the kind of protection that protects.

Here, There and Everywhere

The fall number of "The Arrow," the sprightly little house organ issued by the N. and G. Taylor Co., manufacturers of tin plate, of this city, has just reached us. This little publication, sounding the praises of the justly celebrated "Target and Arrow" brand of roofing plate, is just chock full of good things and is well worth the postal request necessary to bring it.

A demonstration and salesroom has been opened by the Moore Light Co., of Newark, N. J., at 500 Fifth avenue, New York City.
This concern is pushing the sale of a specialty known as the "Daylight Window," a small portable unit, designed for use in department stores, haberdashery shops, milliners' show rooms and other places, where colors are to be displayed at their accurate values. It is understood that the new office is to handle all the eastern and southern business of this flourishing concern.

At the coming convention of the American Institute of Architects, at San Francisco, January 17, 18 and 19, the principal topic of discussion, aside from routine matters of general interest, will be the architecture of the Pacific Coast. Cass Gilbert, 11 E. Twenty-fourth st.,
New York City, is president of the institute.

The rolling mill of the Shenango Iron and Steel Co., at Wheattown, near Sharon, Pa., is to be sold at auction on December 21. The property represents an investment of $500,000.
Mr. C. C. Murray, of Pittsburg, is trustee of the concern, which has been in the hands of a receiver for some time.

The W. G. Cornell Co., Everett Bldg., Union Square, New York, has the contract for the plumbing of the Munsey Building, at Baltimore, Md.

Bulletin No. 9, just issued by the Turner Construction Co., 11 Broadway, New York, contains some very valuable pointers concerning knotty problems in connection with concrete construction. It may be had on request.

Uriah Cummings, president of the Cummings Cement Co., of Akron, N. Y., who died recently at his home at Stamford, Conn., was one of the best posted men in the trade on cement and concrete construction. For years
Mr. Cummings was in charge of the investigations made by the Government into the uses of these mediums.

The semi-annual inspection of the plant of the American Steel and Wire Co., just completed, shows the mills and factories visited to be in a most gratifying state of efficiency. The directors of the company express themselves as highly pleased with the condition of the works both East and West.

The "Mechanigraph" is a clever device controlled by Topping Brothers, 122 Chambers st.,
New York, which makes reproductions of blue prints from original drawings by a mechano-chemic process without tracing. The firm issues a booklet describing the device which it will be pleased to furnish to architects and others interested.

For the Raleigh Hotel, to be erected at Washington by the Geo. A. Fuller Construction Co., 111 Broadway, New York, and Morris Building, this city, the Jones & Laughlin concern will supply 2,000 tons of structural steel.

Thomas Wheatley, vice-president and treasurer of the Pierce, Butler & Pierce Manufacturing Co., is doing the continent, accompanied by Mrs. Wheatley and a small party of close friends.

E. S. Loomis, president of the Blanchard
Lumber Co., has returned from his wedding trip and is now "at home" at 536 W. 145th st., New York. Mr. Loomis' office is at 11 Broadway.

J. E. Noeggerath, associate of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, will open a New York office in the near future for general consulting practice. Mr. Noeggerath was formerly with the General Electric Company.

Alsen Portland Cement is being shipped to the government of Panama.

Representatives of the hardware dealers in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana, are perfecting the organization of a corporation to be known as the American Hardware and Supply Company. This company is to begin business with a capital of $500,000 and later increase this to $1,000,000.

The new company is to inaugurate an aggressive advertising campaign to check the wholesaler, who sells direct and has to some extent demoralized the retail trade.

Captain C. M. Goodman, of this city, superintendent of the Standard Portland Cement Co., of Leeds, Ala., is highly pleased with the record of this plant in the four years during which it has been in operation. He is particularly pleased with the output for the month of September, which broke all records. F. M. McCants, Brown-Marx Building, Birmingham, Ala., is salesmanager for the company.

The Ideal Concrete Machinery Co., of South Bend, Ind., has opened a Chicago office in the Old Colony Building. This company will have one of the finest displays to be seen at the forthcoming New York Cement Show.

A new brick plant, capable of turning out 35,000 brick daily, is to be established at Tuckahoe, N. J., by Philadelphia capitalists.

A plant is to be erected at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by the American Home Building Company, for the construction of concrete homes for people of ordinary means. Sidney Woodruff is president of the company.

The Blair Silica Brick Company has been incorporated to establish a silica brick plant at Claysburg, Pa. James H. France, of Phillipsburg, is president; John B. Hammond, Jr., of Chester, secretary, and William L. Schaefer, of Pittsburg, treasurer.

J. E. Sparrow, G. B. Shultz and N. Peck, all of New York, are the incorporators of the Ajax Portland Cement Company, of Newburgh, with a capital stock of $250,000.

C. B. Kreichbaum & Son, of Chambersburg, Pa., want prices on concrete block machinery.

L. A. Coats, Warren, Pa.; R. A. Harbridge, Ridgway, Pa., and Economy Clay Machinery Company, of St. Mary's, Pa., are in the market for concrete mixers in good working condition.

The Keasbey & Mattison Company, Ambler, Pa., continue to send out those very attractive cards showing buildings roofed with the asbestos shingle manufactured by this concern. The latest shows a very attractive double flat concrete block building recently erected at Milwaukee.

The Peoples' Portland Cement Company, of Chicago, has purchased and is dismantling the plant of the Empire Portland Cement Company, at Warner, N. Y.

Information of value to engineers, contractors and builders is contained in the booklet on "Monolithic Concrete Construction," just issued by the Reichert Manufacturing Company, of Milwaukee. The booklet demonstrates convincingly the immense advantage in concrete construction of the metal moulds manufactured by the Reichert Company.

The Sandusky Portland Cement Company, Sandusky, O., is out with two very attractive and readable booklets exploiting the many advantages of their Medusa White Portland Cement, and Medusa Waterproofing. Tables of tests made of both materials are interesting features of these booklets.

Recent orders booked by the Keasbey & Mattison Company for the "Century" asbestos shingle, manufactured by them, includes several carloads to be used on the Pennsylvania State Mountain Tuberculosis Sanitarium; several carloads for the new government buildings, at West Hingham, Mass., and smaller orders for the Atlantic City pumping station, Absecon, N. J.; the Hartman Stock Farm, Columbus, O., and the Pabst Stock Farm, Oconomowoc, Wis.

The October Bulletin of the Universal Portland Cement Company, of Chicago and Pittsburg, is a farmer's number, presenting a mass of practical information for the use of the farmer who is interested in concrete buildings for farm use. A number of attractive illustrations are scattered through the Bulletin.

Advertising Manager Marsh has the Edison Aggregate, issued by the Edison Portland Cement Company right up to the minute in text and illustration. The illustrations are numerous and confined to buildings in which "Edison" was the cement used.

In the Peoples' Gas, Light and Coke Company Building, at Chicago, Ill., over 720 carloads, more than one million square feet of hollow terra cotta tile was used by the National Fire Proofing Company, of Pittsburg. The building is 22 stories high and contains 25 acres of floor space.

The new Aliquippa wire plant of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, of Pittsburg, is now running full time. George A. Mason is in charge of the sales department. The new tin plate mill is also running at high pressure.

The new creosoting plant of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, at Maurer, N. J., is booking extensive orders for wood block, ties and other products preserved by this process. The company is issuing a specification "R" that is of interest to builders and contractors interested in this class of material.

September building operations in 47 cities showed a decrease from those for the same period in 1909. In the eastern cities the decrease was 9 per cent.; middle western cities, an increase of 6 per cent.; southern cities, a decrease of 33 per cent., and Pacific Coast cities, a decrease of 13 per cent. The figures for Manhattan and the Bronx for 1910 were $7,717,025 as compared with $6,059,875 in 1909. Philadelphia and Chicago also showed a gain, while Pittsburg fell off from $1,996,261 in 1909 to $835,800 in 1910.

IN HONOR OF JOHN FRITZ.

"Grand Old Man of Lehigh" Guest of Manufacturers' Club at a Notable Banquet.

John Fritz, of Bethlehem, "the grand old man of the Lehigh," one of the leaders in the iron and steel industry in America, was the guest of honor of the Manufacturers' Club at a banquet on the night of November 17. More than one hundred men prominent in the iron and steel business, including Andrew Carnegie, Charles M. Schwab and W. E. Corey, were present.

The banquet was served at 7 o'clock in the old Clover Club room on the second floor of the Manufacturers' Clubhouse, at Broad and Walnut streets.

Andrew Carnegie served as honorary chairman of the testimonial dinner. Associated with him were Isaac Clothier, Charles M. Schwab, W. E. Corey, Charles Kirchoff and John Berkinbine. Other committees included the following:

General Committee—Chairman, Nathan Folwell; vice-chairman, Alfred E. Burk; treasurer, Cyrus Borgner; secretary, James W. Nagle.

Guest Committee—Dr. Henry D. Heller, J. Clifton Buck, Col. H. C. Trexler, Michael Murphy, Joseph R. Grundy, A. A. Duban, Thomas Devlin, George Reger, Richard Champion, Jacob S. Disston, J. Howell Cummings and Elmer E. Brown.

Banquet, Decoration and Music Committee—John Fisler, William H. Folwell, William Pedrick, Jr., J. D. C. Henderson, E. T. Trigg, W. C. Berlinger, A. C. Buzby and Charles F. Bartlett.

Press and Printing Committee—Col. Henry D. Hughes, Edmond T. Townley, Walter Mc-Dougall, A. E. Maltby, A. A. Miller and James W. Nagle.

Toastmaster—Col. W. F. Donovan.

John Fritz, though in his 89th year, is still hale and hearty. He was born in Chester County, August 21, 1822, and entered the iron business at an early age. All his life he has been associated with the steel and iron industry and has done much toward its development. He successfully introduced the Bessemer steel process in this country and several other processes that have been of great advantage in the industry.

Material and Equipment Notes

The "Regitherm" is a clever little device manufactured and controlled by the American Radiator Co., of Chicago, which regulates the heating temperature of a house automatically at any point at which it is set. It can be adjusted to any style or make of heater, is indestructible, saves fuel and contains no springs, clock works, or other delicate mechanism to wear out and entail expensive repairs. The company issues a booklet, "New Aids to Ideal Heating," that contains valuable pointers concerning this and other contrivances made by the company of interest to householders, architects and building owners.

"Domes of Silence" is the name given to an invisible caster, for which Henry W. Peabody Co., 17 State street, New York, are the American agents. This caster has no wheels, is unbreakable, won't rip carpets or scratch hardwood or tiled floors and can be attached to any article of furniture in a few minutes. It is made of nickel steel, is inexpensive and has so many points of superiority over the old cast iron article, common to this field, that it is being adopted by decorators everywhere. Samples and prices to the trade may be had on request.

The Southern Cypress Manufacturers' Association, 1210 Hibernia Bank Building, New Orleans, La., is doing yeoman service in the work of educating the public to the virtues of this beautiful and lasting variety of timber. Cypress is so much more durable than other woods that one has only to grasp the advantages of it to employ it in preference to all others. An old wooden water main of this wood, dug up in New Orleans recently, after being in the earth 110 years, was found to be as sound and serviceable as the day it was laid. There is a house still standing in New York State, built in 1710, in which the cypress weather boarding is better than most weather boarding placed within the past ten years. Architects interested in the wearing qualities of the various woods will do well to write the Southern Cypress Manufacturers' Association for the booklet the company issues covering this subject.

The use of fir, richly finished, for doors, panelling and similar purposes, is of comparatively recent vogue. There was a time when the home builder insisted upon oak, mahogany or walnut, not knowing the possibilities of fir as a substitute for these of equal beauty and durability, and a very considerable saving in expenditure. The Chalais Fir Door Company, of Chalais, Wash., is making doors of the beautiful chalais fir that have all the elegance and quality of the finest hard wood. Catalogue "E," issued especially for architects, presents data regarding the adaptability of this wood that should convince the most skeptical. Samples may be had by parties interested on application.

The National Lead Co., 111 Broadway, New York, is pushing a brand of white lead known as "Dutch Boy" that it claims to be superior to any other brand on the market in covering capacity, strength of color and lasting quality. "Dutch Boy Paint Advertiser, No. 91," issued by the company may be had free by persons interested. It contains a mass of information upon the paint question that should prove interesting to consumers.

The Ives Ventilating Lock is a neat little sash locking device that admits of the window being lowered for ventilation and locked at any point desired. It is simple in construction, safe and strong, easy to apply and comparatively inexpensive. Manufactured by the H. B. Ives Company, New Haven, Conn. An 88-page free catalogue, covering this and other specialties is issued by the Ives Company.

"Mineral Wool" is a vermin-proof material that is used as a filler in walls, floors and partitions, makes a house fire-proof, sound-proof, cool in summer and warm in winter, besides keeping the house entirely free from insects and disease germs. It is manufactured by the United States Mineral Wool Co., 136 Cedar street, New York, who will furnish samples, prices and an interesting booklet to architects and persons in the structural trades.

How often does one hear the expression: "Where in the world can I get one of those real, old-fashioned, New England iron cranes for my fireplace?" Usually one has to go to some ornamental iron worker and have the desired article made to order at considerable expense, delay and trouble. The H. W. Covert Co., 169 Duane st., New York City, carries these picturesque attributes of the old style fireplace in stock, made after the real New England pattern and at a price far below that one would have to pay the iron worker. The company's booklet, "Hints on Fireplace Construction," will repay the perusal of parties interested in interior decorating.

The fame of Glidden varnishes is well known and widely established. "M. P. Durable Floor Varnish," one of the company's products is declared by competent judges to be the most durable and elastic floor varnish on the market. It is impervious to water, does not scratch, bright, preserves the natural beauty of the grain of the wood and can be used with success over either painted or stained surfaces. It dries hard in from 15 to 24 hours and can be rubbed and polished or left in the gloss. Manufactured by the Glidden Varnish Co., Glidden Building, Cleveland, O.

Hitchings & Co., of 117 Broadway, New York, are specialists in the construction of ornamental green houses and conservatories. They build the best, are leaders in this line and thoroughly understand every detail of the business. Some of the finest green house structures in the country are the work of this concern.

The Stanley Works, Myrtle street, New Britain, Conn., is making a new ball bearing hinge for heavy doors in public buildings or large private dwellings that is a model of its kind. This hinge works as noiselessly and as light as the ordinary door hinge, while carrying three to five times the weight of the ordinary article. Two of these hinges will do the work on a heavy door of three ordinary hinges and do it better. Made in wrought bronze and steel either plain or highly ornamented.

The growing use of tile, due to its beauty, its cleanliness and the old world charm it lends to a well-designed interior serves to call renewed attention to this material. The Associated Tile Manufacturers, 2 Reeves Building, Beaver Falls, Pa., have four booklets ready, dealing with "Tiles for Fireplaces," "Tiles for Kitchen and Laundry," "Tiles on the Porch Floor" and "Tile for the Bathroom" that are the work of experts in the use of this medium. These booklets will be sent free to parties requesting them and are worth the attention of architects and others artistically inclined.

A sash cord that has been standard for over 40 years, that is specified by the United States Government and that is generally recognized in the trade as the standard of sash cord excellence, is "Silver Lake A," a braided cord, made of solid cotton, free of stretch and non-inflammable. It is made by the Silver Lake Co., 87 Chauncey street, Boston, Mass.

LOCAL ARCHITECTS BANQUET.

Annual Dinner of the Philadelphia Chapter, A. I. of A., at University Club.

The success of the banquet held last year celebrating the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects was such that the Chapter decided to hold each year, as near the 11th of November as possible, an informal annual banquet.

The 41st anniversary has just been commemorated by a banquet held at the University Club, at which about 50 members and guests were present.

Wm. D. Hewitt, the president of the Chapter, presided and Frank Miles Day acted as toastmaster. There were but two speakers, one being C. Howard Walker, the Boston architect, and the other Joseph Pennell, the illustrator.

Mr. Walker's address was an earnest plea for the cultivation of the artistic sense in the architect's work. He pointed out that it is always difficult to associate a business with an art and that the architect is expected to preserve an adequate balance between the two. He insisted that while under our modern condition the architect has in his hands the direction of a vast number of people and the disposition of large sums of money he must not allow the artistic end of his profession to be veiled by the mists of business.

He said: "American architecture has received the praise of architects of other nations because of its virility and its direct attack of modern problems. These virtues are those of ordinary common sense, and are not enough in themselves to justify much self-satisfaction. If we did not possess them, we should be poor indeed, and if we consider them sufficient, our estimate of architecture is low. The stress of education and effort should therefore be towards obtaining distinguished work in addition to utilitarian work, towards being artists in the profession as well as artisans. There has been too much said and too much praise accepted for work on account of its cost, its size, and its answering merely the conditions of utility, too little said in regard to its being a work of art. The buildings which have received the recognition of successive generations of men and which have been preserved as monuments even beyond their utilitarian usefulness, have not been those that merely answered the conditions of their time and did nothing else. They have been those which were works of art and therefore too valuable to be destroyed. The architect realizing this fact may well devote his efforts towards distinguished work, and fail to recognize the commendation received for virility and good sense as being sufficient to warrant the name he bears, that of an architect, dealing with the most comprehensive and noble of the 'Fine Arts'."

Among those present were: C. Howard Walker, Boston; Joseph Pennell, England; Wm. D. Hewitt, president; Frank Miles Day, M. E. Medary, Jr., D. Knickerbacker Boyd, Horace Wells Sellers, Warren P. Laird, Geo. I. Lovatt, Edward C. Evans, Paul P. Cret, Frank R. Watson, John Molitor, Wm. L. Bailey, Edward A. Crane, Wm. H. Cookman, T. N. Kellogg, Arnold H. Moses, P. E. Paist, C. E. Schermerhorn, Walter Smedley, John T. Windrim, T. M. Hastings, Wm. L. Plack, A. H. Brockie, E. P. Bissell, C. L. Borie, Jr., C. A. Ziegler, C. C. Zantinger, Geo. G. Bassett, Addison H. Savery, John Cope, John D. Thomas, C. Emlen Urban, Lancaster, Chas. Z. Klauder, Albert Kelsey, Edgar V. Seeler, Thos. Nolan, J. N. Uhler, Harrisburg, John L. Coneys, W. W. Potter, Geo. B. Page, Mr. Wood.

C. C. Ramsey is the new president of the Crucible Steel Company of America, succeeding Herbert Dupuy, who remains with the company as chairman of the Executive Committee. H. S. A. Stewart, John A. Sutton, H. D. W. English, James H. Park and George E. Shaw with Messrs. Dupuy and Ramsey constitute the Executive Committee.

The United States Metal Door & Trim Company has been organized in New York with a capital of $8,000,000. The company will engage in the manufacture and sale of hollow metal doors, windows, metal trim, fireproof material, etc. The incorporators are Earl C. Demoss, Brown Ralston and Frank C. Pringle, of New York City.

SUPERB ART IN THIS CITY, SAYS RETURNED AMERICAN.

Joseph Pennell Points Out Architectural Achievements and Natural Beauties in Philadelphia.

Joseph Pennell, etcher, illustrator, globe trotter and husband and collaborator of Elizabeth Robins Pennell, the magazine writer and traveler, says that Philadelphia has some of the finest things in all the world. He says that for art it is not necessary to go to Florence or Constantinople or Paris or the English cathedral towns, but that if you ship yourself off to Wayne Junction or to the water works at Fairmount Park or down to the fish market in Second street or scour out through Germantown or along the Wissahickon or sift your way through some of the downtown alleys in the river wards, you will come upon buildings to make your artistic soul mellow with delight.

"Nonsense" and "humbug," Pennell ejaculates when anyone says that the sunrise as you skid along the water into Constantinople harbor reveals a picture nowhere else in the world visible, or when another expander of the arts of the ancient world tells about some temple or other atop a blue hill in Greece. Forget it, old fellow, and go out on Broad street and look up at what the French call your "skeescraps," meaning thereby the skyscrapers, or your side lanes in the country, and you will find things just as artistic as any of the old, traditional things on the other side of the water.

Appreciation Is Lacking.

Joseph Pennell ought to know, too, when he talks like this. After many, many years in England, where he went to win fame after he was graduated here from the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, and after a boyhood spent in Philadelphia, he comes back to this city and gives us the flattering information that we have all the essentials right at our back doors, and our front ones, too, for appreciation of the best there is in art—that is, we have all except the appreciation and the solicitude for art things which should bid us to take care of our priceless treasures.

Mr. Pennell spoke his views right out in meeting at the dinner of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. The dinner was held at the University Club, and Mr. Pennell gave the architects a lashing for not appreciating better the fact that they are guardians here in this city of many superb specimens of splendid artistic, architectural achievements. In an interview after dinner, also, Mr. Pennell had some interesting things to say.

"Right here in Philadelphia you have some of the very finest things in the world, and in many ways your city is the most artistic in the world. Only you don't seem to know it or you would take better care of your fine old buildings. Each time I come back here I find that some of the very good ones have gone since my last visit, and at the present rate there will be none left at all after a few more years. It is a crime, for Philadelphia possesses some veritable treasures in the way of colonial buildings.

"You, in America, don't seem to appreciate what you have all over your country. For instance, there is nothing in the world to equal the view as you come up the New York harbor. It is superb. I got up just before sunrise and clambered up on the deck of the Oceanic as she lay at quarantine, and I tell you the sight I beheld of New York harbor in the sunrise was one of the most beautiful and inspiring I ever set my eyes upon, and I have traveled very extensively.

Following American Traditions.

"The artists of Europe feel that you in America have done something real and great. They feel that, you as people, are following out your traditions, though you appear to be unconscious of it. Those great 'skee scraps,' as the French call them, are indicative of a fine, solid achievement in architecture, and they are the natural growth out of your traditions and necessities. They are not in any sense imitative of anything, and you ought to be proud of them and of your great cities.

"I traveled out to Stenton and visited the fine old house there which has been preserved by the Daughters of the Revolution. Now that is one of the very finest buildings in all the world, and yet the people of Philadelphia never boast of it, and most of them do not even know that it exists. Two of the rooms upstairs are simply superb.

"The other day I went out into Fairmount Park. I looked down at the city from the Fairmount water works, and I think you have done one of the finest things in the world with your city. That view disclosed a solidity and an achievement of which you should be proud. It may have been accidental, but then Florence was accidental.

"There is altogether too much of this talk about the art and architecture and beauty in the countries of Europe. There is plenty of all these in the United States and a heap of them right in Philadelphia, but it seems that you must get away from the city for a space before you get to know what you have here at your home.

"As to the idea that you ought to have a comprehensive plan here, along which to develop, all I have to say to that is, William Penn did that for you. All you have to do is take care of the artistic treasures you have and develop according to Penn's plan in the natural course. And above all, you should preserve your traditions, the traditions of America and America alone, and develop upon them as a basis rather than go back to the past and drag out here on this continent some imitation of a defunct style and age.

A Fault in the Parkway.

"I have examined your parkway thoroughly and the chief fault I have to find with it, outside of the ridiculous pergolas stuck in with ludicrous effect with junk piles in back of them, is that the parkway should have ended against the reservoir hill, which should have been capped with a fine art temple or library or something of the sort.

"It may surprise you to hear me say it, but if Whistler or Turner could have seen some of the things I have seen about this city or the sunrise view of New York he would have gone mad about them, without the slightest doubt. Why, you have perfect mines of artistic beauty here in America and none of you seem to know it, or at least you don't say that you do. You are not growing old as they already have on the other side, and the finest thing about you is your inexhaustible and magnificent virility. Only, you need to live elsewhere for awhile in order to come back and appreciate, for the first time, what beautiful things you have here."

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Entered at the Post Office at Philadelphia as Second Class Matter.

The big Cement Show, for which preparations are now being made at Madison Square Garden, offers a striking example of the enterprise and foresightedness which have, within ten years, forced this medium to its present commanding position in the structural trades. That much of the success which has attended the efforts of the men behind the cement industry has been due to the adaptability and all-around usefulness of the medium itself is undeniable. Had cement been lacking in any of the qualities identified with it, such as durability, fire and weather resistance, economy in preparation and adaptability to a wide range of uses, this amazing growth would, of course, have not been possible, and yet, recognizing these substantial factors in its development to the fullest extent, no intelligent student can fail to be impressed by the part played in this development by the energy, brains, liberality and progressive spirit of the men whose interests lie in this comparatively new find.

While the brick men, the terra cotta people and the structural iron element have been droning along in the foggy methods of an older business era, these hustling, wide-awake, far-sighted and public-spirited cement pioneers have advertised and boomed, exhibited and demonstrated, experimented and expended, until to-day they virtually dominate every channel of constructive activity.

There has been nothing haphazard about this growth. Nothing unforeseen, accidental or unpremeditated. Given an excellent medium upon which to build, the cement interests have organized and planned and blared and trumpeted their way to the eminence which is now theirs.

No better advertisers are to be found in the whole wide range of the structural trades than the men who make and sell cement.

The finest trade literature, the best advertising, trade press and general, that goes out to the public of the present day, is that which issues from the cement trades.

These men started out with a profound belief in printer's ink. They mixed it with brains and used it without stint. The result is the establishment of a new industry, an industry running into millions of dollars annually and one that has given the world a medium destined to revolutionize the building of the future.

How this evolution was brought about, by what means, along what lines, through the agency of what devices, supplies a theme upon which pages might be written. The big Cement show now under way at Madison Square Garden is simply an object lesson marking one of the many mile posts along the way. If the other industries affected by cement are unable to see the virtue of shows patterned after the New York affair operated in conjunction with a liberal and intelligent use of printer's ink the fault is not ours. The old axiom here recurs to the effect that there is none so blind as he who won't see.

There was a time when the tin roof was considered not merely the best of house coverings but in the judgment of a vast majority of owners and builders the only roofing material worth employing. The tin-plate of that day was of such lasting quality that "the roofing problem," as it is known to-day, simply did not exist. If a man wanted a roof he ordered tin. The tin employed settled the roofing question so far as that particular building was concerned for at least fifteen years. In many cases this variety of roofing lasted twenty years without other attention than occasional painting. Mr. Hollingsworth Taylor, of the century-old roofing house of N. & G. Taylor, of this city has photographs in his possession of buildings in which the "Taylor Old Style" tin plate has defied both the elements and repair for a term exceeding twenty years. That there is much to be said in favor of the tin roof properly applied there can be no question. It is as nearly fireproof, to start with, as it is possible for any material to be. It stands up under any kind of weather and if the material is right and the job a good one, wears like oak timber.

Within recent years, however, there have come into the market a number of roofing materials that in economy of application and general durability have more or less seriously menaced the one time unassailable supremacy of tin plate.

Slag, sheet asphalt, metal shingle, asbestos shingle, process-coated materials of various kinds and varieties have made their appearance, until today the builder pondering the roofing problem finds himself bewildered and amazed at the extent and range of the materials submitted for his consideration. Each of these mediums has its special advantages. All, with few exceptions, have qualities worth serious attention. The architect who is abreast of the times selects that material best adapted, in his judgment, to the immediate problem in hand. It may be tin, it may be slag, it may be metal or asbestos shingle.

It may in the case of large buildings, with considerable roof areas, be sheet asphalt or one of the many other excellent coatings of that class. The question is one of choice and the field an extensive one from which to choose. An Ohio concern is putting out a corrugated metal roofing that interlocks in sheets. A local concern is pushing a metal shingle that is at once ornamental and serviceable. It is possible to obtain from another concern a metal shingle that duplicates the beauty of the picturesque Spanish tile found in the old mission buildings of Southern California. The building trades have kept pace in roofing progress as in other phases of structural development. We still have the good old tin roof and so long as honest manufacturing enterprise remains to turn out honest metal we shall undoubtedly continue to have it. As we have remarked elsewhere tin plate has many qualities difficult to better in the selection of good, durable, lasting and economic roofing. That tin has its competitors shows the growth of new ideas in this field of structural manufacture. The problem of today is one of selection with an embarrassment of riches confronting the architect, the builder and the building owner.

Still another suggestion in the matter of the site for that Convention Hall, and this time from no less a person than Recorder William S. Vare. Recorder Vare endorses the GUIDE's stand that Broad street is the proper place for this improvement, but thinks that Broad and Callowhill would be the ideal location. The Recorder points out that this site would meet every requirement of the situation, being central, close to the shopping and hotel centers, and within immediate reach of railroad facilities. While willing to concede that Mr. Vare's idea is by long odds the sanest and most practical yet advanced, aside from the GUIDE's own suggestion, we still cling tenaciously to the thought that South Broad street, rather than North, should be the site for such a hall as that projected.

If the possibility of using the hall for trade exhibits must be kept in view and the hall be so located as to permit the transportation to it of heavy machinery this emergency can be as wisely met on South Broad street as on North. Broad and Carpenter, taking in the block on the west side, north to Christian, and through to Fifteenth, would meet every need the projectors of the improvement have been able to advance, with the additional advantage of facing the beautiful Ridgway Library, opposite, with its flower beds and well-kept grounds.

Broad and Washington avenue, extending south on the East side to Alter street, and east to Thirteenth street, would meet the same requirements and give the new hall an outlook upon the handsome building of the United States Marine Corps. Recorder Vare shows his usual foresight, grasp, intelligence and public spirit in lending his influence to bring this great convention hall where properly it belongs—on Broad street. May we not induce the brainy young Recorder to go a step further and secure this improvement to his own South Philadelphia, which is closer to the shopping and hotel centres than any of the sites yet named?

The BUILDERS' GUIDE asks the attention of the architectural profession and the structural trades generally to the department now a regular feature of this journal captioned "Material and Equipment Notes." This feature differs materially from other departments of the kind in that mention in it is not limited exclusively to advertisers in this publication. It is the aim of the management to give space in this column to every new idea, specialty or device worthy of recognition without reference to the consideration that ordinarily govern features of this kind. The department aims to place before architects every week everything that is new and meritorious in the structural field. The fact that the manufacturers do not happen to be advertisers will exercise no influence in deciding the complexion of this column. The feature is to be written with a view to its value to the architect, the builder and the trade generally rather than to the business department. Manufacturers of devices, materials, mediums and specialties adaptable to the building trades are invited to send literature, samples and press matter to this office with a view to its adaptability for this department. "Material and Equipment Notes" is open to any meritorious idea useful to the trade. It is without prejudice, bias or self-interest. Help us to make it honest, helpful, readable and interesting by mailing us promptly new literature covering ideas that are of value.

Of course, any new house of any pretense now being built is wired and equipped for the use of Electric Light—the builders, the architects, the people have been educated to that point.

We wish to call your attention, however, to the necessity for care in the matter of selecting economical and efficient fixtures and lamps. The logical and easiest time to tend to this matter is when the specifications are being drawn up. We are always ready to help you!

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.

Special Meeting in January for Discussion of Road Construction and Maintenance. New Members Elected.

An announcement has been made by the American Society of Civil Engineers that on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 20 and 21, 1911, the days following the close of the annual meeting of the Society, three meetings will be held for discussing road construction and maintenance. The topics selected are as follows:

1. Preliminary investigations.
2. Relative value of three methods of carrying on work:
 - (a) That in which both labor and material are furnished by the contractor.
 - (b) That in which the material is supplied by the party of the first part and the labor by the contractor.
 - (c) That in which both the labor and material are supplied by the party of the first part.
3. Systems of maintenance.
4. The use of water, calcium chloride, light oils, etc., as dust palliatives.
5. Surface treatment with tars, heavy oils, etc.
6. The use of bituminous materials by penetration methods.
7. The use of bituminous materials by mixing methods.

The discussion on each of the above topics will be presented by an engineer specially selected for that purpose, and such presentation will be limited to ten minutes; the discussion of each of the subsequent speakers will be limited to five-minute talks in order that everyone interested may have an opportunity to give his views and that the resulting discussion, when edited and collated under the rules of the Society for publication, may be a concise summary of present-day practice.

All engineers interested in road building, whether members of the Society or not, are invited to be present and take part in this discussion.

New Members Elected.

The following candidates were elected to membership in the Society by the board of direction at the November meeting: As members—Herman R. Blickle, secretary and chief engineer, Ft. Pitt Bridge Works, Pittsburgh, Pa.; William H. Burger, assistant professor of civil engineering, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.; Charles E. Conover, designing engineer, New York State Public Service Commission, First District, New York City; John H. Frederickson, engineer and manager, James Stewart & Co., Denver, Col.; Maj. James P. Jervay, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., resident engineer, Gatun Locks, Gatun, Canal Zone, Panama; Herbert S. Kimball, chemical engineer and mill architect, Boston, Mass.; John M. Robinson, principal assistant engineer, Madeira-Mamore Railway, Manaos, Brazil. As associate members—William V. Alford, chief engineer, Pan-American Railway, Uruguay, address, Garretttsville, O.; John H. Ayers, superintendent of water supply and sewers, Manila, Philippine Islands; Ernest B. Black, vice-president, The J. S. Worley Co., engineers, Kansas City, Mo.; Luther H. Burt, assistant engineer, Bronx Valley Sewer Commission, White Plains, N. Y.; Charles L. Cadle, electrical engineer, New York State Railways, Rochester, N. Y.; Phillip Caro, shire engineer, Dalgety Shire, New South Wales, Sydney, N. S. W.; Stewart G. Collins, engineer, MacLeod & Smith, contractors, Duluth, Minn.; Edmund H. Doyle, city engineer, Miami, Okla.; George Duglinson, Jr., car allotment commissioner, Norfolk & Western Ry., Bluefield, W. Va.; Warren Egbert, engineer in charge, Siena Ditch and Water Co., Groveland, Cal.; Walter H. Fulweiler, with department of tests, United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia, address, Moylan, Pa.; Harry W. Gray, assistant professor of experimental civil engineering, Iowa State College, Ames, Ia.; William S. Hanley, chief draftsman, Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad, maintenance of way department, Chicago, Ill.; Jacob D. Jaques, general superintendent in charge of construction for Hungerford & Terry, Philadelphia, Pa., address, Woodbury, N. J.; Joseph N. McLoughlin, assistant superintendent, Montana Division, Oregon Short Line Railroad, Pocatello, Idaho; George E. Morrison, county engineer, San Miguel County, chief engineer for board of trustees of Las Vegas grant, city engineer and in private practice, East Las Vegas, N. M.; Charles S. Paget, Purnell & Paget, architects and engineers, Canton, China; Philip H. Parthesius, senior engineering examiner with New York State Civil Service Commission, Troy, N. Y.; Martin C. Polk, county surveyor, Butte County, California, engineer for Butte County Canal Co., of San Francisco, for Chico Construction Co., and for Butte County Drainage District No. 1, and city engineer, Chico, Cal.; Harry A. Raider, resident engineer, Kwong Tung Yueh-han Railroad, Canton, China; Augustus W. Rogers, with Anglo-American Oil Co., Ltd., London, England; Harry S. Slocum, assistant engineer, with Viele, Blackwell & Buck, New York City; Herman Stabler, assistant engineer, U. S. Reclamation Service, Washington, D. C.; William F. Tenney, assistant engineer, New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, Watertown, N. Y.; George W. Wade, assistant engineer maintenance of way department, Coast Division, Southern Pacific Co., San Francisco, Cal. As associate—Charles M. Christian, member of firm, Poughkeepsie Engineering and Contracting Co., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Are you aware that the Record and Guide is the only structural trade paper published in the State of Pennsylvania?

Mr. Otto E. Goldschmidt, formerly of the George A. Fuller Company, has removed his offices from the Singer Building to 30 W. Thirty-eighth st., New York. Mr. Goldschmidt is a consulting mechanical, electrical and sanitary engineer.

Henry Specht, Jr., one of the best known builders in the York Road section, has been extremely busy during the past few months. He has completed, recently, homes for Charles Bubrick, of the Forrest Theatre; A. D. Steever, on the Welsh Road, Crestmont; Dr. Beal, on Valley Road, Noble; Harry Reeder, at Glenside; Arthur Newbold, at Laverock, near Wyndmoor; A. Brooks and Howard Campaign, on Wyndmoor ave., Chestnut Hill; W. W. Adams, Jr., at St. Martin's; and George Godshalk, at Ardmore.

Nominees for officers of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers have been named as follows: For president, Reginald Pelham Bolton and B. F. Stangland, both of New York; for first vice-president, D. R. Lewis, of Chicago, and D. M. Quay, of New York; for second vice-president, Albert B. Franklin, of Boston, and F. R. Still, of Detroit; for secretary, William M. Mackay, of New York, and for treasurer, W. Q. Scollay, of Brooklyn, and D. D. Kimball, of New York. The election will be by mail ballot and the result announced at the annual meeting of the society, January 24-26, 1911.

The Makin Heating Company has been capitalized at $25,000. John S. Makin, Albert H. Dunn, Jr., Robert I. Morgan, Chas. Elmer Smith and Henry A. Schellman are directors of the new concern.

The Royal Ventilator Company, of this city, capitalized at $25,000, has elected William S. Furst, treasurer, and George Orr, of Atlantic City, and William Patten, Jr., and Chas. W. Lindsay, of Philadelphia, directors.

Another new Philadelphia concern is the National Hygienic Engineering Company, capitalized at $500,000 to manufacture machinery for sterilizing water and purifying air. The company is understood to be backed by Delaware capitalists and will erect a plant in Wilmington.

McCrum-Howell Co., of New York, and the Model Heating Co., of this city, in a joint announcement dated November 1, 1910, confirm the sale of the Model Heating Company to the McCrum-Howell Co. The McCrum-Howell Co. will continue the manufacture of the Model boilers and radiators and will retain the entire sales organization of the Model Heating Co. Announcement is also made that the McCrum-Howell Co. has taken over the Cameron-Schroth-Cameron Co., of Chicago; the American Air Cleaning Co., Milwaukee; the Vacuum Cleaner Co., New York; and the Sanitary Devices Mfg. Co., San Francisco.

Praise from Sir Hubert.

BUILDERS' GUIDE,
PERRY BUILDING, PHILA.

GENTLEMEN:

Without intending the least disparagement to the RECORD as it existed for years, the wonderful development along new lines which has carried it away beyond local confines and has made it far more than a mere recorder of statistics, calls for the most favorable comment of its readers.

The elimination of the transfers is still another step forward and your grounds for discontinuing this feature are well taken.

Very best wishes to such a progressive magazine and its publishers.

Yours truly,
D. KNICKERBACKER BOYD.

RESIDENCE OF MISS COX, CYNWYD, PA.

ARCHITECTS, DRUCKENMILLER, STACKHOUSE & WILLIAMS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

At a meeting of the Bath Portland Cement Company, held in this city, Samuel Clark was elected president, to succeed George W. Roydhouse, of the construction firm of Roydhouse, Arey & Co.; L. Raffetto was chosen vice-president, and B. F. Stradley secretary and treasurer. B. F. Stradley, of New York; F. B. Franks, of Allentown; Samuel Clark, of Newark; J. A. Horner, of Bath, Pa.; H. J. Miller and John A. Miller, of Pittsburg, and P. T. Wood, L. Raffetto, Howard B. French, C. Miller and George Roydhouse, of this city, were named to the board of directors. The plant of the company is at Bath, Pa., and has an annual output of 700,000 barrels.

The National Hardware Association elected at its Atlantic City convention Messrs. J. D. Moore, Birmingham, Ala., president; Brace Hayden, San Francisco; W. D. Taylor, Cleveland; A. J. Behler, Pittsburg; Harry L. Datten, Boston; C. A. Knapp, Sioux City; T. G. Walter, St. Paul; J. H. Boucher, Rochester, vice-presidents, and T. J. Farnley, Philadelphia, secretary-treasurer. The Hardware Manufacturers' Association elected Messrs. J. B. Jantz, of New York, president; C. H. Hubbard, Beaver Falls, Pa.; William H. Matthai, Baltimore, and Robert N. Peck, New Britain, Conn., vice-presidents.

An important change in the heating trade is reported in the sale of the business of the Model Heating Company, of Philadelphia and New York, to the McCrum-Howell Company, of New York. The Model Heating Company was established about fifteen years ago, and among the principal stockholders are A. E. Pfahler, of Philadelphia, and P. H. Seward, of New York. Mr. Pfahler, it is expected, will retire from the heating business, while Mr. Seward, according to the same source of information, will become associated with the McCrum-Howell Company.

Visitors to Philadelphia intent upon sight-seeing are always shown the handsome building of the Marine Corps at Broad street and Washington avenue, one of the finest examples of government building in this section of the country. On each side of the main entrance to this imposing structure stand two of the most effective lamp standards to be met with in America. These standards were designed by Rankin, Kellogg and Crane, and manufactured by the L. Schreiber & Sons Company, of Cincinnati. O. The Schreiber Company has a New York office at 1133 Broadway.

It has been estimated that three and one-half millions of the people of Greater New York live in 103,000 tenement houses.

The utility of the Dahlstrom Metallic Door received a rather striking demonstration recently on the occasion of a fire in one of the rooms on the twenty-sixth floor of the Singer Building in New York City. Everything in the room itself was destroyed and the doors badly blistered but the fire burned itself out in that one room. Had these doors been of the usual wooden variety the building would in all likelihood have been destroyed.

The Atlantic and Gulf Portland Cement Company, which opened a 1200 barrel mill recently at Ragland, Ala., is officered and controlled by Pennsylvanians. W. B. Shaffer, of Nazareth, Pa., is president; John S. Osterstock and H. K. Hartzell, both of Pennsylvania, vice-presidents; George Crane, of Lancaster, Pa., treasurer, and W. S. Wilson, of this city, secretary. M. W. Shaffer is general superintendent. The product of the plant is to be known as "Coosa" Portland Cement. The Kirkpatrick Sand and Cement Company, Birmingham, Ala., has been appointed sales and distributing agents.

The annual meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers will be held in the Engineering Societies' building, 39 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, January 24, 25 and 26, 1911.

Syracuse was that of the Pierce, Butler & Pierce Manufacturing Company. The exhibit was in charge of W. A. Schleit, assistant sales manager.

The next meeting of the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers will be held in the Hotel Astor, December 12, 13 and 14.

Thomas A. Edison has offered the new Socialist administration of Milwaukee the free use of his invention for pouring cement houses. Mr. Edison suggests that Milwaukee rebuild its slum district.

The Haynes-Thompson Company, of this city, is putting out an extremely effective and cleverly constructed mailing card, extolling the merits of the "Precise" valve manufactured by this concern.

For the convenience of their customers in Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, the Haines, Jones & Cadbury Company, of this city, has opened a new branch office, show room and warehouse in Richmond, Va. This is the third branch to be opened by the company, which has offices and show rooms also at Savannah, Ga., and at San Francisco.

Mr. Nelson P. Lewis, Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City, who was authorized to visit several of the larger European cities, with a view to securing information touching the practicability of pipe subways, reports that the cleanest and best ordered cities he found abroad were those in Germany, in which no such subways exist. In London and Paris, where a partial system of conduit subways is in operation, conditions were little better than in New York. Nowhere is there anything resembling a comprehensive system of pipe subway, the cost being regarded as prohibitive.

Good Enough for Uncle Sam.

Uncle Sam advertises in the Record and Guide as you will see by referring to our "Proposals" column. Isn't a medium that is good enough for Uncle Sam good enough for you?

Structural Trade Associations

The Master Builders' Exchange, 18 to 24 South Seventh street, Philadelphia, Pa. Charles Elmer Smith, secretary and general superintendent.

American Society for Testing Materials. Secretary, Prof. Edgar Marburg, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.

Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers. President, W. S. Mallory. Secretary, Percy H. Wilson. Office, 1329 Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

American Society of Civil Engineers. Secretary, Charles Warren Hunt, 220 West Fifty-seventh street, New York City.

American Society of Mechanical Engineers. Secretary, Calvin W. Rice, 29 West Thirty-ninth street, New York City.

American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Secretary, Ralph W. Pope, 33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York City.

American Institute of Architects. Secretary, Glenn Brown, Washington, D. C.

Association of Engineering Societies. Secretary, Frederick Brooks, 31 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers. Secretary, W. M. Mackay, 113 Beekman street, New York City.

Canadian Society of Civil Engineers. Secretary, Clement H. McLeod, 413 Dorchester street, west, Montreal.

Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education. Secretary, Henry H. Norris, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

American Railway Bridge and Building Association. Secretary, C. A. Lichty, 215 Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

The Builders' Guide

Visits weekly and continuously, architects, engineers, builders, real estate men, material and equipment supply houses in the Eastern States. It goes to lots of other people more or less directly interested in building and structural work. As a medium for reaching the best people in these particular lines, it is without a peer. An advertisement voicing the merits of anything connected with building construction, machinery, bridges, water works, sewers, street improvements, electric light plants, electric railways or concrete construction could have no better medium. Let us have a trial advertisement. We'll agree to convince you!

The Hupp Motor Car Company, of Detroit, is doing some very effective advertising in the trade journals. And just here is where President R. C. Hupp, of the Hupp Motor Car Company, displays the keenness of judgment that has made him a dominant factor in the automobile industry. The men who read trade papers contain more prospective automobile buyers to the hundred than any daily, weekly or magazine of general circulation published. President Hupp evidently is a case of the right man in the right place.

The National Association of Master Gravel and Slag Roofers is making a praiseworthy effort to standardize roofing practice. The headquarters of the association is the Whitehall Building, New York City.

In a paper read before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers recently, Frank B. Gilbreth, City Engineer of New York, made the sweeping declaration that many of the so-called "fireproof" buildings in that city are fireproof in name only. Mr. Gilbreth said he was strongly in favor of prohibiting the use of wood in building operations entirely.

Richard L. Humphrey, engineer and concrete expert of the Harrison Building, this city, was a visitor to San Francisco recently for the purpose of inspecting the concrete structures in that city. Mr. Humphrey will make a report on concrete building conditions in San Francisco and the West generally to the National Association of Cement Users, of which he is president.

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Supply Association, held at the Hotel Astor, in New York City, officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year as follows:

President—P. M. Beecher, Pierce, Butler & Pierce Manufacturing Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

First Vice-President—John A. Murray, John A. Murray & Co., New York, N. Y.

Second Vice-president—F. H. Locke, Locke, Stevens & Co., Boston, Mass.

Treasurer—Martin Behrer, Behrer & Co., New York, N. Y.

Secretary—F. S. Hanley, New York, N. Y.

Board of Directors—P. M. Beecher, John A. Murray, F. H. Locke, Martin Behrer, W. L. Blake, W. L. Blake & Co., Portland, Me.; G. R. Adams, Samuel Sloan & Co., Rochester, N. Y.; John McClure Chase, McCambridge-Cooper Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; John Mitchell, Jr., Washington, D. C.; F. W. Dows, Keystone Supply and Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. A. Tomlinson, Virginia-Carolina Supply Co., Norfolk, Va.; Leon Ballou, Dixon & Ballou, Buffalo, N. Y.

National Committee Representatives—J. H. Borton, Haines, Jones & Cadbury Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; H. B. Hallett, John Wood Manufacturing Co., Conshohocken, Pa.; D. L. Hamill, D. L. Hamill Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Frank W. Hubbard, W. B. Hubbard & Sons Co., Boston, Mass.; J. T. Duryea, Colwell Lead Co., New York, N. Y.

Mr. John R. Morron, of Chicago, has been selected by the Morgan interests, now in control of the Atlas Portland Cement Company, to succeed Mr. J. Rogers Maxwell as president. Mr. Maxwell remains with the company as chairman of the board of directors.

The Amies Road Company, Bourse Building, this city, is pushing "Amiesite," a new dustless and auto-proof road material. The company is sending out a booklet showing pictures of a number of roads on which the material has been used.

Warren Webster & Co., of Camden, N. J., installed the air washer used in connection with the fan system in the new Boston Deposit and Trust Company Building, at Boston, Mass. The fans, motors and indirect heaters were supplied by the B. F. Sturtevant Company, Hyde Park, Mass.

Fewer Unsettled Suits

Than any other important liability insurance concern now doing business.

Know what this means?

It means that, when possible we settle our claims out of court, avoiding the annoyance, publicity and disagreeable features incident to litigation.

Let us send a representative to talk over the cost of this kind of protection—the kind of protection that protects.

Here, There and Everywhere

The Frank Presbey Co., 3 W. Twenty-ninth street, New York, is preparing and placing some exceedingly effective advertising in the interest of the Dahlstrom Metallic Door Co., 76 Blackstone avenue, Jamestown, N. Y. The Presbey Company's latest "The Lesson of the Singer Fire," is by long odds the cleverest stroke of trade advertising of the year now closing. It illustrates rather patly what is meant by "good advertising."

House and Garden, for December, presents a series of most attractive pictures of the home of Dr. W. W. Gilchrist, at St. Martin's, this city. The accompanying article "The Country Home of a Composer," is by John Lynne Gray. Edmund B. Gilchrist is the architect.

F. W. Fitzpatrick, the Washington architect, urges that the United States Bureau for Testing Material should fix and apply standard requirements for every class of building material. He says it should be only a question of time when the government stamp will mean as much on cement and other products of building utility as it does upon food stuffs.

The city of Syracuse, N. Y., is drafting a new code of building laws. Among the advanced principles to be embodied in the new code are clauses interdicting the building of frame houses in congested sections and requiring tenement and apartment houses to be absolutely fireproof. Professor Ira B. Woolson, representing the National Board of Fire Underwriters, is taking a conspicuous part in the shaping of the new code.

A new expansion bolt for lay screws, just placed on the market by the Diamond Expansion Bolt Co., 90 West street, New York, is said to possess a number of improvements over any other expansion bolt known to the trade.

The J. Haddock Ventilator Co., is a new concern just incorporated under the laws of New York State, for the manufacture of ventilating apparatus. The company is capitalized at $100,000. J. Haddock and J. A. Macay, of New York City, and R. B. Cowing, Jr., of Glen Ridge, N. J., are the incorporators.

All of the booths, brackets, railings and other fittings of the coming Cement Show are to be of cement. Thus for the first time in the history of the industry there is to be a Cement Show that will be truly a "cement" show.

The Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co., of Morehouse, Mo., producers of the beautiful Red Gum, extensively used for interior trim, sold for $16 an acre the other day 25,000 acres of timber land in Rayville, La., that ten years ago was bought at prices ranging from $2 to $8 an acre.

San Francisco has a number of undesirable contractors who sprang into prominence immediately following the big fire in that city. Recently the architects undertook to exclude these undesirables from figuring on their work. As a result owners became suspicious and much friction resulted.

Muscatine, Iowa, by ordinance requires all walks in that city to be of concrete.

Ninety-two steel gates, each as high as a six-story building and 65 feet wide are being made at Pittsburg for the locks on the Panama Canal. They are to cost $5,500,000.

Leon Mazy, a Los Angeles decorator, has invented a new process for the embellishment of concrete structures to which he gives the name of "Cameo Cement." By this process it is claimed architectural decorations can be molded in the concrete and any color incorporated.

The Baltimore Siegwart Beam Co., incorporated recently with a capital stock of $150,000, has leased 6½ acres at Curtiss Bay for the erection of a plant. The Siegwart beams are patented, the invention of a Luzerne architect, Hans Siegwart.

The F. Wallace Armstrong Agency, North American Building, this city, is designing the attractive advertising literature sent out in behalf of "Genasco" Roofing.

A. W. Erickson, New York City, is being widely complimented by men who are able to judge the value of advertising, upon the very striking and original "ads" he is putting out for the Barrett "Specification" Roof.

According to Mayor Reyburn, the street cleaning contract for 1911 will be awarded to Edwin H. Vare without further delay. He said that after Rudolph Hering, of New York, had declined to examine the specifications under which street cleaning bids had been advertised for last month, the name of Samuel Whinery, of the same city, and also a well-known consulting engineer, had been suggested as an expert who could pass upon the merits of the specifications, that were put out by the Bureau of Highways.

The Mayor has learned, however, that Mr. Whinery is interested in the patent squeegee machine, the use of which was incorporated in one set of the specifications.

Europe's first "skyscraper" after the American model is to be erected in Milan. It is a consequence of the enormously increased value of land in the city. The building will be 150 feet high, having fourteen stories and seven elevators. It is to be built in the Piazza della Doma, on the site of the Cadican, the residence of the famous Duke of Milan, Giangaleazzo Visconti.

A feature of the seventh annual convention at Indianapolis of the American Road Builders' Association, was a paper by Joseph W. Hunter, State Highway Commissioner of Pennsylvania, on "Application of the Highway Law in Pennsylvania."

Material and Equipment Notes

There are brands the fame of which is so securely established that to think of the fields in which they apply is to have them recur with a certain inevitableness. For example, to think of shingles is to have the thoughts at once diverted to the name "Cabot." Cabot's Shingle Stains are so widely known that some effort is required even to recall the name of competing brands. A case was reported recently in Gloucester, Mass., in which the removal of a roof in use 26 years found the shingles in such a remarkable state of preservation due to the fact that they had been coated with Cabot stain that not a single decayed shingle was taken from the entire lot. Cabot stains are made from creosote, admittedly the best wood preservative known, combined with the finest and strongest pure colors. They last better than paint, cost less and can be had in a variety of beautiful shades. Samples and a catalogue may be had on request. Address Samuel Cabot, Inc., 141 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

The Kewanee Water Supply Company, Kewanee, Ill., manufacture a system of independent water supply that is most admirably adapted for country and suburban places that are not within easy reach of city water conveniences. The system is not unduly expensive, can be installed anywhere, and gives an abundance of water for bathroom, kitchen, laundry, lawn, stables, garage or other use. Thousands of these private systems manufactured by the Kewanee Company are in use all over the country and giving perfect satisfaction. Catalogue No. 44, issued by the company may be had by parties interested. Engineering service and estimates are supplied free to prospective buyers.

The beauty and utility of interlocking colored rubber tiling is well known to architects and decorators. The New York Belting and Packing Co., Ltd., 91-93 Chambers street, New York, make this tiling in a wide range of colors and designs and guarantee its durability. For churches, schools, banks, public buildings, theatres or private residences it is the most attractive of patent floor coverings, being sanitary, non-slippery, soft and comfortable to the tread and thoroughly washable and lasting.

Joseph Bardsley, 147-151 Baxter street, New York City, is making a checking hinge that is worth the attention of architects. This hinge, specially adaptable to pantry doors, enables the door to swing both ways, to close gently and without noise and to stop at once at the centre without vibrating. It goes in the floor under the door and leaves no exposed, ugly projections, either on door or floor.

The Born Steel Range Co., 2182 E. Ninth street, Cleveland, O., publishes a booklet entitled "A Glance Into an Ideal Kitchen," that will repay a careful reading by persons interested in home building. The same company also issues a handsome catalogue showing the advantages of the range and heating appliances manufactured by this house.

Complete harmony between the lighting fixtures and the other furnishings of a room are not infrequently difficult to obtain because of the limited decorative range of the average lighting fixture stock. This difficulty the Enos Co., Seventh avenue and Sixteenth street, New York, has made an effort to solve by making fixtures that comport with all of the recognized schemes of decorative design. These Enos fixtures are of the highest artistic excellence both in design and workmanship. The company issues a catalogue, No. 23, that should be in the hands of architects, decorators and home builders generally.

"His First Latchkey," is a fascinating little story issued by the Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., 9 Murray street, New York. This company manufactures the celebrated line of Yale locks and builder's hardware in almost general use in the trade. The company issues a handsome book "Yale Hardware For Your Home," which affords an insight into the variety and usefulness of the various specialties manufactured by the concern. Persons not in immediate touch with the newest developments in lock-making and household hardware will be amazed at the beauty and utility of the product of this widely known plant.

P. and F. Corbin, New Britain, Conn., are making a line of unusual door plates, knobs and builders' hardware, for use in homes fitted up along new decorative lines, mission, arts and crafts etc. These new designs must be seen to be appreciated. The firm is prepared to send a Colonial Booklet to persons interested that will give some idea of the scope and range of the design possible in this field.

Home builders and architects interested in garden decoration will find many valuable hints in a booklet issued free, by the Hartmann-Saunders Co., Elston and Webster avenues, Chicago, Ill. This company specializes in the manufacture of pergolas, sun-dials, porch columns and products of this class. Catalogues P-27, P-29 and P-40, are of particular interest.

"Why Wood Mantels?" is the title of a booklet issued by the Wood Mantel Manufacturers' Association, H. I. Bennett, secretary, State Life Building, Indianapolis, Ind. It contains a budget of useful hints covering the uses of the wood mantel in arriving at the "home" effect in building and decorating. A line to Mr. Bennett will bring the booklet free.

Liberty Tower, New York City, Henry Ives Cobb, architect, is of dull cream glaze terra cotta, manufactured by the Atlantic Terra Cotta Co., 1170 Broadway, New York, from the sidewalk up. The use of Terra Cotta for exterior walls makes a handsome building at a cost considerably below what would be required in the use of other and older mediums. It admits of the most elaborate ornamentation, is fire and vermin proof, and as durable as stone. The Atlantic Company is making the finest architectural terra cotta to be had and is prepared to execute promptly orders of any size.

The pressed steel sash pulleys manufactured by the American Pulley Co., 4200 Wissahickon avenue, Philadelphia, are so superior to the ordinary sash pulley as to forbid comparison. To begin with the American pulley is made of wholly pressed steel, electrically welded, made with plain axles, roller bearings or ball bearings as desired, made with a combination groove for chain or sash rope and coated with a compound that prevents all danger of rust. The company issues a catalogue which may be had on request.

In the rug field few firms in the United States carry a line to match the offerings of Woodman, 1504 Walnut street, Philadelphia. Mr. Woodman, who is a recognized connoisseur in rug selection, has agents in Teheran, Manila, Stamboul and other rug centres of the old world, on the constant lookout for the very finest examples of this form of artistry to be had. As a result he is able to show in his warerooms on Walnut street, rugs such as it would take years of diligent shopping abroad to duplicate. Which is merely another way of saying that the rugs here displayed are of a distinctive and individual pattern, beauty and weave. The home builder who wants the "something different" that differentiates quiet elegance from garish display takes his rug needs to Woodman.

By way of protecting prospective purchasers against inferior substitutes the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburg, Pa., places on every "Standard" fixture a guarantee label. All genuine "Standard" fixtures for bathroom, kitchen and laundry are identified by the green and gold label with one exception. The green and gold label bath is triple enamelled and guaranteed for five years. The Red and Black label bath is double enamelled and guaranteed for two years. This concern has issued a beautiful new book, "Modern Bathrooms," which should be of invaluable assistance to persons planning this class of home equipment. The book may be had for 6c postage.

The Richmond Sales Company, 160 Broadway, New York City, is selling the Richmond Suction Cleaner, one of the standard vacuum cleaning outfits, complete with every attachment, and ready for electrical operation, on a novel easy payment plan that will commend itself to a vast army of home-builders. One dollar is paid when the order is sent, and $6.00 a month thereafter for twelve consecutive months. The cleaner is delivered upon receipt of the first dollar and use is had of it while paying for it. The advantage of this plan is that the householder obtains the use of a first class vacuum cleaning outfit at a monthly outlay of less than it would take to rent such a machine and at the expiration of a year becomes full owner of it.

The quality of the machine is attested by the fact it is manufactured by the McCrum Howell Company. Full information regarding this remarkable offer may be had by writing the Richmond Sales Company, 160 Broadway, New York City.

Carey's Flexible Cement Roofing is a form of house covering that is particularly adapted to large factory buildings and other edifices of more than normal roof area. It is specified by some of the leading architects and engineers and is regarded as a particularly durable and effective type of roofing. It is made by the Philip Carey Manufacturing Company, 39 Wayne avenue, Lockland, Cincinnati, O., and on sale by more than 3,000 dealers. The company maintains local offices in every city of any size in the United States.

"Acme Quality" paints and finishes are the product of the Acme White Lead and Color Works, Detroit, Mich. It is claimed for them that they will go further, cover better, look better, and wear better than any other finishes on the market. The firm has an Acme Quality guide book which is furnished free to consumers and a color card for parties interested in the range of tints in which these paints and finishes may be had.

A Wholly Unsolicited Expression of Opinion From Mr. D. Knickerbacker Boyd, One of Philadelphia's Most Distinguished Architects.

Nov. 26th, 1910.

THE REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS' GUIDE,
PERRY BUILDING, PHILA.

GENTLEMEN:

Without intending the least disparagement to the RECORD as it existed for years, the wonderful development along new lines which has carried it away beyond local confines and has made it far more than a mere recorder of statistics, calls for the most favorable comment of its readers.

The elimination of the transfers is still another step forward and your grounds for discontinuing this feature are well taken.

Very best wishes to such a progressive magazine and its publishers.

Yours truly,

D. KNICKERBACKER BOYD.

Another proof that "THE GUIDE" is growing. Getting Bigger, and Broader and Better with every number.

A limited amount of space for sale to Intelligent Advertisers!

Let us have your "proposals." The GUIDE never fails to "make good."

This paper has been honorably conducted for twenty-five years as a local organ. The methods that formerly distinguished it in the smaller field now govern it in the larger.

More or Less Personal

H. M. Naugle, supervising architect of the Berger Manufacturing Co., of Canton, O., has an entertaining paper in the November number of "Concrete Engineering," on "Fireproof Buildings of Concrete and Metal Lumber."

C. W. Clark, until recently steam engineer for the New York Central and Hudson R. R. Co., has resigned to take a position with the Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation, of Boston.

George Brent has been assigned for the present to the post of secretary of the American Specialty Manufacturer's Association, made vacant by the resignation of James S. Austin. The Association's headquarters are at 100 Hudson street, New York City.

Paul Koning, president of the New York Metal Exchange, has resigned. James E. Pope, of the Pope Metal Company, will probably be his successor.

J. Wall Finn, of New York City, who designed the decorations for the St. Regis and Knickerbocker Hotels, is also responsible for the artistic touches evident in Shanley's new cafe, on Times Square.

William S. Coreant, secretary and manager of the McCreery Engineering Co., of Detroit, Mich., is sending out a booklet on ventilating that will repay careful reading on the part of architects and building owners. The booklet is called "Six Little Pointers," and may be had on application.

Sales Agent Henderson, of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Co., 1133 Broadway, New York, reports a steady and unprecedented demand for light-gray brick.

Horatio G. Lloyd, of Drexel & Co., has been elected a director of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey. J. Horace Harding, of C. D. Barney Co., has also been made a member of the board.

E. C. Felton, president of the Pennsylvania Steel Co., has gone to Cuba to inspect iron ore properties there.

I. H. Light, president of the Lebanon Valley Iron and Steel Co., has purchased the Duncannon Iron Works, at Duncannon, Pa. The company is to be reorganized with a capital of $300,000.

C. R. Hosmer, of the Bank of Montreal, F. W. Thompson, and H. S. Holt, have formed a new steel company which will establish a plant at Fort William, on Lake Superior, for the manufacturing of reinforced steel, wire and nails.

Howard Rhodes, of this city, has a very interesting paper in the October number of "Concrete Engineering," on the subject of "Unit Concrete Plates in Church Dome Construction." The dome discussed is that of the Linden Baptist Church, Camden, N. J., designed by Arthur Trescott and Arnold H. Moses, of this city.

President R. W. Lesley, of the American Cement Co., objects to the classing of stucco houses as "cement." Mr. Lesley says he believes in advocating cement for use as a fine and durable stucco, but he does not believe in calling houses so treated concrete houses.

John T. Rogers, formerly of the Midvale Steel Company, of this city, has opened an office as a consulting engineer at 165 Broadway, New York City.

John Flynn, former City Engineer of Troy, N. Y., has been appointed Special Deputy City Engineer in charge of preparing plans for the Ouacken Kill storage and reservoir.

James C. Hallock has been selected Deputy Chief Engineer of the Board of Public Works, of Newark, N. J.

John C. Olmstead, of Boston, Mass., has been commissioned by the city of San Diego, Cal., to supervise the work on the grounds and buildings for the Panama-California Exposition to be held in celebration of the opening of the Panama Canal.

ARCHITECTS ADOPT A CODE OF COMPETITIONS.

Object is to Prevent Profession From Being Victimized on Designs—Want Pay for Ideas—Unscrupulous Promoters Have Taken Advantage of Plans.

In order to prevent architects from being victimized by unscrupulous builders and promoters, the American Institute of Architects, the leading society of its kind in the country, has formulated a code of ethics governing competitions held for the purpose of selecting architects.

D. Knickbacker Boyd, president of the Pennsylvania State Association of Architects, in an interview on the subject, said:

"The chief difficulties to be contended with in mitigating the competition evil are fundamental ones. The first lies in the human failing of wanting to get something for nothing, which invariably works for economic wrong. Nothing can be right which is not founded on justice and equity. There is neither in the proposition that a large number of men shall give of their time, brains and money in order that one of them only shall receive for his services a sum often less than the aggregate of the amounts spent by the other men in securing nothing. Frequently they do not even get fair treatment.

"The other difficulty in which the architects themselves are the offenders, results from the proneness of mankind to strive for a prize, regardless of cost. It is this spirit which robs endeavor of its rightful gain and adds another loss to failure.

"In just such helpful measures as the formation of the competition code recently issued will the remedy be found. Immediate relief cannot be expected, but the ultimate result will be certain.

"Meanwhile, through public discussion, such as your paper is now inviting, this code will emphasize the injustice of the method previously obtaining. Individuals or corporations intending to build and determined to have their problems decided by competition will, with their attention thus called to the matter, invite fewer architects and remunerate those whom they do invite.

"On the other side, it is but natural to expect that a large measure of relief must come from the architects themselves. They must refrain absolutely from entering competition, unless under proper conditions and for just remuneration. It will then become an impossibility to secure reputable architects otherwise, and the others will not be wanted.

"The public is already awakening to the importance of the artistic and practical functions of an architect and to the fact that there is as much difference between architects as there is between doctors and between lawyers. Because less mystery attaches to the profession of architecture than to the other learned professions, and because its largest field lies in the designing of domestic structures with which nearly every man and many women consider themselves competent to deal, the profession has been able to speak less dictatorially, and the results of all architects' services have been looked upon as more or less identical. A skillful architect may, however, save his client several times the fee he would think himself saving by the employment of a less experienced one at a smaller fee.

"Further, in regard to competitions and continuing the professional simile, imagine a person who has just become ill sending for several doctors and asking them to diagnose his case and submit prescriptions for his approval, with the understanding that no one but the successful competitor shall be paid or retained—or apply the same method to a case at law. Would any reputable practitioners participate?

"So it will be soon with architects in their relation to the public. The same enlightened perception which has only recently recognized the advantage and the necessity of conserving our natural resources will also take heed of our necessity for the conservation of our natural energies, and the men who supply that energy will be equally as careful that their mental and financial resources are not needlessly wasted."

Thinks Some Architects Are Too Arbitrary.
(By a Perturbed Contractor in Building Age.)

"In the interest of the building trades in general and the carpenter trade, in particular, I would like to ask if it be possible for the contractors and builders' organizations to devise way and means to curb the arbitrary power of the architects. The way some architects act is almost beyond the endurance of the contractor. We all like to make a good job, and the architect, as representative of the owner, has a right to expect it, provided his drawings and specifications call for such, but if he specifies No. 2 material he has no right to expect No. 1. He usually wants a first-class job in material and workmanship at the expense of the contractor.

"Suppose, for instance, that the specification calls for No. 2 flooring or sheeting; he has no right whatever to expect the contractor to cut out knotholes, bad places, or dead knots, except when so stated in the specifications. As a rule, however, this is not done. No. 2 lumber is specified, and the architects wants the contractor to make No. 1 out of it. For the contractor it would be cheaper to use No. 1 at the start, but if he figured accordingly his figures would be too high and he would fail to get the job. It is the same with the siding. The architects want B or C in the specifications, but require A on the house, and so we might continue from basement to roof.

"The plans and specifications are the expression of the owner and his architect, and they can and have a right to expect everything that is written or drawn in there, but not a blamed thing more. It is certain that where plans and specifications call for a first-class job, both in material and workmanship, the contractor's figures will be correspondingly high, and that is what the architect tries to avoid by trickery, and he generally succeeds. On the other hand, the architects will claim that the contractors try to skin the job, and I am sorry to say this is also true in some instances, but they have to do it in order not to be swamped, for the architects and owners are so exacting that the contractor is trying to pull his end of the rope. This sort of play, started by owner and architects, sometimes results in their being beaten at their own game.

"If the architects would start out to do right, I will wager they will be treated right by the contractors. As an example: Architect A has a plan for Mr. So-and-So, and he wants Builder B to figure on it. Mr. B, after studying the plans and specifications, gives the architect a reasonable figure. In the meantime the architect has secured figures from Builders C and D, and tells Mr. B his figures are too high, and that he must try to do it for less, so B throws off a hundred* or so, and the architect tells him to call again after a few days to get his decision. With this lowered bid of Mr. B he goes to C and tells him the same thing he told B; as a consequence, C lowers his bid in order to get the job, and is told by the architect to wait a day or two to get his decision. Again, with the lowered bid of C he goes to D and repeats the same story, with possibly some additions to it—that the job has to be cheap, even if the material should be of a little less quality. D comes down and finally gets the job. As the architect knows that he has at last the bottom price, D is started on the job, and has material of less quality as the architect told him he could use, but now the trouble commences, for such-and- such material is specified and has to be used. As a consequence, D is skinning the job wherever possible.

COUNTRY HOUSE OF MR. B. F. PEPPER, CHESTNUT HILL, PA.

ARCHITECTS, BROCKIE & HASTINGS, PHILA., PA.

"Instead of opening the bids at a set hour and place in the presence of all contractors, and giving the job to the lowest or most able builder, they try to get the better of the contractors and everybody else, which, in my opinion is most reprehensible practice. Then, again, they occasionally have another game up their sleeves, which is, that details will be furnished as the work progresses. This is a very unfair practice, as the details are almost always more elaborate than the general drawings indicate. Again the contractor or mill-man gets the worst of the bargain, but he will try some way to squeeze out, or resort to some other trick to get even. It must be insisted upon by the contractors that plans and specifications should be complete before they are to figure on them, and should be so plain and correct that no verbal explanation of the architect should be necessary, for it seems to be the habit of the architect to explain it only from his point of view or according to his opinion, at the cost of the contractor's pocketbook. According to the general rules in most standard specifications, the architect's word is law and final. This is wrong, and should be remedied—the sooner the better.

"We have in all our large cities contractors' associations. Could they not do something to relieve contractors of this burden?

"Again, there is something else that I would like to bring before the readers of this department, which is this: Are the contractors going to stand any more of the architects' mistakes? It is enough to stand for their own, and they should not be obliged to be responsible for those of the architect, or anybody else. The architects take refuge behind the obnoxious 'General Conditions,' with which every contractor is familiar. This, in my opinion, is very unfair, and ought to be changed."

Perry Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Scoria bricks or slag paving blocks have been manufactured in the Middlesborough district in England for many years and shipped to this country in considerable quantities since 1894. This variety of brick is made from molten slag and annealed in a beehive oven.

Your "proposal" notices in the BUILDER'S GUIDE reach the biggest concerns in the engineering, contracting, material and equipment field. For "results" there is no better medium.

If you want to buy anything in the line of structural equipment or structural material drop us a line. We'll put you in touch with the manufacturers without any charge for the service.

American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

The third annual meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, on December 7 to 10 inclusive. The following papers are promised: "The Development of the Chemist as an Engineer," Dr. Fred W. Atkinson; "The Training of the Chemical Engineer Which Meets the Requirements of the Manufacturer," by Prof. M. C. Whitaker; "The Fitz-Gibbons Boiler," by Jerome Alexander; "The Manufacture of Hydrated Lime," by Richard K. Meade; "The Evolution of Portland Cement Processes," by Dr. Charles F. McKenna; "The Manufacture of Lignite Briquettes," by Henry S. Renaud; "Bleaching Oils with Fuller's Earth," by David Wesson; "Action of Fruit Juices on Metallic Containers," by Edward W. Gudeman; "Vacuum Distilling Apparatus," by Philip B. Sadtler; "The Principles of Sewage Disposal," by Geo. C. Whipple; "Sewage Disposal in Europe," by Dr. Rudolph Hering; "Sewage disposal in New York and Vicinity," by Dr. George A. Soper; "Sanitary Conditions in Their Relation to Water Supplies in the Vicinity of New York," by Nicholas S. Hill, Jr.; "The Unsolved Problems of Sewage Disposal," by Prof. Charles E. A. Winslow.

The rate for "want" ads, "for sale" ads, and miscellaneous want notices is $1.50 per inch cash with order. The GUIDE gets results.

Advertisers always like to know where you connected with them. When you write just mention the fact that "you saw it in the BUILDER'S GUIDE."

An Innovation in Church Architecture.

An interesting innovation is to be tried out in the construction of a parish house for St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal Church, at Fifty-sixth and Market streets, this city. The plans, by Henry E. De Hoff, provide for a two story stone and brick structure, 115x43 feet, to contain six modern stores on the ground floor, the meeting house proper being confined to the second floor. Here is an idea that we feel will, in time, be pretty generally imitated. Many of the smaller congregations, finding it difficult to meet running expenses, might by this clever expedient succeed in placing their finances upon a solid basis. True under such an arrangement the church property would be held liable for taxes, but granting this assumption the net income would in the vast majority of cases make the experiment eminently worth while. The idea is one that in the hands of a competent architect, should leave little to offend the most delicately organized of parishioners. Plans could be so drawn as to subordinate the stores in such a way that their presence would detract but little from the general ecclesiastical effect. We are not familiar with Mr. De Hoff's plans for the structure in question, but will watch their development with the keenest interest. The growth of land values in the larger cities is such that sooner or later plans embodying combination structures of the kind must become more or less common. Indeed the experiment is one that we shall expect to see worked out in other than ecclesiastical fields. Why, for example, would it not be practicable for a banking institution, reserving a suitable entrance, of course, to rent attractively modelled stores to occupants in certain not incompatible lines of trade? The Keith Theatre building, the Forrest and the Garrick, show how nicely this idea can be adapted in the case of a playhouse. Why not equally well in the case of other structures? Had the old Academy of Music in this city been modelled on these lines the revenue from the store properties would today net a quite considerable income. Club houses of the larger order, hotels and apartment houses would lend themselves with a special aptitude to this order of design. The idea is, on the whole, a good one. If it is not taken up by builders and building owners in some new and original phases within the next year we shall be disagreeably surprised.

Houses of Veneered Brick.

Canada is showing marked favor to a form of building known as brick veneer consisting of the familiar frame structure of the country towns with one layer of brick on the outside in place of the usual weatherboarding. It is claimed for houses built on this plan that aside from the immense saving due to the use of fewer brick and the increased warmth and stability, there are additional advantages of a hygienic nature due to the open or dead air space between the outer wall and the inner lath and plaster.

The cost of the houses built in this style is said to exceed but slightly the cost of the old-fashioned all-frame type of house.

Within the past three years hundreds of such houses have been set up in the Northwest and the idea is still growing in favor. If brick men were properly alive to their interests the veneered brick house would be introduced in rural communities throughout the United States. The difference in cost is so little that an intelligently directed campaign would practically do away with the frame type of structure where brick is obtainable.

Because of its insulating properties, and for hygienic reasons, it is not unlikely that all-brick structures will be planned with this dead air or open space between inner and outer walls.

Thinks Architects Too Arbitrary.

The complaint of a contractor that architects are unfair—reprinted from Building Age—is reproduced in these pages solely to invite discussion of the questions raised therein. That practices such as he describes creep into the relations between architect and contractor in the more or less crude communities of the West we are prepared to regard as probable. It is in the highest degree unlikely that any such friction marks the dealings of the artist and artisan here in the East. The trouble with a great many contractors is that when bidding on a job they do so calculating in advance on a certain amount of scamping. Naturally when the surveillance of the architect is such that this scamping is made impossible the dishonest type of contractor feels much aggrieved. All contractors, however, do not belong to the dishonest category, nor do all architects belong in the class that is above reproach. Both sides have certain rights under a contract and the rights of each are entitled to respect. The better class of builders exhibit a wholesome regard for specifications and the better class of architects a disposition to be just and reasonable. Discussion of "wails," such as that we quote, cannot fail to be of benefit in shedding possible light upon little moot points, the clearing up of which inures to the advantage of all parties concerned.

Fireproof Construction.

The Architect and Engineer, of California, in an editorial on the subject of Fire Proof Construction presents some startling figures on the waste involved in the old-fashioned type of building construction. "To date, this half year," says the Architect and Engineer, "we've done $514,000,000 worth of new buildings and repairs. That looks good and prosperous and progressive. It means approximately $1,000,000,000 worth of construction for the year. But look upon the reverse of the picture. If nothing extraordinary happens, no abnormal conflagration (the Baltimore and San Francisco fires were but two years apart) our year's fires will probably total up about 1,700 people burned, 165,000 buildings, $280,000,000 worth of property! The insurance companies recompense us in small part for this loss, but we pay them $3.00 in premiums for every dollar we get out of them, and then our fire departments, water supply and such items cost us $300,000,000 more, in fine, a net loss or cost of $564,000,000 for fire! If the billion dollars expended in new buildings means progress, this terrible loss represents retrogression, asinine folly, crass stupidity! In all the new buildings done this year only in 14 per cent. of it has any effort at all been made at fireproofing, and of that 96 per cent. of it is ineffective, abortive, in that in almost every case though some parts of the building were well done, some silly little thing was neglected that jeopardizes the whole structure."

That these "little things" in fireproofing are vital factors was evidenced here the other day in New York. A fire broke out unexpectedly in a room of one of the stateliest and most expensive buildings in that city. The contents of the room were completely destroyed. Thanks to the foresight of the architect in providing metallic trim and a metallic door the fire was unable to progress further. It burned itself out in that one room. But for this apparently trivial detail of metallic trim and door no man may predict what the result might have been! It pays to make buildings fireproof and in the fireproofing of buildings it pays to look to every detail. It not infrequently happens that some trifle overlooked or unconsidered is the loophole to disaster. A building, like a chain, is not stronger than its weakest part. To be fireproof a building must be wholly fireproof, not partially or approximately so.

The Use of Decimals in Figuring.

A strong movement is under way to induce contractors, engineers, architects and material men to adopt the decimal system in figuring work. Commenting upon this movement, Mr. L. C. Wason, president of the Aberthaw Construction Co., of Boston, remarked:

"In designing and figuring work in the decimal system, later converting the measurements into feet, inches, and fractions, to correspond with the dimensions given by engineers. If engineers and architects could be induced to use decimals it would be a great boon to the profession in general, and of assistance in the execution of work. I think co-operation could be obtained from the manufacturers rules, who would make it more difficult to get rules divided in fractions of an inch, and turn more of these into decimals, and also who would send out advertising literature showing the advantages of the decimal system. By the co-operation of the manufacturers and the engineers and architects, I believe a result could be accomplished which would be very desirable. I am looking forward with interest to the time when the Metric system will become necessary through enactment of law."

$10,000 Prize Design.

"It may interest American architects to learn that the submission of plans for the construction of a presidential palace, on the Villanueva Station plot in the city of Habana, have been invited," writes Minister John B. Jackson, Habana. "Such plans will be received at the Department of Public Works up to 2 p. m. on April 15, 1911, and the competition is an open one, $10,000 being offered for the best design and $5,000 for the second. A circular has just been issued by the appropriate commission in which the general idea and special requirements are set forth, and this will no doubt eventually be published in the Gaceta Oficial. All interested should apply to Cuban Legation, Washington, D. C."

The Coming Institute Convention.

The following preliminary announcement of the forty-fourth convention of the American Institute of Architects to be held in San Francisco January 17th, 18th and 19th, has been sent out by Glenn Brown, secretary:

"The American Institute of Architects will hold the next convention in San Francisco, Cal., Jan 17, 18, and 19, 1911.

"After the president has delivered his annual address the reports of committees will be received. To obtain prompt action and discussion the board has ruled that all reports must be in the hands of the secretary of the Institute one month before the convention, so that the committees appointed by the president may consider such reports and present their conclusions and resolutions following the reading of the report.

"In addition to the routine business of the Institute, the subject of interest before the convention will be the architecture of the Pacific Coast, on which papers are expected: 'The Development of Architecture on the Pacific Coast and the Rehabilitation of the City of San Francisco;' the 'Aesthetic Problems of and what the Coast Has Accomplished in City Planning,' by members of the committee of the San Francisco Chapter, J. G. Howard, chairman. Mr. Charles H. Bebb, of Seattle, will deliver a paper on 'The Salient Points of the Architecture of the Northern Pacific Coast;' while Mr. A. B. Benton, of Los Angeles, will present a paper on the 'History and the Present Status of the California Missions.'

"It is the intention to have the members of the institute and their families meet in Chicago, where a special train will be furnished to San Francisco.

"The members will go in a body to Los Angeles after the business sessions of the Institute have been held in the former city.

"From Los Angeles the members may return by any route they think most interesting, in groups or alone.

"Arrangements have been made with the Chicago & North Western Railway Company, from Chicago, going through Denver and Salt Lake City. From Los Angeles the return may be made so as to stop at Yosemite Valley and the Grand Canyons of the Colorado in Arizona. At this time of the year the Yellowstone Park will be closed and a return through Canada is not considered practicable.

"From the East, it is proposed that a car from New York take the Boston, New Jersey and Philadelphia delegates, and that the delegates from Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Louisville join the train enroute for Chicago."

At this time of the year the use of the various Electric household conveniences seem particularly desirable. It frequently happens that when we desire to use such apparatus, we find that our houses have not been properly wired, from the standpoint of having convenient outlets in the various rooms. Architects and Builders should be particularly careful to include in all their specifications for new buildings a proviso covering baseboard sockets in the various rooms.

MARBLE MEN BANQUET.

A Notable Dinner to the Officers and Members of the National Association.

The officers and members of the National Association of Marble Dealers were guests at a dinner, given in their honor, at the Waldorf Astoria, in New York City, on November 17.

The banquet room was decorated with flowers, and the seating arranged at round tables. The souvenirs were folding seal pocket-books with menu, toasts, etc., and the individual name stamped in gold letters, enclosed in an engrossed box. The sherbet was served in boxes of special design, representing a pair of oxen hauling a wagon loaded with a marble block.

The Marble Industry Employers' Association of New York is not affiliated with the National Association, and the complimentary dinner given to the visitors was, therefore, highly appreciated by them. Guests were from the Gulf to the Canadian line, and from the West as far as the Mississippi River.

Mutual matters concerning unscrupulous contractors and unfair methods in the trade were thoroughly discussed, with a result that in the near future trade benefits will probably obtain correcting these abuses.

A cordial address was made by Mr. John Eisele, president of the Marble Industry Employers' Association, fittingly responded to by Mr. Wm. H. Evans, president of the National Association.

Both Mr. Eisele and Mr. Evans in being introduced by the toastmaster, were received with cheers, for the former, the band playing "For He is a Jolly Good Fellow," and for the latter, "Maryland, my Maryland."

Mr. Benj. D. Traitel, of New York, Mr. Wm. Lautz, Sr., of Buffalo, Mr. Starkweather, of the Tennessee Exchange, Knoxville, Tenn., and Mr. Wm. J. Grant, of Milwaukee, made interesting addresses. Mr. Wm. K. Fertig, of the New York Association, acted as toastmaster. The following is a list of committees: Reception Committee—John Eisele, chairman; John H. Shipway, Benjamin D. Traitel, Ruthertford M. Shepard, John R. Taber, Walter W. Klaber, Frank S. Grob, John Leahy. Dinner Committee—William K. Fertig, chairman; Robert C. Fisher, Paul M. Schlichter.

"National" Guests.

The following is a list of individual members of the National Association attending the dinner, and the firms represented: Wm. H. Evans, C. R. Evans, E. M. Wellener, of the Evans Marble Co., Baltimore, Md.; Chas. L. Hilgartner, Andrew Hilgartner, of the Hilgartner Marble Co., Baltimore, Md.; J. F. Trade Literature.

"Buildings as They Should Be," is the title of a beautiful booklet issued by the Dahlstrom Metallic Door Co., of Jamestown, New York. It has an illustrated cover printed on marbelized board and embossed in gold and contains in addition to a "foreword" explaining the advantages of the metal trim made by this concern, a series of admirably executed little vignettes in half-tone of important buildings all over the country, in which this trim is in use. The booklet is the work of the Frank Presbey Co., New York, and it a superb example of artistic printing and the use of brains in trade advertising.

Concrete Troubles.

At a meeting of the Engineers' Club, of Cincinnati, Mr. John E. Moore, of the Robert W. Hunt Co., presented a very interesting paper on the failures of cement. He emphasized the need of testing cement, testing all cement. While theoretically, a 100 per cent. good cement is possible, yet in real practice, this standard is not secured. Non-uniformity of raw materials, uneven grinding and burning, and even different atmospheric conditions, tend to make a non-uniform product. Competition, however, is meeting the demands for the best product, and mechanical skill has gone far toward eliminating most of the troubles.

In regard to sand for concrete, Mr. Moore brought out some interesting points. We quote from the paper as follows:

"It has been my privilege to examine, from time to time, a great many samples of sand sent in from many different localities and these investigations have led to the belief that a large percentage of unsatisfactory concrete is due to poor sand alone. The custom of having the sand examined and reported upon, before using it on concrete work, is rapidly growing, and if the number of samples of inferior quality among those submitted for examination is any criterion, it is to be hoped that the habit will become universal. Some of these specimens have been beautiful to look at, but as far as securing any amount of strength is considered they were absolutely worthless.

"Fine Sand: Where at all possible a fine sand for concrete use is to be avoided. The function of the cement is to join together the other materials and a much better bond is obtained when sand with a high percentage of coarse grains is used. Sharp sands are generally supposed to be superior, but we frequently see excellent results from some in which the grains are nearly all rounded. In every case of this kind, however, it should be stated that the particles, while round, are mostly coarse.

"Too little attention is given to the matter of sand and frequently one is allowed to be used which is absolutely unfit for the purpose, simply because there is no better to be had in the vicinity. Sometimes the proportion of cement is increased to offset the poor quality of the sand, but while no doubt this will in many cases help materially, there are many sands which are so bad that no amount of enriching will produce a good piece of work.

"The best sands for concrete purposes are somewhat coarse, but exhibit a good gradation as to size of grains. The voids do not ordinarily exceed 25 to 30 per cent., but if otherwise suitable a greater percentage of voids would not be objectionable, provided a somewhat larger proportion of cement is used. A clean quartz or silica sand, if the grains are of suitable sizes, nearly always gives good results, but on the other hand, there are many really excellent sands which contain quite a considerable amount of hard limestone particles.

"Artificial Sands: Crushed limestone and crushed granite screenings are a good deal used in some places, but there are sometimes objections, especially to the former, which should be considered. A soft limestone will not furnish a good quality of screenings on account of dusting. Neither are screenings containing much fines desirable, for in using them it is practically impossible to obtain a perfect mixture, no matter what kind of a mixer is used. The very fine particles, too, act in the same way as an adulterant in the cement, thus having the effect of reducing the strength of the concrete. Tests, both for tensile strength and compression made in the laboratory may, and frequently do, show much higher results than with the best natural sands, but in practice the strength is not secured.

ARCHITECTS, SAVERY, SCHEETZ & SAVERY

"Chats" is another artificial sand considerably used in some parts of the country, notably the Joplin district, and other localities in the vicinity of lead and zinc mines. It is refuse from the concentration of the ores and often contains some mineral. Unless first very carefully examined, both physically and chemically, the use of "chats" should not be permitted. It frequently contains considerable sulphur in the form of sulphides which are liable to decompose from exposure to air and water, afterwards oxidizing and forming free acid. "Chats" from some places is shaley in character and when used in concrete gradually disintegrates and becomes soft. That, however, which is hard and flint-like and contains but traces of sulphur makes excellent material for the purpose.

"Points to be Avoided: Some of the objectionable features in sand which should cause its rejection for concrete purposes are the following:

Too high a percentage of fine grains. I repeat this and mention it first for the reason that so many cases of unsatisfactory concrete have come to my notice, the cause of which could be traced directly to this condition. Only recently a sample of sand was submitted to us for examination and report, the sender stating that considerable of it had been used in the top dressing of a reinforced concrete floor in a factory. It was likewise stated that there seemed to be no bond between the sand and cement and that it could be easily disintegrated by sweeping with a stiff broom. As a matter of fact, this condition is one which would be naturally expected to exist and as stated in our report it would be impossible to secure good results from such a sand even by doubling or trebling the amount of cement. In this case nearly 60 per cent. of the sand passed a No. 40 sieve and 100 per cent. passed a No. 20.

"Sand containing lumps of clay. This is an exceptionally bad condition which may exist in a sand otherwise suitable for concrete purposes. I once had occasion to examine some concrete foundation walls on a job where the cement had been previously tested and accepted. It was at first difficult to understand why there were weak spots in numerous places in the walls, as apparently all the materials were first-class and weather conditions were favorable. Finally a careful examination of the pile from which the sand was being used showed places where hard lumps of clay existed and the evidences were that these clay balls occurred in pockets in the sand pit. Afterwards a number of pieces of concrete were broken upon and lumps of clay of appreciable size were found in almost every case. In this particular instance it would have been almost impossible to have obtained a suitable sand by any ordinary process of washing.

"Sand containing considerable dust covering the larger grains. Such a sand can very frequently be rendered suitable by proper washing. Two of the samples which I have brought with me serve admirably to illustrate this condition.

"Sand containing traces or small amounts of oil. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in certain parts of the country, especially in the oil regions, arising from the use of sand of this description. A short time ago a box of sand was sent to us for examination and it seemed almost unnecessary to make any tests to determine its superior qualities. It was almost perfect as to gradation of sizes, apparently clean and in physical appearance, in fact, a most excellent material. On making up tensile tests, however, in comparison with a torpedo sand of known quality, the strength of the briquettes made from this sand and cement in the proportions of three parts of the former to one of the latter, was only about one-third that obtained from the torpedo sand mentioned mixed in the same proportions with the same cement. It was finally discovered by chemical analysis that oil was present in the sand and while the amount was very small it was sufficient to prevent the proper bonding of the materials. This was demonstrated also by extracting the oil from some of the sand and repeating the tensile tests, when a most excellent result was obtained. Unless one were on the lookout for this sort of thing it is easy to see how considerable work might be done before the trouble was discovered.

"Aggregate: As examples of the larger aggregate in concrete, trap-rock, limestone and gravel may be mentioned as the material most used, although crushed slag is at the present time coming into more or less prominence.

A good hard trap-rock is perhaps the best stone that can be secured for concrete purposes. It does not dust and the cement and sand bond with it almost perfectly. It is unfortunate, however, that trap-rock cannot be used in all parts of the country since it is not obtainable unless shipped in.

"Crushed limestone has probably been more extensively used than any other material on account of its prevalence in most parts of the country and if hard and not subject to dusting, should give good results.

"Gravel is coming into quite general use both in its natural condition, containing sand as taken from the pit, and screened, afterwards being mixed with the proper amount of sand. It is a very good material for concrete use but is subject to some of the same faults as sands, frequently containing dust or lumps of clay. When a natural sand and gravel just as taken from the bank, are used it is essential that they be examined to determine whether the relative proportions of sand (say smaller than one-quarter material) and stones, is correct. It is also a very good idea to ascertain the percentage of voids and regulate the proportion of cement used accordingly.

I once made a report on the concrete foundations for a postoffice in a town in Wisconsin where the concrete had proven unsatisfactory. The specifications called for a 1-3-6 mixture of cement, sand and gravel, respectively. The sand was a first-class one and the cement had passed all the requirements, but the gravel itself contained almost enough sand to be used with the cement alone. There was an inspector on the job, but he was permitting concrete to be mixed in the proportions named above. What they were really getting was more like a 1-6-3 mixture. It is not difficult to see that the cement could not possibly have filled the voids in the sand. As a matter of fact, the resulting concrete was very deficient in strength and was condemned.

Cinder concrete is not much in evidence at the present time but there has been a good deal of it used in the past. When used the utmost care should be taken in selecting the cinder. That from anthracite coal is usually the best owing to being harder, generally more dense and less liable to contain injurious amounts of sulphur. In any case cinder should be washed and screened to free it from ashes and dirt.

Some most excellent results have been obtained from the use of crushed slag, and there are several concerns that are making a specialty of it for concrete use. It should not be honey-combed and the sulphur content should be low. I understand that there are ways of pouring the molten slag which produce a very dense material.

In cold weather there is grave danger attending the use of gravel on account of the likelihood of frost being present. If such a material is used without first heating thoroughly there is no possibility of securing a bond, as the cement will not adhere to the frost. Of course, this statement is also applicable to sand and crushed screenings as well.

I had occasion last winter to examine some concrete stringers which had been laid in a lumber yard on which lumber was to be piled. The work had been put in in January with the temperature at or near the freezing point. The concrete was about seven weeks old at the time of the examination. In several places the outside had scaled off or at least become loosened in quite large pieces. Underneath this scale were evidences of frost. While the greater part of the concrete was hard and in good condition, there were spots in several places where it was soft and easily broken and the stones could be removed almost entirely free from cement covering. Indications of frost were found in all these spots.

There is no reason why concrete should not be laid in freezing weather, provided proper precautions are observed to prevent freezing until it has had a chance to thoroughly set. The sand and stone, as well as the water, should be heated, and the concrete, after being placed, should be protected to prevent chilling quickly. Other precautions are some times taken, such as adding salt to the water, etc., but except in extreme cases those mentioned above should be sufficient.

Another case of bad result of concrete laid in cold weather without proper precautions was the foundation for a filtration plant in Iowa, which was put in in mid-winter. It was learned that the water was heated but not the other materials. The concrete was laid in trenches dug in the frozen ground. The soil was mostly clay with a few inches of black dirt on top. There is no doubt but that the concrete chilled in a few moments after being put in place. In tamping more or less of the black dirt had been incorporated and was found in numerous places. Altogether, it was an excellent example of the abuse rather than the use of concrete, as tests showed the cement to be sound and normal in all respects and both the sand and stone were of good quality. It is needless to say that the concrete was in very bad condition and had to be removed.

Before leaving this part of the subject, I want to say that I think altogether too little attention is given by some to the mixing of the concrete. It is a matter of primary importance and should be considered accordingly. No matter how suitable for the purpose the materials may be, insufficient mixing will result in inferior concrete. Only the other day I asked an engineer, who has had a very wide experience, what he considered the most important thing in making good concrete. He said, "Watch your mix."

Typical Trouble. I will now briefly cite a few cases of failure which have come under my personal observation:

Acid Attack. The foundation walls for a large, altogether not heavy, building, were being laid and in some places concrete had been deposited in standing water. The footings at one corner of the building, which was adjacent to a large pile of cinder from a power house, were soft and apparently not at all set up. The cause of this was found by chemical analysis to be due to the presence of an appreciable amount of sulphuric acid in the water, undoubtedly formed by action of rain and exposure and then being washed out of the cinder.

Poor Concrete. There was a case which came to us, some time since, of deflection and vibration of a reinforced concrete floor of a power house, in which were stationed two 6-ton motor generators set about 6 ft. apart on the floor. It was found that the reinforcing material for the floors was nine-strand cable and even when the machines were not running the deflection could be observed with the eye from one end of the room. There was no extra support for the 8-in. floor, the columns were not heavy enough, and the distance between centers was too great. In addition to this the concrete was poorly mixed and insufficiently tamped. It was not a matter of much difficulty to criticize this work. Cables, being more flexible than solid rods, do not make as rigid floor construction even when the loads are well within the elastic limit of the metal. Again, there should have been independent foundations for the motor generators. As it was, every time they were started the whole building shook. I might also state that the roof, which was of cinder concrete, was very inferior in strength. The cinders were supposed to have been washed and screened before use, but there was absolutely no evidence of this having been done. The concrete was so poor that although several weeks old it could be easily removed with a knife blade.

"Arching" in columns. The walls and columns of a reinforced concrete office building in a town in Ohio had a honey-combed appearance in many places on the surface, the holes sometimes extending in an inch or more. The reason for this was that the forms were not tight enough and the mixture was put in unusually wet. The water in leaking through the forms carried out some of the cement and sand with it. As a matter of fact there was no danger to be apprehended in this case, although the appearance was somewhat unsightly. In a few places, in the columns, there were some fairly good sized holes on the surface. I believe this to have been due to the fact that too large a size of stone was used in the aggregate and this, together with the fact that there was rather an excess of reinforcing material, made it impossible to do much tamping, so that some of the larger stones wedged against the sides of the forms, leaving holes underneath.

Dusting. There have been a great many cases of trouble with concrete floors in offices buildings and factories, due to dusting and the fact that the top finish scuffed up. There are at least three possible causes for this condition. First, an excessive amount of troweling, especially of a wet mixture, which tends to bring to the surface the finest particles of the cement. This very fine material will not set up hard when separated from the coarser.

Another possible cause is not finishing off the top coat at the proper time in the setting of the cement. It has been mentioned before that too fine a sand will also produce this result.

Crazing. Failures which have been prevalent with floors also occur in many cases in sidewalks. In addition to the above, however, in connection with the latter, it often happens that the sidewalk is not properly protected against hot sun and currents of air. Crazing, hair cracks and often times even cracks are the results. Cracks also occur on account of improper foundation or poorly selected aggregate for the bottom course.

To sum up the foregoing, I believe, that if a careful examination of the materials composing the concrete is made, the aggregates selected accordingly, and a competent inspector is appointed to look after the mixing and placing, the greater majority of cases of failure in concrete work may be prevented, and it is to be hoped that the custom of having these details attended to will continue to grow as it is now doing until it becomes universal.

Material and Equipment Notes

Berry Brothers, Varnishes.

Commending the varnishes manufactured by Berry Brothers, Limited, Detroit, Michigan, in any of the big centers of population savors of carrying coals to Newcastle. The fame of the Berry product is so firmly established that commendation is unnecessary. So many cheap and worthless varnishes now flood the market, however, that it is wise to remind consumers of the wisdom of buying the best. The Berry concern is the largest varnish making concern in the world, has been established fifty-two years, and turns out an article that is of uniform finish and body. The firm will be glad to furnish literature covering the range of its stains and finishes to parties interested.

"Pee Gee Flatkoatt"

Pee Gee Flatkoatt is a wall finish that is superior to gloss paint, better and more durable than kalsomine, more desirable from a sanitary angle than wall paper, and of a better decorative effect than all or any of these. It requires one coat less to apply than gloss paint, has a softer and more velvety appearance, can be cleaned, will not rub off, fade or discolor, and is easy to apply and comparatively inexpensive. It is manufactured and controlled by the Peaslee-Gaulbert Company, of Louisville, Kentucky, who will send particulars on request. Flatkoatt is specially adaptable in large office buildings.

The "Richmond" Transom Lift.

Here is a device that merits the attention of architects—a contrivance that easily and noiselessly operates the transoms in a building without any other display of the mechanism than an attractive small knob in the door jamb. Everything else is concealed, the device being installed upon the back of the jamb before the trim is applied. No locks or hinges are necessary to hold the transom, the device itself meeting every demand. The mechanism is so simple and yet so strong that it can not get out of order. There are no cogs, springs or other delicate parts to go wrong in service. The makers issue a descriptive booklet, which may be had on request. Address the McCrum-Howell Company, Park avenue and Forty-first street, New York.

G. E. Mazda and Tantalum Lamps.

The General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y., is sending out a bulletin on "Building Lighting" that should be in the hands of every building owner, building manager and architect in the country. This bulletin explains the operation of G. E. lamps for building illumination, with illustrations and interior views. Over one hundred representative buildings are listed in which G. E. Mazda and Tantalum lamps are in use. The information it contains on the general subject of lighting is of importance to men interested in this detail of building and building management.

Metal Lock Tile.

Metal Lock is a tiling of rubber, metal locked and brass reinforced that is used as a floor coverings for passenger elevators. It is moisture proof, easily cleaned, almost indestructible, and in many respects the most satisfactory and economical floor covering made for this purpose. It is made in a variety of colors and designs and makes a handsome appearance. Samples, designs and prices will be furnished on request by the Metal Lock Tile Company, this city, manufacturers.

'Eagle' White Lead.

It is a standing complaint among painters that it is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain a good, serviceable white lead. Many of the older brands have so deteriorated in quality, following the prevailing commercial instinct, that they may be said to be living on past performances. Eagle White Lead is a product of to-day, selling strictly on its merits. To begin with, it is pure carbonate of lead. It is made by the Old Dutch Process. It is dried on copper pans before being ground in oil. Only the purest, raw, old, well settled linseed oil is used in grinding it. It is not artificially whitened. It won the award over twenty-four competing brands at the convention of the Master Painters' Association in 1895. It is made by the Eagle White Lead Company, 1008-1030 Broadway, Cincinnati, O.

Cutler Mail Chutes

This admirable office building chute is the result of twenty-five years of experience, and embodies the very latest improvements, all of them fully covered by patents. The Cutler Chute Company has equipped thousands of buildings, turns out work that is standard in this line, and does not charge fancy prices for its equipment. Full information on request. Address the Cutler Mail Chute Company, Rochester, N. Y.

American Radiator Devices.

The American Radiator Company, of Chicago, with local offices at 1342 Arch street, manufactures the Norwall Automatic Air and Vacuum Valve for low pressure steam heating; the Ideal Sylphon Vent Valves with enlarged venting ports; the Ideal Sylphon Tank Regulator, for public, office and other large buildings; the Ideal Expansion Plinth Blocks, affording a perfect, yet adjustable, finish where pipes go through baseboard, wainscot, etc.; the Ideal Sylphon Vapor Regulator, built to operate automatically from atmosphere up to three pounds; the American Hot Closet Radiator and the Ideal Regulator for water boilers and tank heaters, all of these devices are well known to the trade, well made, and standard in every way. Descriptive literature may be had on request by parties interested.

Autumn the Time to Paint.

The Paint Manufacturers' Association, of New York, has prepared five reasons for having painting done in the fall:

1. In the fall the surface is thoroughly dry. During the spring a surface which needs repainting is sure to contain moisture and dampness or frost, and it cannot be successfully painted until it has thoroughly dried out.
 2. When the wood is dry it absorbs more of the paint; the paint penetrates deeper into the wood, therefore gets a firmer hold on it.
 3. Paint cannot be as successfully applied in damp, cloudy or unsettled weather as in warm, sunny weather. In the fall the weather is more settled and uniform and generally warmer; therefore it is an excellent time for painting.
 4. A house needs its protecting coat of paint more in the winter months than at any other time. A house in need of painting should never be allowed to go over the winter without this protection.
 5. It is easier to keep the winter's moisture and dampness out by applying a coat of paint in the fall, when the surface is dry and receives the oil and pigment so as to cover and protect the surface.
- These reasons apply as properly to metal work, whether roof, conductors, eave troughs or flashings, as they do to wood work.

Here, There and Everywhere

The Lehigh Valley Structural Steel Company, of Allentown, Pa., has reconstructed its plant, and added thereto a 60x20 office building. F. G. Komp, formerly with the modern Structural Steel Company, of Waukesha, Wis., is vice president and general manager.

The following officers were elected by the Engineering Association of the South at the recent convention in Birmingham, Ala.: President, Mr. J. A. Fairleigh, Chattanooga; vice president, Mr. R. E. Brakemore; directors, Messrs. E. E. Betts, Vicksburg; T. P. Branch and A. V. Gude, Atlanta; J. C. Evans, Nashville; C. H. Ohme, Birmingham; H. H. Trabue, H. M. Jones and Hunter McDonald, Nashville.

The Pressed Radiator Company of America, manufacturers of the Kinnear Pressed Radiators, Pittsburg, Pa., has opened a Boston office in the Exchange Building, 53 State street, in charge of Mr. Frank M. Boykin. Mr. Boykin, who will represent the company throughout the New England states, will be glad to receive the trade at any time they happen to travel "down East."

A group of department managers connected with the New York office of the McCrum-Howell Company visited this city recently to meet the local selling representatives formerly with the Model Heating Company. The affair was arranged by Mr. H. T. Gates, secretary and general sales manager, who was accompanied by George L. Greenman, his assistant, and Ernest E. Bell, inventor of the Richmond concealed transom lift. The local parties to the conference were W. G. Culbert, manager, and Messrs. Dobbs, Whiffen, Klinger, Wash, Love, Balsinger, Bowen, Speckman and Grossman. A dinner at the Bellevue-Stratford followed the meeting.

The Austrian government has decided to devote $5,000,000 to the erection of workmen's dwellings in Vienna. The money will be lent at 4 per cent. interest to public bodies and building societies to the extent of nine-tenths of the value of the property owned by them. It is hoped through the creation of this fund to relieve the present hardship suffered by the workmen, who are compelled to pay exorbitant rents for miserable accommodation, and who frequently are unable to find any shelter, especially if they have families of children.

At the New York Cement Show the Graphite Elastic Cement Roofing Company, Cleveland, O., will exhibit a new kind of paint made, in dark colors, from "Gilsonite." This is used, with a cement, for all kinds of roofs and for painting steel, wood, felt and paper for protection against the elements. It is claimed that no pigments are used in the manufacture of this paint, which is made especially for use on roofs, providing a watertight, elastic protective membrane over the whole roof structure.

The McCrum-Howell Company state that in order to extend their sales organization to provide for the vacuum cleaning business, and at the same time better serve the trade with boilers and radiators, they have taken over the business of the Model Heating Company, Philadelphia and New York; the Cameron-Schroth-Cameron Company, Chicago; the American Air Cleaning Company, Milwaukee, Wis.; the Vacuum Cleaner Company, New York, and the Sanitary Devices Manufacturing Company, San Francisco. There will be no change in policy.

A deal of importance to public utility interests in the northwest has just been closed in Chicago by H. M. Byllesby & Co., electrical engineers, who have secured control of the Northern Heating and Electric Company, of St. Paul. The St. Paul company has valuable franchise rights in the northwest, and it was owned by the James H. Lockhart estate, of Pittsburg, who are also heavily interested in various electric heating and lighting companies.

The negotiations have been pending between the Lockhart people and the Byllesby company for two months. The purchase of the concern marks another step in the plans to gain control of the public utility companies in the state of Minnesota.

A contract calling for 4500 tons of structural steel for use on the Boston Elevated Railroad has been awarded to the American Bridge Company, 30 Church street, New York.

The American Society of Inspectors of Plumbing and Sanitary Engineers will hold its regular annual meeting in Milwaukee, February 6, 7 and 8, 1911. The convention committee consists of George R. Stolz, P. J. Madden and J. E. Mullane. Thomas J. Claffy, 215 Madison street, Chicago, is general secretary.

The projected organization of retail hardware men to resist the railroads being made upon their business by "catalogue" houses, referred to in these columns recently, is now an accomplished fact. The American Hardware and Supply Company organized at Pittsburg last week. M. R. Porter is the president of the new company, C. W. Scarborough, vice president, and W. W. Jacobs, secretary and treasurer. The executive committee consists of W. Scott, Carnegie, Pa.; Edward Ohl, Sharon, Pa.; J. A. Sword, McKeesport, Pa., and D. E. Hiber, of Dubois, Pa.

The Upper Kittanning Brick Company, East Brady, Pa., recently organized, has elected E. M. Houghtaling president, C. E. Foster vice president, George W. Foster secretary and H. Otto Wittpen treasurer. The company will have selling offices at 44 East Twenty-third street, New York, in charge of President Houghtaling, and with its two plants in operation a capacity of about 8,000,000 brick a year.

Colonel Charles M. Jarvis, former vice president of the American Hardware Corporation of New Britain, Conn., has been elected president of this concern, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Philip Corbin. Charles H. Parson succeeds Colonel Jarvis as vice president. Philip Corbin, 2d, has been elected to the directorate of the P. & F. Corbin Company, one of the American Hardware Corporation's subsidiary concerns.

A box party at Weber's Theater, New York city, was given on November 26, by department heads connected with Milliken Brothers, structural steel makers, in honor of Francis Dykes, general manager of the company. Those participating included E. C. Wallace, president of Milliken Brothers; J. M. Ellis, J. M. Ryan, Charles W. Eckhardt, F. H. Boyle, J. E. Jennings, H. M. Ward, T. J. Reeves, John Cargill, W. R. Waterbury, Richard Harragan, W. T. Voegel, D. H. Roney, L. B. Loomis, C. K. MacEarey, J. P. Pittinger, George Wambold and C. E. Buckton.

Mr. A. G. Mills, vice president and secretary of the Otis Elevator Company, states that the report that F. A. Roebling, of Trenton, had been chosen treasurer of the Otis Company, to succeed the late Lynde Belknap, is without foundation. No permanent successor to Mr. Belknap, on the authority of Mr. Mills, has yet been named.

The contract for New York city's new municipal building requires it to be turned over to the city completed on the first of January, 1912. The Thompson-Starrett Company is the contractor. The building was designed by McKim, Mead & White.

President Taft has appointed a Commission of Fine Arts to pass upon the location, plans, etc., of future buildings and monuments to be erected in the District of Columbia in conformity with an act recently passed by Congress. The appointees are Mr. Daniel H. Burnham, architect, Chicago, chairman; Mr. Frederick Law Olmstead, Jr., landscape architect, Boston; Mr. Thomas Hastings, architect, New York; Mr. Daniel C. French, sculptor, New York; Mr. Frank D. Millet, painter, New York; Mr. Cass Gilbert, architect, New York, and Mr. Charles Moore, Detroit, Mich. Colonel Spencer Cosby, Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, has been appointed secretary of the commission.

The Real Estate and Ideal Homes Show, which was given in New York city last May, proved such an interesting event that it is to be repeated in Madison Square Garden next April. Many of the participants of the last show have already taken space for exhibits, and a number of real estate companies will be represented among the exhibitors for the first time. The promoters of the enterprise express unbounded confidence that the show next April will rank as one of the most successful exhibitions of its kind ever held in the nation's metropolis. An effort will be made to have the ideal home presented in all its modern details, so that prospective home builders will be able to secure points regarding construction upon which they may base their plans for the building of a modern home that will prove satisfactory to them when completed.

Colonel Charles W. Raymond, chairman of the Pennsylvania Railroad Board of Engineers, estimates the cost of the improvements incidental to the erection and completion of the new Pennsy terminal in New York with its system of tunnels and subways at $159,000,000.

October was the most disastrous month for more than four years in the matter of fire losses. The value of property destroyed by flames amounted to $37,188,300, the largest noted since April, 1906, the month of the great conflagration in San Francisco.

A St. Louis man has invented a mirror through which one may see from the rear. This mirror is likely to be extensively used for office partitions in banks, factories and other places in which it is considered worth while to keep a vigilant eye upon subordinate employees. From the front the mirror is an ordinary mirror perfectly opaque. From the back it permits of every movement being seen by the occupants of the room or apartment in which it is used.

United States Senator Oliver, of Pittsburg, has taken the initiative in a new idea in building management—that of providing an emergency hospital for persons hurt or suddenly seized with illness. Senator Oliver has installed such a room in the Oliver Building owned by him in Pittsburg, and large office buildings all over the country are adopting the idea as an excellent one. One young physician and a nurse suffices for the work. An average of six persons daily have been treated in the little hospital attached to the Oliver Building, not more than half of whom were employees.

In Germany very considerable progress has been made in the manufacture of monuments and other ornamental designs for cemeteries from cement. The concrete monument is said to rival stone in attractiveness, to be much less expensive and to be practically everlasting.

Persian rugs and carpets to the value of $349,129 were imported by the United States from Smyrna last year; $3,137,014 from Constantinople and $143,392 from Bagdad. The finest rugs made abroad find their way to the United States.

More or Less Personal

The firm of Wilson, Harris & Richards, architects, Drexel Building, this city, has been dissolved, Mr. Henry W. Wilson withdrawing. The remaining partners, Messrs. John McArthur Harris and Howard P. Richards, will continue the business under the name of Harris & Richards.

Mr. A. P. Kibbe, chief engineer of the American Railways Company, this city, has resigned.

Mr. Richard R. Harris, Frick Building, Pittsburg, has been appointed general sales manager of the Pittsburg Steel Products Company.

The offices of the Bethlehem Steel Company, in this city, have been removed from the Pennsylvania Building to 1609 Morris Building.

Mr. Edward Hennessy, general manager of the Alpha Cement Company, of Easton, Pa., is regarded as a "live wire" in the trade. Mr. Hennessy is an experienced cement man, and a frequent visitor to this city, in which his company has important interests.

Chief McLaughlin, of the Electrical Bureau, is an enthusiastic advocate of the City Beautiful plans proposed and supported by Mayor John E. Reyburn, of this city.

Mr. Carl Zilenziger, city architect, successor to the late W. Bledyn Powell, and his capable assistant, Mr. Wolfsberger, are busy on plans for a number of new municipal structures to be erected next spring.

NOVEMBER MEETING OF PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER, A. I. OF A.

Important Conference on the Subject of Fire Protection and Equipment of Buildings and Cities.

The November meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects gave way to a conference on fire protection and equipment of Buildings and Cities, which was prearranged by the committee on program and the committee on Public Information.

This meeting, which was held in the auditorium of the Engineers' Club, developed into one of the most important of the practical meetings ever held by the chapter, and one whose results will be far reaching in proportion to the seriousness with which the work of co-operation thus begun is continued.

In planning this conference it was the purpose of the committees named to bring together all such forces as are working for the protection of life and property, the reduction of fire hazards and the betterment of building construction.

Invitations were sent to the representatives of all the above-named interests, and how generally the invitations were accepted and what importance was attached to the conference may be seen by glancing at the list of those who participated in the conference, among them being:

Herbert P. Onyx, engineer of the Associated Factory Mutuals Insurance Companies.

John H. Kenney, assistant secretary of the Philadelphia Fire Underwriters' Association.

Henry Clay, Director of Public Safety.

Edwin Clark, Chief of the Bureau of Building Inspection.

James S. Baxter, Chief of the Fire Department.

William McDevitt and P. D. Steward, of the Philadelphia Fire Underwriters' Association.

John E. Codman, chief engineer of the High Pressure Department, Bureau of Public Safety.

Frank H. Reeves and Chas. Elmer Smith, president and secretary of Master Builders' Exchange.

John C. Trautwine, engineering expert.

Wm. D. Hewitt, architect, president of the chapter.

In addition to the members of the chapter there were present also representatives of telephone and insurance companies, members of the Engineers' Club, the T Square Club and the University of Pennsylvania, as well as some of the city's firemen.

The presiding officer, D. Knickerbacker Boyd, in introducing the first speaker, representing the National Fire Protection Association, said, in part:

"These people have in their own practical way, by discouraging the use of combustible materials in building construction, been doing more for the conservation of our natural resources than almost any other agency.

"We find that when their suggestions are followed charges are reduced to a minimum, better construction is the result, and better protection of life and property is obtained.

"In thus placing a premium upon good construction, what they do in reality is to put a penalty upon poor construction, and it falls upon us, the architects, engineers and builders, to co-operate in this great movement by convincing those who have capital to invest that it is to their financial advantage to use only permanent materials.

"It behooves us, therefore, to come together in such meetings as these and to exchange helpful suggestions, the published results of which will awaken the public to a livelier interest in their own welfare."

Mr. Onyx on Fire Losses.

Mr. Herbert P. Onyx, the engineer of the Associated Factory Mutuals Insurance Companies, then read a paper which he had prepared for the occasion, during the course of which he said:

"The curtailment of the enormous fire losses which we have sustained in our country will not be accomplished until the subject of fire prevention and protection has received the same consideration by the general public that has been given to the stamping out of contagious diseases. Fire, like disease, has its origin in many sources; records show that fires have originated from over one hundred different causes, fully half of which can be traced directly to carelessness, whether gross or due to indifference; negligence and ignorance contribute largely to the heavy burden of fire tax which is shouldered by the public in general.

"How long would the citizens of any community tolerate a condition that would be conducive to the spreading of a contagious disease? Unfortunately, the general public is not aware of the conditions existing in many buildings throughout the land, which could justly be called 'death-traps,' and cause as much heartache and sorrow as the average disease epidemic—in fact, the chances of a fight for life are far less in many existing 'death-traps' than they would be in an epidemic of disease.

"We are coming out of the dark ages of waste and extravagance, but while we have made wonderful progress in the various arts, sciences and industries, future generations will marvel at the extravagance that was so long tolerated by us; we will be looked upon as having burned up in thirty years four and a half billion dollars, in spite of the fact that an equal amount was expended in fire protection. Here is certainly room for thought and action on our part, especially when it is considered that property destroyed by fire represents values absolutely wiped off of the face of the earth, and which cannot be replaced.

"Although it would be unreasonable to assume that fire can, under all circumstances, be prevented, it has been repeatedly demonstrated, however, that where the constructive features and proper protective appliances are installed and properly looked after the loss from fire can be reduced to such an extent that the cost of insurance is so low as hardly to become a factor in the expense account.

"The economic conditions governing the success of a manufacturing or mercantile industry to-day demand that the business shall not be interrupted by fire—in fact, business men are expecting more and more from their architects and engineers in this direction, and the time is at hand when the obligations of the architect and engineer to his client in the design and execution of any form of structure will not be fully discharged unless he has assured him that the means of preventing and protecting the property against fire have been thoroughly considered in the evolution of the plan.

"The National Fire Protection Association has a well organized laboratory which is doing a wonderful work in the promotion of better standards, both in construction and in protection, and the doors are always open to you, gentlemen, as it is fully realized that architects and engineers and builders are the direct medium through which the advancement in the curtailment of fire losses can be most successfully accomplished."

Mr. Onyx followed his paper by a suggestion made more timely by the fact that the Director of Public Safety was present in person, that organized and systematic inspections of buildings be made by members of the regular public fire departments under direction of the bureaus of public safety, backed by proper legal authorization.

The Director of Public Safety, Mr. Henry Clay, who attended throughout the session, followed Mr. Onyx, and gave a detailed description of the fire-fighting apparatus possessed by the city and explained the organization of the fire department. He took occasion to speak of the valued services of James S. Baxter, the head of this department, whose whole life has been spent in perfecting its practical workings.

Mr. Baxter then addressed the meeting and graphically described the work and life of the men under him, and also discoursed upon a number of lantern slides illustrating various phases of life in the service, which slides had been loaned the chapter by the fire department.

Views of the Fire Underwriters.

Mr. Kenney, the assistant secretary of the Philadelphia Fire Underwriters' Association, was the next speaker, and in the course of his remarks said:

"The paper just read by Mr. Onyx covers the fire underwriters' situation very generally, and what he has said will largely apply to the organization which I have the honor to represent—the Philadelphia Fire Underwriters' Association. The association's 'object,' as outlined in its constitution, defines clearly the work carried on by it. I will read it:

"The object of this association shall be the reduction of the fire waste of the city of Philadelphia, the establishment of just and fair rates, limited and perpetual, whereby the cost of fire insurance may be equitably distributed among all classes of manufacturers, merchants, private householders and others. For these purposes this association will establish a system of schedule and minimum ratings, giving the best risks the lowest rates, and adding specific charges for all deficiencies from required standards, making reductions from such rates when the deficiencies charged for are eliminated, and will also provide rules and plans for regulating the practices of the business of fire underwriting in the city of Philadelphia."

"The reduction of the fire waste is the association's principal object. The making of rates by schedule and by minimum is for the purpose of securing that and to receive from the insuring public sufficient income to pay losses and to make a reasonable, and only a reasonable, profit in the business.

"During the past several years it has been the practice of many architects and builders to confer with the association on almost all buildings of importance which they have constructed. Result of these conferences has been better constructed and protected buildings and lower insurance rates.

"As noted by Mr. Onyx, the National Fire Protection Association is doing very valuable work. In addition to its general work, it is now maintaining a publicity bureau. This bureau uses every available channel for acquainting the public with fire hazards, and its recommendations for reducing fire waste. In addition to publications of the National Fire Protection Association, one of its active members, the National Board of Fire Underwriters, has published what is known as 'The National Building Code,' recommending that this be adopted by municipalities as their code. This has been done in some instances, and in others it has been largely used, some changes being made to care for local conditions. In addition to the publications of the National Fire Protection Association and the National Board of Fire Underwriters, many insurance companies, inspection bureaus, local boards, etc., etc., have issued pamphlets referring to the desirability of having well built and well protected structures, good housekeeping and general supervision. Inspectors visit manufacturing and mercantile establishments, warehouses and other properties for the purpose of using their influence to keep the premises in a clean and safe condition. The local association does a large amount of this work, and as a result of its efforts in this direction many standpipe and hose systems, wired glass windows, fire doors, fire shutters, fire pails, extinguishers, etc., etc., have been provided, broken windows repaired, unsafe chimneys made safe, dirty buildings cleaned and conditions in general much improved.

"The relationship between the Bureau of Building Inspection and the association is harmonious, and it affords me pleasure to acknowledge the services being rendered to the public by this bureau.

"It is the desire of the association that architects, builders and the general public visit our office and confer with us in reference to the construction and protection of property and the reduction of the fire hazard."

The chairman commented upon the phase of the housekeeping situation mentioned by Mr. Kenney and congratulated the underwriters' association upon being in a position to thus bring about a compulsory education in cleanliness and order—another new sphere of usefulness developed under the modern plan of co-operation.

Mr. Kenney had with him copies of all the rules, regulations and suggestions issued by the National Fire Protective Association, as well as a copy of the national code, any of which, he stated, would be gladly furnished to architects or engineers upon request. At the suggestion of the chairman, Mr. Kenney said he would furnish a list of all these documents and the chapter's committee on public information will send a copy of the list to each member.

Fireproof the Congested Sections.

The allusions of Mr. Kenney to the co-operation of the Bureau of Building Inspection with the underwriters' association were particularly apropos, as Edwin Clark, the chief of the bureau, was present and responded with a drastic suggestion for the improvement of building construction in general and in "conflagration districts" in particular. He said, in part:

"I would recommend to the next Legislature the passage of a law which will demand that all newly constructed buildings in the section bounded by Vine and South streets and the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers be either incombustible or absolutely fireproof. Those built to a height of not more than sixty-five feet I would have incombustible. Those of a greater height should be built of fireproof material.

"Under the existing building laws the number of incombustible and fireproof structures which have been built in that section can be numbered on the fingers of two hands. Enforcement of a law such as I advocate would mean, therefore, radical changes in building construction. I believe that the section, which would be classified as the 'congested district' is destined to become the real mercantile center of Philadelphia. I am looking to the time when it shall house a number of important manufacturing establishments as well as many great mercantile houses. Hence my decision to make the district absolutely safe from conflagrations.

"The present laws do not require incombustible material in building up to sixty-five feet in height. Ordinary mill construction types of wood and iron are acceptable to the building bureau. The fire underwriters consider such risks good in the event of installation of sprinklers in the buildings. Under the proposed revised code, however, these structures must be made of material which cannot burn under any conditions, and a building above the height mentioned must have incombustible materials thoroughly fireproofed. In the event of my suggestion becoming a law, buildings of the ordinary type now in use will not be permitted to go up. I figure that the reductions in fire insurance rates which will naturally follow the adoption of such a law will be sufficient to more than make up the added cost to the builders which will result from the superior construction."

Working to Reduce Fire Loss.

Mr. John E. Codman, the chief engineer of the High Pressure Fire Service, was the next speaker. Mr. Codman read a paper giving in detail the workings of the two pumping stations and of the service lines themselves. He illustrated his talk with line drawings on the blackboard and with lantern slides which he described. This was a most valuable description of a system believed to be one of the finest of its kind in the world for the prevention of a conflagration and for the quick extinguishing of local fires without engines.

After this a discussion of the subject was participated in by John C. Trautwine, Professor Wm. Easby, Director Clay and Chief Baxter. Mr. Easby said:

"The first speaker of the evening asked, 'What is the engineer doing to help reduce the fire loss?' In answering this question I want to point out the assistance which the city officials can render to engineers in making designs. To begin with, the engineer has very insufficient data upon which to work. For many years I have taught the young men at the University of Pennsylvania the subject of municipal water supply, involving, of course, a question of protection against fire loss by the use of water, and in that time I have collected all the data I could find in reference to the design of distributing systems and find that they are extremely meagre. It seems that during the progress of fires but few reliable observations have been taken of the amount of water used, and that information is very necessary as a basis for design work. Almost any engineer who has a very imperfect knowledge of distributing systems can design one, but it requires experience and knowledge and a command of all the data which is available to enable him to supply certain assumed quantities of water at assumed pressures at certain points in the most economical way possible. The problem is an extremely difficult one, even when reliable data are available. Mr. Emil Kuichling has presented a formula for determining the number of fire streams which is now largely used by engineers.

"The economy in design in using a high pressure system which is entirely cut off from the ordinary system arises from the fact that higher velocities and therefore much smaller diameters may be employed than is usually permissible.

"There is a great advantage in being able to take water directly from the fire hydrants without the intervention of any fire engines, and this is provided for, to a very great extent, in these high pressure systems. The construction of extremely high buildings and the excessive ordinary demands made on existing piping systems have forced the construction of these high pressure systems. Furthermore, it is not possible to place the ordinary system under the pressures which are required to force water to these great elevations."

It was the general sentiment that the work so ably begun in the way of conferring on a subject of such vital importance should be continued and that other conferences be arranged for. This, it is safe to say, will be done by the proper committees in the near future.

Trade "Wants."

—G. W. Katteringham, architect, Natchez, Miss., is in the market for steel ceilings and slate roofing.

—J. R. Randolph, Luston, La., wants prices, samples, etc., on composition roofing.

—The Himalaya Planting Company, Tallien, La., wants figures on composition roofing.

—J. F. Halstead, Nelson County, Va., wants prices on metal roofing.

—The Fay Machinery Company, 126 Liberty street, New York, wants prices on a 10x12, or larger, double-cylinder, single drum hoisting engine, five or six feet in diameter, without boiler.

—The Columbia Concrete Company, Columbia, S. C., is in the market for a good concrete mixer.

—W. M. Rice, Amarillo, Texas, wants prices on white cement paint for exterior concrete and brick work.

—Dalcher Brothers, Jacksonville, Fla.; George Glein, Jr., 149 Broadway, New York; the Eastwick Engineering Company, 82 Beaver street, New York; G. W. Katteringham, Natchez, Miss., and R. P. Richardson, Jr., Reidsville, N. C., want figures on cement.

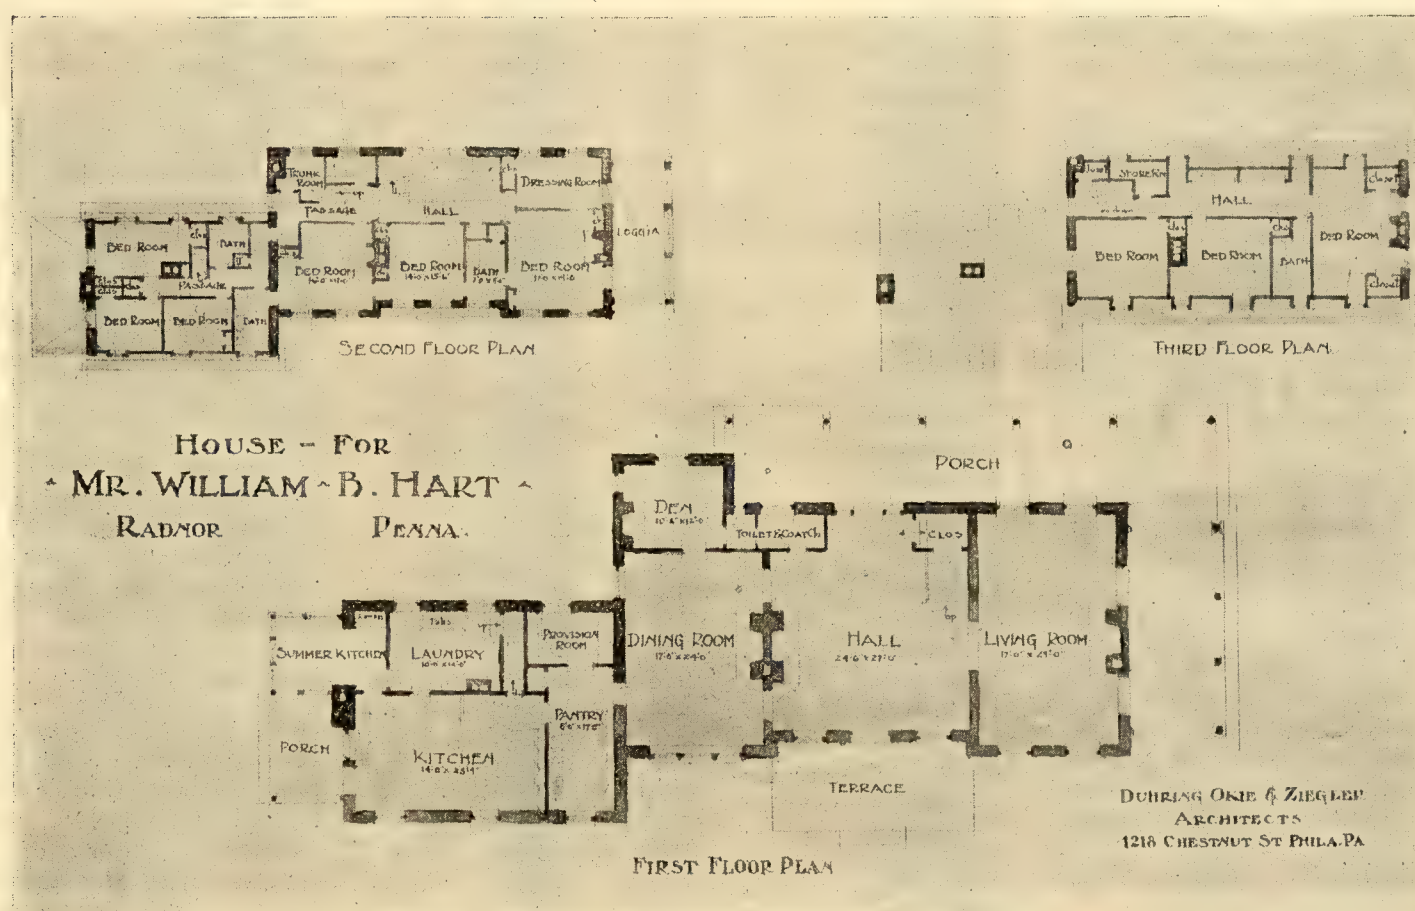

If you like the work we are doing to make the GUIDE a truly representative structural trades organ take the trouble to write and say so. A word of encouragement helps a whole lot sometimes.

For "proposals" there is no better medium in print than the BUILDER'S GUIDE. Why? Because among our regular readers are the biggest concerns in every avenue of structural activity.

A Philadelphia Cement Show.

There is to be a New York Cement Show at Madison Square Garden, opening this week, and a Chicago Cement Show, at the Coliseum, in Chicago, in February. Has anybody heard a whisper concerning such a thing as a Philadelphia Cement Show? And if not, why not?

Philadelphia cuts some ice in the cement industry. Pennsylvania is among the most important of cement producing States. Both Philadelphia and Pennsylvania are immense users of the finished product.

There is no better convention city on the map than this good old Quaker city. Our reputation for hospitality to convention visitors is nation-wide. We have places of historic interest to show, first-class hotels, plenty of theatres, the finest park in the world and Atlantic City, with its resort advantages, within easy reach.

Why not a Philadelphia Cement Show? And while we are talking on the subject, why are not more of the structural trade conventions brought to this city?

If some of "the big ones" will just try the experiment of holding a convention in this particular neck of woods we'll try to make the occasion one to be red lettered. We'll undertake to light up City Hall, tear the town wide open, hand over the keys of the city and make things generally home-like and inviting. Come on, Mr. Cement Man!

Let's have a Philadelphia Cement Show!

Foreign Workmen and the Tub.

Some surprise was occasioned recently by the disclosure that in an application filed by Mr. D. F. Creighton, of Pittsburg, as architect for the American Bridge Company, in the planning of a score of concrete houses at Gary, there was no provision made for bath-tubs—this, too, in face of the fact that the houses in question, in all other respects, are to be thoroughly modern and up-to-date. The explanation comes from one of the officials connected with the steel corporation:

"Five years ago," said he, "we erected sixty well-appointed houses for foreign workmen and their families, and placed bath tubs in each one. A year later a report was wanted from New York as to how they were taking to the tubs. An inspection revealed the fact that not in one instance was a bath tub ever used. We found that they were utilized as coal bins, etc. So we decided that it was best to omit the tubs."

Building Statistics for 1910.

According to statistics collected by an exchange from fifty-six of the leading cities building conditions while not as active locally as last year at this time, display about their normal activity throughout the country. It should be remembered, in this connection, that so far as this city is concerned, the year 1909 was a record-breaker. So that while the figures for the current year will show an apparent falling off of about $5,000,000 from 1909's exceptional summary, the totals will be found to tally fairly with those of 1908 and to sum up a very excellent average.

It appears that permits were issued during the month of November for 14,453 buildings at a cost of $56,670,355 as compared with 15,002 buildings authorized during November, 1909, at a cost of $56,476,789. The increase is $195,566, or less than half 1 per cent. The figures in detail are here given:

New York, Manhattan & Bronx	689	$14,287,631	14	..
Chicago	920	8,282,700	21	..
Boston	366	5,654,000	17	..

Totals 14,458 $56,670,355

According to these figures New York, Boston and the cities of the Pacific Coast show heavy gains while a number of building centres heretofore marked by unusual activity show more or less acute losses. These, however, there is every reason to believe, will prove to be only temporary and due to easily remedial local conditions. The situation in New York, for example, requires a word of explanation. In Manhattan, for instance, where a loss is noted of 59 per cent., there is to be credited a gain in the Bronx district of 182 per cent.

Here in Philadelphia, where suburban building activity reached a high pitch during 1910, all of which radiated from Philadelphia proper, no account is made of a very considerable portion because outside of Philadelphia County, and therefore not includable in the Philadelphia totals. The significant feature of the table include a gain in Pittsburg of 33 per cent. Kansas City also shows a healthy gain, whereas Brooklyn, Detroit, Milwaukee, Buffalo, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha show slight losses.

The figures on the whole, while interesting, are not necessarily conclusive of anything in particular. As Lord Disraeli once remarked: "There are lies, damned lies, and statistics." This latter, of course, without special reference to the statistics in question.

Planning the City Beautiful.

In the wave of enthusiasm now rolling over the country for "city planning," "municipal beautification," "city park systems" and other phases of "the city beautiful" there is one consideration, little discussed and seldom heeded, that should be given its due share of weight, at least by the older and larger cities going in for this class of development.

The usual tendency when a city faces the erection of some important public improvement such as an imposing school building, a stately municipal building, a pleasingly designed public bath, recreation centre, or convention hall is to look about for a suitable vacant piece of ground of the required size upon which to begin its erection.

If this vacant plot happens to be happily situated both as regards accessibility for the purposes in view as well as adaptability to the needs under consideration, well and good. If not, then let these questions go hang and build anyhow. The first desideratum in a project of the kind is a vacant site, and as vacant sites do not present themselves just where they happen to be in demand, the next best thing is to carry your improvement to the point at which such sites do exist.

At least, this is about the spirit in which such improvements are approached in the average city. And just here is where the planners of cities beautiful go to some pains to defeat the very ends for which they are, ostensibly, striving.

In a large and populous city the shortest cut to a city beautiful is the removal therefrom of the eyesores that make such a city ugly and repulsive. Slum settlements, hideous old buildings harking back to a cruder era antedating the development of present-day ideals, frame and dilapidated structures, old market house and factory buildings whose lines are a travesty upon taste and an affront to decent architectural models—these must be removed.

RESIDENCE AT LANSDOWN

ARCHITECTS, BUNTING & SHRIGLEY

To build beautiful structures based on intelligent modern ideals and permit these eyesores to remain like so many blots and blurs upon an otherwise pleasing landscape savors of a more or less fatuous and unreasoning order of municipal folly.

Instead, therefore, of seeking available vacant plots of ground, Mr. City Planner, upon which to erect your carefully designed items in a general scheme looking to the city beautiful, provide these sites by tearing down and removing such impediments as the municipal eyesores you now have.

The advantages of this plan are twofold: First, you find, in the vast majority of instances, a much more centrally located situation for your projected improvement than it would be possible to find limiting yourself to vacant plots, and, second, at a stroke you remove from the face of your city one of its ugly and unsightly features to replace it with one comely and attractive.

The public improvement that does not remove an element of the undesirable while providing the desirable is only half a public improvement, and the City Planning Commission, be its artistic personnel ever so high, that ignores or neglects the consideration here involved, is not only recreant to its opportunities, but faithless to the highest aesthetic ideals.

The city beautiful is that in which beauty finds its highest and ugliness its faintest expression.

It takes a Baron Haussman or "Boss" Sheppard spirit to grasp the necessity that arises in making over established municipalities for tearing down as well as building up.

SUBURBAN ARCHITECTURE.

An Interesting Criticism of Suburban Houses by a Well Known New York Architect

Mr. Thomas Hastings, of Carrere & Hastings, in a recent interview delivered himself of some decidedly pithy and well-considered views on the general subject of suburban architecture. The fact that Mr. Hastings views have a special applicability to New York suburban houses does not detract seriously from their value. The same conditions govern suburban architecture elsewhere.

"One of the most important causes of the unsatisfactory features of suburban architecture about New York," Mr. Hastings said, "is the lack of respect for the traditions that used to be handed down from one generation to another in old times and adhered to by the builders of country houses. Perhaps these houses were not especially interesting as architecture, but they contained principles which could be of great value to us if they were applied in suburban architecture to-day.

"One of those most important principles that were as a matter of course passed from one generation to another, was that one dimension must in the plan of an ordinary suburban or country house dominate the plan. Yet in the modern rather inexpensive house that we put up to-day, the requirements are generally such that it makes a house built on the plan of a square. Its height is about the same as its depth and its width. Thus its three dimensions are all equal as an artistic principle of construction. The ordinary house with two or three rooms on the ground floor, for example, has its width the same as its depth. Two floors make its height about the same. The result is a square which looks as if it could be rolled down hill. When one sees a row of them, there is almost an irresistible desire to knock over the first one and see if all the rest would not fall over in the same way.

"The old fashioned house of fifty or one hundred feet was always either planned so as to be wider and deep, or vice versa. So one of these two dimensions dominated. When you go to the country your attention will be called to a very simple little house, which is very wide and shallow, or wide and narrow. Here the ridge of the roof has a direction to take, whereas, in the other case, with no dimension dominating, there is no general direction for the roof ridge to take. It could just as well run one way as another. The little farm house that is long and shallow, looks better on the landscape. This is a serious principle of composition, one of the first principles handed down from one generation to another.

"These new suburban houses are generally too complicated. They would save money by making them simpler and building them of masonry—concrete, brick, rough stone, or anything instead of wood. By saving money in simplifying them, they could build them of permanent material and make them in addition, more artistic. There are usually enough ideas wrought into one of these wooden houses to build a dozen. The old houses we admire so much are always very simple and therefore more interesting.

"One very important factor in making a suburban house look well, is the way it is placed on the grounds. As a rule, a man buys a small parallelogram of ground. He makes a path of another parallelogram around it. He puts a house, another parallelogram, inside of the outline of this lot. None of them is in any relation to each other. If he would only remember that with a small site, if he would put his house on one side or the other instead of having a fringe of ground around it, he would have a considerable piece of ground on one or the other side, or at the front or back. He could have a little garden and he could have a little approach. Then the house and the ground would immediately become more interesting in their relation to each other.

At this time of the year the use of the various Electric household conveniences seem particularly desirable. It frequently happens that when we desire to use such apparatus, we find that our houses have not been properly wired, from the standpoint of having convenient outlets in the various rooms. Architects and Builders should be particularly careful to include in all their specifications for new buildings a proviso covering baseboard sockets in the various rooms.

"When you travel in Europe, you find that there is some 'color' in arrangement, some variety and imagination in the way that people place their houses on the grounds. The relation of one house to another, though accidental, is more interesting because they do not put it in the middle of the lot. They place it in the front, back or on one side. A lot 100 feet square, with a house 30 by 60 on one side looks well. These same principles apply not only to the modest suburban villa, but to the building of a handsome country residence.

"Of course the fundamental cause of a great deal of this uninteresting stuff is due to the ways that these districts are laid out, either by speculative builders or unintelligent city officials instead of having some kind of general scheme that will give a variety of lot.

"I wonder at the extent of the piazzas that I see about so many of the suburban houses," Mr. Hastings said, "and find no excuse for them. In the first place, large piazzas mean dark rooms. They shut out the sunlight and the air. They cost in some cases one-third of the price of the house. Then they prevent Americans from really sitting in the open air without a roof over their heads.

"Americans are not such lovers of nature that they require to be in the open air. Then they are not really out of doors when they sit under a piazza with a roof over their heads. If they really want to be out of doors let them take their chairs and sit on the lawn or in the garden. That is the way to enjoy the fresh air. A small porch is ample for the medium sized suburban home. To over-look it with it with piazzas, according to the present America mania, makes it much more expensive and a positive injury to the comfort of the house."

Company Selected to Make Block For Cement Show.

From among all the cement block plants in eastern Pennsylvania the Art Cement Block Company, of Wyomissing, has been selected by the Hobbs Cement Machinery Company, of Detroit, Mich., to make up their exhibit for the cement show in Madison Square Garden.

A building erected with blocks of this construction will have all the appearance of a granite wall for about the cost of a brick wall.

The Relation of the Architect to the Illuminating Engineer.

Illuminating engineering is aiming to do more than merely furnish an adequate number of foot candle to properly illumine a given space—it is aiming, as I understand it, to increase human comfort through the proper combining of light and common sense by making the places illumined more pleasant to live and do business in.

Necessarily—and here I repeat what I said before—if illuminating engineering is to achieve more than a passing success it must take into consideration harmony, color and the basic principles of applied design, writes Mr. George Pugh Smith in the San Francisco Architect and Engineer. For, unless these points are made one in the application of the new science, how is it to achieve results which will do more than furnish just the right amount of light for the case in hand? No rational man will maintain that simply lighting a space accurately affords sufficient ground for a science to stand upon; it must with its proper amount of light give the proper fixtures, and to do this it must understand how the harmonizing designs are worked out. If these points are essential, how is the engineer to obtain the necessary knowledge of them if not by constant study of the best which has been and of the best which is, with reference to architecture and its kindred arts. In other words, how do you expect to apply what you know to be necessary to change an ugly spot into a place of beauty unless you understand the principles of constructional design?

Again, how do you expect to designate the fixtures, which may be a part of the decoration of a "period" room, unless you know the particular style of decoration germane to that particular period? While I—and I believe all men interested in better decoration—abhor the "epoch" idea, still, in order that we may not commit anachronisms, we must study the works of those who have gone before.

Granting that all periods are composite, it follows as a consequence that we must understand not only one particular epoch, but the single ideas and the ideals which called it into being.

To whom shall we turn to get at these very necessary points?

The architect is the logical person, since in his studies he will have thoroughly familiarized himself with design and style since time began, and in his files will be found data, drawings, photographs and the like which will have material bearing on the subject in hand.

The idea, then, is to associate ourselves with the architect, so that he will consider us as much an essential to his whole as he does his experts on fireproofing, concrete and structural iron.

The question next arising is, "How are we to accomplish this association?"

In the first place, I should advise that where possible the illuminating engineer make application to the local architects' society or club. He will, in all probability, be rebuffed unless he has had a talk with a number of the more prominent architects beforehand and explained to them that by such an association his knowledge of what is proper in lighting would be enhanced, and his technical knowledge would be of inestimable advantage to them in any event. Again, the illuminating engineer is usually one to fifty in proportion to the architects of a given community, and in such a case there should be a warm reception awaiting him at the hands of the architects.

Outside of the great metropolitan centers the illuminating engineer is more a myth than a reality, for as yet there are so few men devoting their time and energies to illumination that the smaller communities know little or nothing of them, and will naturally be a little backward about acknowledging them and giving them recognition. It is to just this class of illuminating engineers, those whose profession is carried on in the smaller cities, that I want to make the following suggestions, for they more than those of their co-workers in larger fields need the assistance which every little bit of artistic and practical knowledge can give them. They will have the hardest time making their science recognized by the architects, since these latter men will know less of its aims, achievements, ideals and causes than do the architects of the great cities.

To these latter illuminating engineers I would strongly advise that they make it a point to meet and know personally every architect in their community; that they go to each and ask questions, show interest in the work of each and ask for suggestions. An architect is a man who takes pride in his work and who is striving to make it individual—as a consequence, he will grasp at a chance for enhancing that individuality when he is convinced that the chance is a good one. And who is there to say that by a better selection of fixtures and a better arrangement of lights the work of the architect will not be improved.

Get the architects to show you all the drawings they have—study them with reference to period and usefulness in your business—ask the architect to suggest to you the kind of fixtures he has in mind, for you will find that he has a general idea, and ask him to make rough sketches of those ideas. Then you submit them to a fixture house, and the draughtsmen there will return to you drawings which will be along the ideas you offer.

Another way: In every city I have visited there is a public library; in each of these collections there will be found books and copies of famous paintings in which will be found ideas galore of fixtures for lighting purposes. Study them. Learn the different styles peculiar to the different periods and the reason for each. Make sketches of your own along the lines in the pictures; then have the fixture man's artist work them up; or suggest them to the architect with the idea that they will be better for both parties concerned in their modified form because they will be called upon to bear modern light sources and to answer modern illumination and decoration questions.

If there is to be a decorator in the work you have in hand have a talk with him. He knows, or should know, what is right, and you could do no better than keep in touch with him.

Above all things, I say to illuminating engineers, unless you have studied proportion, design and ornament do not attempt to specify fixtures. Take your plans to your architect and ask his advice. Don't be ashamed to go to such a man, for remember he has put in a lifetime of hard study on these three points. You cannot expect to know what he knows unless you study, study, study—proportion, balance, line, color, ornament and their application. These are as essential to your success as are your formulae for computing an installed illumination. The more you learn of these essentials to modern architecture the more you will be a success in your own line.

Therefore, let me repeat what I have said, and let me urge upon every man who preaches the gospel of better light to take care of what he does and to take care of what he avoids in specifying his fixtures. A working knowledge of balance, line, harmony, application, building and their kindred arts is absolutely essential to your success as an illuminating engineer, for your work is dependent upon them, as is the bettering of their work dependent upon you.

Therefore, get into close touch with the architect by making him understand that you want to meet him upon his own ground by absorbing his ideas, by showing an interest in his work, by acting upon his advice.

Exhibition of the Architectural League.

The dates set for the twenty-sixth annual exhibition of the Architectural League of New York are these: January 29 to February 18. The last days for the reception of exhibits will be January 12 and 13. Friday evening, January 27, is the date for the annual dinner. Public lectures will be delivered on Wednesdays, February 1, 8 and 15.

William A. Boring is chairman of the exhibition committee, and Stowe Phelps is secretary. There are subcommittees on architecture, sculpture decoration and catalogue.

The Jury of Award on architecture is composed of Messrs. C. Grant LaFarge, Wm. A. Boring, Taber Sears, A. A. Weinman, Chester H. Aldrich, Henry Bacon, John M. Howells, Pierre L. LeBrun, Philip Sawyer.

The jury on painting consists of Messrs. Wm. A. Boring, John W. Alexander, Edwin H. Blashfield, A. A. Weinman, Kenyon Cox, C. Y. Turner.

The jury on sculpture comprises Messrs. H. A. MacNeil, Taber Sears, A. A. Weinman, Herbert Adams, Charles Grafly.

There will be a competition for the Medal of Honor, to be awarded for any architectural work in the United States represented at the exhibition by one or more photographs and one or more drawings. Competitions will also be held for the Henry O. Avery prize and for a special prize of $300 for the best design submitted by an architect, sculptor and mural painter in collaboration.

The assigned subject for the special prize is a mural fountain, designed with reference to being placed in the wall of a building occupying a triangle formed by two converging streets.

The architect is to display his design either in the flat or in the solid upon this background. The painter must apply his cartoon to it, and the sculptor must place his work in its proper relation to the whole, all at the same scale of three-quarter inch to the foot.

The judgment of the committee of awards will be based on the total effect of the design as a whole and the degree of successful collaboration of the competing groups.

Wood Block Paving in Berlin.

According to the report of Consul-General Thackara, the varieties of wood blocks for streets pavements in Berlin that are most used are Swedish pine and, to a more limited extent, the Australian tallow wood and black butt. Native pine and beech are also used in some German cities, also American cypress and yellow and pitch pine. The German authorities specify that all woods must be carefully selected and be free from knots and cracks, and it is considered unwise to use in the same section of pavement woods from different countries, or wood of different species.

The German method of constructing wood pavements is to dip the lower sides of the impregnated blocks with hot tar or asphalt and then lay them in a carefully prepared level layer of concrete, which is from six to eight inches in thickness. After the pavement has been laid the surface is covered with a thin layer of asphalt or tar, over which a layer of coarse sand or fine gravel is spread. This, when pressed into the blocks, forms a durable coating, which serves to prolong the life of the pavement. The sand or gravel is usually spread on the pavement once a month.

If the pavement is kept clean and good materials are used in construction, under ordinary conditions of traffic and weather, the surface wears at the rate of about two-tenths of an inch annually. German wood pavements last on an average from ten to fifteen years, but in dark, damp places not exposed to sunshine, the blocks decay in half that time. The approximate cost of block pavements in Berlin is three dollars per square yard.

Material and Equipment Notes

Ornamental Front Brick.

Fredenberg & Lounsbury, 381 Fourth avenue, New York, who claim to be the "largest distributors of front brick in the world," have on exhibit in their offices a number of decorative designs in artistic brickwork that show the possibilities in tinted brick properly handled. Architects are beginning to realize the admirable artistic effects to be achieved by the use of front brick. Messrs. Fredenberg & Lounsbury will be glad to furnish descriptive literature to parties interested.

Steel Skylights and Window Sashes.

Steel skylights and window sashes of various types, made by the David Lupton's Sons Company, Allegheny avenue and Jenney street, Philadelphia, are described in a 60-page pamphlet from that company. Considerable space is given to sash operating devices, and ventilators, louvers and fire-proof windows also receive attention.

General Electric Company Devices.

General Electric Company bulletins on lighting have been received as follows: Bulletin 4780 describes the Gem lamp which is said to have higher economy and greater illuminating power than the carbon, though lower efficiency than tantalum or mazda lamps. Bulletin 4781 illustrates the mazda series of lamps and compares them with others of the incandescent type. Various styles of fixtures used in street illumination are shown, and street connections, wiring diagrams and the computation of illuminative power receive attention. Bulletin 4777 is a special pamphlet on building lighting, which includes numerous interior and exterior views and gives data on estimates for lighting systems. A folder on decorative lighting outfits for Christmas trees has also been issued by the company.

The Thomas Acme Air System.

In the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, the Thomas' "Acme" air purifying, humidifying and cooling system is used to supply refrigerated air to the dining rooms, banquet hall, cafe and lobby. It is possible to maintain ventilation in the rooms with windows sealed, and circulate the air, purified and cooled to the temperature of 72 degrees Fahrenheit, while the outside air is humid, sooty and dusty, and the temperature possibly more than 20 degrees higher. To understand the working of the Thomas' "Acme" system, it will be well to send to Thomas & Smith, Inc., of 116 N. Carpenter street, Chicago, and obtain one of their booklets which describes the system and illustrates its mechanism. Actual installations of the plants may be seen in prominent buildings in almost any of our larger cities, and the booklet also tells where these installations are.

Electric Plate Warmers.

The construction of the Prometheus electric plate warmers is a logical development of a knowledge of the way in which air circulates, and the heaters are so placed that the heat is thoroughly diffused over the interior of the warmer, heating all the plates and dishes equally from all sides and giving a uniformity of temperature throughout.

No wiring or heating devices are in evidence anywhere about the interior of the apparatus, and connection to the external circuit is made at a convenient point on the outside shell and hidden from view. These plate warmers have been installed in many prominent residences in New York City and elsewhere, such as the Brewster residence, Delano & Aldrich, architects; Whitney residence, Oyster Bay, L. I., Philip Richardson, architect.

The Prometheus Electric Company, who are located at 236-238 E. Forty-third street, New York City, manufacture also electric ovens, electric kitchen ranges, electric air heaters and radiators.

The Wall Finish Problem.

The manufacturers of Mellotone have solved the wall problem, for their product is cheap enough so that it is not a great expense to redecorate for a tenant who wants a different tint, and is so durable that it will stand washing—a feature that for sanitary reasons is much appreciated.

In appearance, Mellotone has the soft effect of kalsomine finish, being perfectly and uniformly flat, no glossy spots marring the effect. It seems to have quite remarkable covering capacity, inasmuch as one, or at the most, two coats of a light color will very effectively cover a dark surface. It dries hard, quickly, and the variety of the tints make it possible to harmonize the walls with any color scheme of furnishing, or to soften or increase the light in accordance with the lightness or darkness of the room.

The information which manufacturers of Mellotone have to give about their product will be of great interest and it will pay to send for it to the Lowe Bros. Company, 450-454 E. Third street, Dayton, O.

"Kompolite" Flooring.

"Kompolite" is declared by its makers, the Kompolite Company of America, to be the cheapest, really high-grade, low-priced, flooring material. It is claimed to be safer than hardwood, as handsome as marble, terrazzo or mosaic, and more durable than cement. It has in its composition no sand, no sawdust, no clay, no cement, no free salts and no aniline dyes. The finished coat contains as high as 85 to 90 per cent. oxide of magnesia, fibre asbestos, cellulose and purest oxide colors. It is laid only with double, or expansion, asbestos-wood-cork bottom, and the finished top is not troweled, but is smoothed, scraped and planed by machines and then indurated. Kompolite is laid in plain colors, to match building trim, if so ordered, or is decorated with stripes or ornaments. It is also laid in marbleized or tiled effect. It is specified by many leading architects, for whom it has solved flooring problems satisfactorily.

Boiler Rating Guaranteed.

The Gorton & Lidgerwood Company, of New York City, is making a departure from the usual custom of manufacturers of boilers, by guaranteeing the rating of the Gorton Side Feed Boiler. It warrants the boilers of each size to carry the amount of radiation given in its descriptive catalogue, and if the boiler does not meet the guarantee the loss is the company's and not the purchaser's. A new catalogue, just issued, with the guaranteed ratings, can be had for the asking.

Cobaltum Enamel Sinks.

Cobaltum enamel is a blue-gray speckled enamel of fine texture possessing the strength and durability of white enamel. It must not be confused with the enamel put on granite or agate ware kitchen utensils, but is particularly suited for kitchen sinks, laundry trays, slop sinks, wash sinks, and similar fixtures which are subjected to continuous hard usage. It does not readily show stains or the effects of abuse. Cobaltum enameled sinks are made by the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburg, Pa., and each, if furnished with the "Eclipse" strainer and coupling, is guaranteed by the makers. This coupling and strainer does the same work as the old sink coupling and strainer, but it is more cleanly and sanitary, according to the makers, simpler and more effective, easier to install or remove, and cannot injure the sink by causing the enamel to crack or chip at the outlet.

A New Directory Board.

This board is very simple in construction, and we understand is sold at a very reasonable price. The frame is of hard wood, although we understand they can be made of metal. The names are in white letters which are placed on heavy black cardboard strips. This gives a good contrast and makes it easily possible to find a name. The back of the board is a metal sheet with slots punched in to hold the cards. This is done in such a manner that the face of the board is flat. The changes are made from the front and blank cards are furnished where names are not needed. A glass door covers the front which is opened by hinges at the side. A strip of green felt is placed between the door and cards for the purpose of preventing dust sifting in.

Besides the regular directory board, this company also are making a floor board. In the larger buildings, it is a distinct advantage to have a directory of the tenants on each floor, and this class of board is becoming more popular every year.

We predict that before many years, every building of size will have boards installed on each floor, besides the directory at the entrance. The boards described are manufactured by the Directory Board Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Building Trades Regret Decision.

Expressing disapproval of the decision affecting the $8,000,000 loan bill and the "pay-as-you-go" act cases, handed down by Judges Wilson, Audenried and Carr in Court of Common Pleas, No. 4, the Executive Council of the Allied Building Trades has passed a resolution to the effect that thousands of working men would suffer from the crippling of the city's finances.

The resolution asserted that the failure of the city to receive the money provided by the loan bill would deprive a great number of workmen from receiving wages for work on certain contemplated municipal improvements which lack of funds now threatened to delay.

Mention BUILDER'S GUIDE when writing advertisers.

Here, There and Everywhere

M. S. Baldwin, advertising man of the Otis Elevator Company, is being warmly congratulated on the striking and attractive advertising copy he is preparing in the interest of this sterling old concern. Mr. Baldwin's back cover design in the Aviation Number of the Scientific American, "The Otis Lifts the World," was by long odds one of the cleverest stunts of the year. Mr. Baldwin and his brainy young assistant, H. I. Clark, Jr., get out "The Indicator," a most capably written and tastefully illustrated house organ, issued in behalf of the Otis Company.

While we are on the subject of house organs, a very successful example of what this class of advertising should be, is the dainty little booklet issued from time to time to boost the ware of the Trenton Potteries Company, of Trenton, N. J. This concern, the fame of whose product is nation-wide, has in Mr. King Atkins an advertising man of originality and judgment, as may be seen by reference to the copy sent out over the Trenton Potteries imprint.

Among important cement concerns who added to the attractiveness of their exhibits at the Cement Show just closed by maintaining appropriately fitted quarters for the reception of visitors, were the Edison and Atlas Companies. The Edison Company received visitors on the ninth floor of the St. James' Building, 1133 Broadway; the Atlas Company at the Hotel Victoria, Broadway and Twenty-seventh streets.

L. D. Retman is president and treasurer and M. Retman secretary of the Star Fireproof Door and Sash Company, 2650 and 52 Park avenue. The Company which is of recent organization will engage in the manufacture of every variety of metal covered woodwork.

The New York Lumber Trade Association will hold its annual banquet at the Hoffman House, on the evening of January 26.

A holiday bulletin, cautioning householders against the danger of using candles, cotton or other inflammable and dangerous ornaments as Christmas tree decorations, is being circulated by the National Fire Protective Association, 87 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

W. P. Lee, Jr., of the advertising department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is sending out notices stating that the official designation of the new building in New York is to be the Pennsylvania "Station," not "Terminal."

Pennsylvania is the seat of the American Portland Cement industry.

Atlantic City is making a strong bid for the honor of entertaining the New Jersey Lumbermen's Protective Association, on the occasion of the annual meeting of that body in February.

The offices of Carter, Black & Ayers, brick manufacturers, have been removed to the Centurion Building, 1182 Broadway, New York City, where they will be placed to receive visitors interested in this line.

Daniel P. Gallagher is president and John Esenwein, secretary, of the Knoburn Company, 240 Eleventh avenue, New York, manufacturers of a new and effective patented metal ceiling. This ceiling is said to possess all of the good points of other materials of its class along with a number of features both new and admirable. The Knoburn Company is widely known for the sustained excellence of its fireproof door, window sash and metal trim.

The passenger elevator invented by Mr. De Witt C. Supplee, with the improvements since added is regarded by engineering experts as meeting every demand for an absolutely safe lifting device for large buildings. The motive power is direct acting, hydraulic, with electric auxiliary or if desired, electric throughout. This type of elevator is said to cost less for repairs than any other make on the market.

Toch Brothers are the inventors and patentees of a coating which positively arrests this form of deterioration and for which the John Lucas Company, of this city, is a manufacturing agent.

At a recent meeting of the New York Architectural League, a number of leading architects of that city advocated legislation limiting the height, design, color and general proportions of buildings on Fifth Avenue, in the interest of architectural harmony. The interesting fact was brought out in the discussion that one of the biggest lending institutions in New York has been for some years in the habit of exercising a certain supervision over the architectural design of buildings for the erection of which they were called upon to advance money.

For a consideration which is reported to be among the largest in Main Line realty deals in years, District Attorney Samuel P. Rotan, of this city, has sold to Robert L. Montgomery, of the firm of Montgomery, Clothier & Tyler, a tract of 210 acres on the Newtown road, about two miles south of Radnor station. Mr. Rotan acquired the property about eighteen months ago from Tryon Lewis. It had been in the Lewis estate for several generations and has many historical connections, chief among which are the traditions that Elizabeth Eddings, mother of General "Mad Anthony" Wayne, was born and died there and also that in the winter of 1777-78 General Washington's outpost of 200 men encamped on the land. The ground adjoins the properties of Lincoln Godfrey, W. W. Atterbury, Robert W. Lesley and Craig Biddle. It is understood that Mr. Montgomery will erect a handsome country residence for his occupancy on the property. Both the sale of the property from the Lewis estate to District Attorney Rotan and the latest sale to Mr. Montgomery were negotiated by Hirst & McMullin, realty brokers.

William G. Glenn sold for the Provident Life and Trust Company, representing the Goforth estate, to a syndicate, a tract of land containing about twelve acres on the east side of York road, above Township line, running back to Meeting House lane. The property will be developed into acreage building sites in the early spring. It adjoins the Old York Road Country Club and is in the immediate neighborhood of the residence of John Wanamaker, Percy C. Madeira, Barclay H. Warburton, Ellis D. Williams and Caleb F. Fox.

HIGHWAYS OF A GREAT CITY.Outlying Business Districts.

By G. W. B. Hicks.

Since the earliest days, study of the highways of a country has led to the heart of a people, making clear the extent of their development, the difficulties attending such development and the promise which conditions hold for a still greater development in the future.

Philadelphia is not only a city of homes—the possession of 331,000 separate dwellings proves this—but she is also a city of magnificent distances, a fact testified by her 129½ square miles of area and her 1,580 miles of paved streets. These figures regarding mileage of paved streets and extent of area do not, however, fully convey the whole truth regarding her past and present-day problems of inter-communication between separate sections of the city where trade is carried on and around which residences are grouped. It is necessary, therefore, to a clear understanding of the problem, to realize at the very start that the geographical center of Philadelphia is situated at Sixth street and Erie avenue, a point four miles north of City Hall and a mile east of Broad street, while, as regards population, more than one-half of that population is now resident north of Girard avenue, Girard avenue being over a mile north of City Hall.

A suggestive illustration of the relative importance of Philadelphia's outlying business sections in comparison with that located at the heart of the city, or within the original city boundaries of the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, Vine and South streets, is found in the circumstance that outside of the old city, popularly supposed to represent and include the city's financial district, there are in operation to-day fourteen national banks, with capital and surplus amounting to $10,500,000, supplemented by twenty-four trust companies, with an aggregate capital and surplus in excess of $11,000,000, making thirty-eight banking institutions employing capital of $21,500,000, situated outside of the supposed financial and business center of the city.

Another illustration which serves to emphasize the importance of this outlying section is that the area of the old original city to-day contains less than 2 per cent. of Philadelphia's total area and 8 per cent. of the city's population. The old city, moreover, contains only 75 miles of highways, or 5 per cent. of the total paved streets within city limits. Indeed, when we speak of the outlying districts as a subject of great importance, we refer to wards which contain 1,400,000 out of the million and a half resident in the whole city of Philadelphia the area affected being 127¼ square miles, as opposed to 129½ square miles for the whole city. When it is remembered that the cost of police protection and fire protection, the cost of street cleaning, garbage removal, sewerage and water service is governed by the question of the area involved, as well as the number of individuals served, the importance of realizing the extent of Philadelphia territory embraced in what are known as outlying districts becomes at once apparent.

Another preliminary step necessary to a successful study of the highways of the city is prompt recognition of the fact that the peculiar shape of that body of land comprising Philadelphia's area and the unalterable character of a considerable part of its boundary line gives to its development certain inevitable direction. Taking City Hall, the official center of the city, as the heart of Philadelphia, we have the eastern boundary, settled for all time by the Delaware river and the boundary line of another State, only 1¼ miles distant to the east. On the west that boundary line is fixed by the boundary line of another county at 4½ miles distant, making an east and west range at

City Hall of $5\frac{3}{4}$ miles. In contrast with this narrow and fixed east and west range, we have the extreme northeastern boundary above Somerton, a distance of 16 miles north of City Hall, while the extreme southwestern boundary in the Fortieth Ward is only seven miles south of City Hall. The old city, therefore, or that within William Penn's original boundaries, two square miles in extent, bounded by the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, Vine and South streets, occupied the narrowest point between the two great rivers like a belt with the city's territory opening out, in curving lines, southward to League Island, or the junction of the Schuylkill and Delaware rivers, four miles to the south, while to the north and northeast a second spread of territory has a north extension of eight miles, a northwest extension of ten miles and a northeast extension of seventeen miles.

To complicate the situation from a physical point of view, the face of the city is marked by five separate river valleys, beginning on the west with Cobb's creek and Darby creek, coming eastward to the valley of the Schuylkill and Wissahickon still farther east to that of Tacony creek, with its eastward extension through Frankford creek still farther east, the valley of the Pennypack, and, on the extreme northeastern boundary, the Poquesing creek. In the north and northwest, the face of the land is rolling; in the south and southwest, low-lying and flat; the northeast gently rolling with wide sweep of plateau.

Another feature which has forced development along original lines is that while Philadelphia developed rapidly within the original area selected by Penn, there was, coincidentally, a vigorous growth in other sections of the area now constituting present-day Philadelphia. Indeed, some of these minor or lesser Philadelphia ante-dated in their settlement the settlement of the original city. Many of these contemporary settlements were located at a considerable distance from the old city—a distance which, taking into consideration the transportation facilities of those early days, was as great as that which to-day separates New York from Philadelphia. As a consequence, each of these outlying settlements which later became a part of Philadelphia, during the seventeenth, eighteenth and a part of the nineteenth centuries developed its own business and residential center, lived its own life in its own way, and, as a consequence, each developed strong individuality. Their main business streets, their residential streets, were laid out without regard to that faraway city of Philadelphia with which they had no governmental association. This condition of semi-isolation continued from the founding of Philadelphia in 1683 up to the consolidation in 1854; this long period embracing, as it did, a run of 171 years, gave ample time for a considerable development in each of the outlying centers; gave time also for the growth of large property interests in each, and the promotion of a body of public opinion strongly loyal to locality—so loyal as to have power to enforce fair treatment of their vested interests and traditional customs. The old city of Philadelphia, then, in the year 1854, or fifty-six years ago, assumed the whole of its present-day area of $129\frac{1}{2}$ square miles and absorbed into the body politic twenty-eight fully developed smaller communities located within the county of Philadelphia, the new city having at time of consolidation a population of 530,000, or about one-third of its present-day population.

It may assist to a realization of the area then assumed by this population of half a million to state that even after Philadelphia's marvellous growth during the past fifty-six years, and the addition of a million people to her population, the whole of Philadelphia's present-day population, if settled as densely as is the Fourteenth Ward to-day, could be placed within one-half the area of the Thirty-fifth Ward, leaving the remaining $46\frac{1}{2}$ wards empty of population, and yet the Thirty-fifth Ward has only about 12,000 inhabitants to-day. The experience of Philadelphia has been entirely different from that of a city concentrated at one point, with a large unsettled, outlying area to be gradually occupied as the population of the city increased, a case finding parallel in the history of the development of the majority of American cities. For Philadelphia, in sharp contrast with other American cities, was forced, from the very start, to connect outlying trade and residential centers with the heart of the city, to furnish from the heart of the city to such outlying centers, facilities for comfortable living consistent with new world ideals of city life—police and fire protection, school facilities, highway and water facilities; all these had to be given to integral parts of the city, to reach which it was necessary to travel through wide sections of unoccupied territory. This problem led early to the development in Philadelphia's system of highways of a series of great radial or diagonal streets, which, having a common central district as their starting point, radiated, generally by the shortest air lines, to the outlying districts. To-day through these eight diagonal highways thirty-eight of the forty-seven wards are connected with the heart of the city, the wards so served representing 124 square miles out of the city's total area of $129\frac{1}{2}$ square miles, the population served being 1,375,000 out of the city's 1,550,000. These eight diagonal avenues, supplemented by the two great highways planned by Penn—Market street running east and west, Broad street north and south—form what may be called the ground plan of Philadelphia, and represent the heart of her present-day highway system, a system which shows a direct record of over 3,000 communicating streets. The diagonal avenues referred to are, to the east, Kensington avenue and Frankford road, which form practically a continuous line to the extreme northeastern boundary of the city; Germantown avenue, affording an outlet to the north and northwest; Ridge avenue to the northwest; Lancaster avenue, connecting the Schuylkill river at Market street with the west and northwest; Woodland avenue, the Schuylkill river and Market street with the southwestern boundary line; Passyunk avenue, linking the old city section at South street with the southwest; Moyamensing avenue, forming a highway from a point about $\frac{1}{4}$ of a mile south of the old boundary line of Penn's Philadelphia to the extreme southwestern section of the New Philadelphia. These old diagonal avenues have behind them the weight of old tradition and century-long usage. It was over the road crossing Darby creek at Paschalville, and, coming northeast over the line of Woodland avenue, that Penn and his friends first came by land to the site of present-day Philadelphia. It was over the old Lancaster road, and along the Frankford road and the Ridge road, that these pioneers made their way to the northeast, north and northwest in their difficult and dangerous work of establishing trade communications between Philadelphia and the outside world.

These old highways, linking the heart of Philadelphia with the circle of outlying trade and residential centers, although playing such an important part in the city's day-by-day life, represent only a small portion of the city's system of street communication; consequently, it has been thought best to divide the subject into three sections—a study of the outlying business centers and the great radial avenues which link them to the civic heart of the city; a study of the heart, or central business section, with which these outlying centers are inseparably connected and in whose prosperity the heart of the city shares; a number devoted to that great intermediate and partly undeveloped district lying between the distant business centers and the business heart of the city—showing chiefly the homes of the people, and, incidentally, the development resulting from the opening of new streets, and the encouragement of building enterprise, in a sweep of country once unsettled and unproductive of tax to the city treasury.

Concluding this brief study of the outlying sections and returning to the first thought regarding Philadelphia's method of development, the situation is briefly this: Philadelphia divides naturally into a number of distinct and clearly marked communities, each with its long line of traditions, each possessing certain peculiar attitudes and habits of mind, outgrowth of old environment and ancestral inclination. This condition of separate development by widely separated communities, however, received its first important modification through the consolidation of 1854, when Philadelphia became politically one and inseparable.

It received a still greater and more beneficial modification with the holding of the Centennial Exposition in 1876. For in this wonderful celebration in honor of the nation's first century of life—the nation born within the limits of the old City of Philadelphia—a quickened love of country, and a new-born pride in a great municipality, worked together to bring into one harmonious whole or divisions of population, calling into existence a broader and deeper love for the City as a whole, a clearer realization of honor resting in the title of a citizen of Philadelphia.

With the rapid growth of the City since the Centennial, this pre-consolidation line of separation has steadily grown less distinct, until, under the present administration, through the construction of a network of new streets, followed by the building of an average of nearly 12,000 new homes each year, with a proportionate increase in municipal responsibility, the various outlying sections of present-day Philadelphia have become, in many directions, physically united by lines of homes, and as a consequence, have arrived at a closer social relationship, with a stronger appreciation of, and a deeper love for, the whole City.

In a word in the closing days of the present year, the old Philadelphia of separate units has fused into a greater Philadelphia, one in ambition and ideals, one in desire to win for their common City the highest rank among the great cities of the world. Old prejudices in favor of a particular locality, of the customs common to that locality held by the fathers and grandfathers, are remembered and respected, but these old and individualistic tendencies and traditions have lost controlling force, because superseded by a nobler and a higher range of traditions, a higher and a better line of ideals, and a stronger and purer love for a greater and better City.

Why Fires Spread in Buildings of Customary Type.

We cannot hope to prevent the starting of fires. We can plan to control them and prevent their spreading. The best form of construction is that which keeps fire out in plain sight when it is once started. In wood, the greatest obstacle to the fireman is that of locating a fire that is known to exist. Fire may send out smoke from a dozen places, through the hollow walls, and from floor to floor. Every second of time lost gives it added fury. Holes cut through walls, ceilings and floor often furnish more draft to increase the flames. In many houses there are enclosed spaces that can only be reached by chopping through the walls, where fire may smoulder and break out again hours after the fire is seemingly out. But in concrete construction the walls are absolutely incombustible, and fire cannot exist inside them. Therefore the fire starts in plain sight and remains in plain sight at all times and can be attacked instantly, before it has had time to spread. Spreading of fires from room to room is swift with wood partition and wood door construction. The ideal is a concrete barrier and any concrete partition is a natural barrier providing the necessary openings for windows and doorways are closed with metal doors and ribbed glass windows. These doors are now made so that most people cannot tell them by sight from hardwood, and they will confine an ordinary fire to one room or hold any fire long enough to enable it to be handled. Vertical spreading of fire is far more rapid through stairways, walls and from window to window. In stairways and wells it is impossible to furnish barriers, but it is entirely feasible to keep combustible goods away from such openings. Make the stair of concrete, the rail of concrete. Leave off the wood baseboard and trim, or cast it with the chair and picture mould out of concrete. Where possible use wired glass in the windows. Keep in mind in both construction and furnishing that if the fire has nothing to feed on it will not spread.—Bulletin of the Universal Portland Cement Company.

Oriental Rugs for the United States.

Persian rugs and carpets to the value of $349,129 were imported by the United States from Smyrna last year, $3,137,014 from Constantinople and $143,392 from Bagdad. The shipments from Bagdad were more than they had been for five years previously, though the supply of real antique Persian rugs is diminishing fast. About $850,000 worth of rugs came from Persia in 1909, of which less than one-fourth were old. Nearly all the genuine antiques find their way to this country. Shiraz, Hamadan, Tabriz, Kermansha, Bokhara, Koulah, and Senna are the kinds of carpets mostly exported to the United States, where they find a ready sale. The local prices paid for rugs range from $2.60 to $3.70 per square meter for ordinary quality, $4.40 to $6 for better grades, and $8.80 and upwards for extra fine antiques, depending on age, quality, and condition. Every district of Persia has its own style and design of rugs, but the mere name is no guide to quality, as good and bad rugs are turned out in all the districts. The prevailing color of all Shiraz rugs and carpets is red, while the Bijars are blue and marine. Consul Frederick Simpich, stationed at Bagdad, says it is estimated that Kerman turns out $300,000 worth of shawls, hand-made every year, in addition to its production of rugs.

TRADE LITERATURE.

The "J.-M. Roofing Salesman," published by the H. W. Johns-Manville Company, 100 William street, New York, has changed its publication day from the 15th of the month to the 3d.

"Ideal Ideas," issued by the Ideal Concrete Machinery Company, South Bend, Ind., has some interesting information on the possibilities for stucco on concrete blocks.

The Reichert Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee, Wis., issues an attractive catalogue describing the Reichert metal form system of monolithic concrete construction.

"Sanitary Pottery," the attractive house organ of the Trenton Potteries Company, is devoted to a description of the sanitary equipment installed by this concern in the new Pennsy terminal in New York City.

"Graphite," issued by the Dixon Crucible Company, contains the usual amount of readable matter pertaining to this Dixon product.

Fire Losses and Fireproofing.

Apropos of some interesting figures given in an editorial dealing with the subject of fire losses in a recent issue of the Guide, the fact has been brought out that Berlin, a city almost as large as Chicago, loses $170,000 a year by fire and regards this as severe. Chicago loses about $5,000,000 a year by fire and views it as nothing unusual. In continental Europe the average annual fire loss per capita is 33 cents. Germany, exceeding all others in this respect, has a per capita loss of 49 cents. Here in the United States we have a per capita loss annually of $2.50 and take it as a matter of course.

It is pointed out by statisticians that in the last six years the money wasted in fire losses in the United States would have paid all of the bonded debt of the Government, wiped out the greenbacks, and still left a margin to the good. It has amounted to about double the cost of running the nation's post offices and would have paid the immense pension roll of the nation twice over.

And, as pointed out in the editorial article referred to, a great deal of the "fireproofing" going on is worse than useless. To be practically fireproof a building must be fireproof throughout. No detail must be neglected. Only recently in New York City a disastrous fire was averted in the expensive Singer Building by metallic trim. Had this apparently unimportant detail been overlooked all the other elaborate precautions taken against fire would more than likely have gone for naught. Buildings of steel and concrete are undoubtedly valuable from the viewpoint of capacity to resist fire, but in planning such buildings every minor detail must be designed along similar lines. Flimsy, inflammable composition roofing, wood trim, absence of fire doors and shutters, unguarded openings to the elevator shafts—numerous minor details are as important in their way as the structure proper. To state the self-evident, the way to make a building fire-proof is to make it fire-proof.

A number of widely-advertised patent roofings, ready made partitions, and other junk of that description are fire-proof only in the imagination of the advertising man. It is up to the discriminating architect to select from the mass of such material the true from the false. Absolute fireproofing is worth working for. It means a saving bigger annually than the combined capital of many banks, as the figures here quoted go to prove.

Recreation Structures and Public Squares.

The protest lodged by the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and a number of other organizations, civic and general, to the proposal of councils to erect recreation structures in the public squares is one that should be heeded. If recreation centres in the form of "neighborhood houses," indoor gymnasiums, settlement lecture rooms, etc., are considered desirable let the city buy and tear down dilapidated and unsightly property to make way for them. Building structures of this kind in the public squares not only deprives the immediate neighborhood of an attractive breathing spot, but establishes a precedent likely to prove ruinous to the artistic development of the city. If a public square may be taken as the site for a recreation building, why not for a fire house, a police station, or a public bath?

It is a cheap and pinchbeck order of economy that would destroy the city's system of a chain of well-kept public squares in order to provide space for structural improvements. Every section of a city of any size has its quota of old, ramshackle structures, that, under an intelligent scheme of municipal development should be removed for just such improvements as those under consideration. The fact that the cost of acquiring and tearing down these "eyesores" is a trifle greater, affords no excuse for trespassing on the city's system of parkways. In municipal development the cost of a project should be subordinate to considerations of greater importance. The first of these considerations is that such an improvement shall not involve any impairment of existing advantages.

The Skyscraper and Trade Centres.

Whether the height of buildings of the skyscraper variety may be held to retard the symmetrical and orderly development of a city by operating to encourage congestion or whether such buildings so restrict business interests to a narrow and circumscribed area as to materially hinder the growth of a city outside of their immediate zones is an interesting question now being discussed by the Chicago municipal authorities. A proposition is under discussion in the Windy City to limit the height of such buildings to 200 feet, the argument made in its behalf being that such an interdiction would serve to promote the development of the city as a whole, whereas the "skyscraper" tendency exerts an influence to confine this development to a limited and highly localized area.

Just how any legal prohibition is going to prevent the centralization of certain interests more or less cognate and correlated in certain districts, we are at some loss to conceive. Certainly the proposition suggested will not.

In every city the "big business" of the town circles about and converges upon a fixed point. Nor can this be ascribed to the presence of the skyscraper, because in the vast majority of instances citable it is the skyscraper which has followed the trend of business and not the trend of business which has followed the skyscraper. It is true that large improvements of certain kinds do exert a more or less marked influence upon the trend of trade. The new Pennsy terminal in New York City is one instance of this; our own City Hall, here in Philadelphia, another. In the immediate vicinity of improvements of this type the skyscraper is more or less inevitable. Yet who would be guilty of the folly of prohibiting the building of new railroad terminals on this account. In the end the skyscraper problem may be trusted to solve itself. At the rate at which such buildings are being erected, finding tenants is going to be a task of some difficulty, and in the meantime Chicago will be wise to take matters more temperately. It is natural for certain interests to flock. Brokers near the exchange, lawyers close to the courts, sales agents as close to the railroad stations as practicable. Washington Square, within the past five years, has evolved for no special reason so far as we can see into a publishing centre. For two entire blocks on Pine street nearly every building is occupied by a dealer in antiques. Arch street, in the vicinity of Second, is largely devoted to wholesalers of oil and leaf tobacco. Every department store in Philadelphia is on Market street. Why? Who can account for the drift of trade?

Tapestry Brick and the Open Fireplace.

Let the heating system of the home of a cultivated man be ever so elaborate, the old-fashioned open fireplace is reasonably certain to be one of its features. There is an indefinable something about the fireplace, with its crackling logs and general air of cheer and coziness, that no amount of patent heating capacity is able to replace. Some weeks since we had a few timely things to say in this department upon the rare beauty and utility of "tapestry" brick in the hands of an architect endowed with the color sense and that intuitive grasp of "motif" that enables the true artist to blend his dream into the fabric of its locale. In nothing does this beautiful medium rise to such heights of loveliness as in the rearing of the old-fashioned open fireplace. The writer has seen fireplaces, within the past few days, done in this medium that are veritable triumphs of artistry.

As a place to dream, to con over old memories, to enjoy one's favorite pipe, or to indulge a quiet nap, no nook in a house equals the fireplace. It is at once decorative and useful. And in tapestry brick, relieved here and there by a bit of good tile, it is a work of art to be admired, to be revelled in and to be treasured.

A Municipal Creosoting Plant.

The municipal creosoting plant for treating wood blocks at Victoria, B. C., comprises a reservoir, pumps, measuring tank and pressure tank. Creosote from barrels, drums or tank cars is first emptied into the reservoir, which is approximately 14 feet square and 12 feet deep, and pumped from here to the measuring tank located on the second story of the plant. From the measuring tank creosote is drawn into a large cylinder containing cars of blocks and heated to from 212 to 220 degrees Fahrenheit, sufficient pressure being applied to force the creosote into the blocks. The average creosote used per 1,000 blocks is given by Mr. Angus Smith, city engineer, as 74 imp. gal. and at the time of his report the city had on hand sufficient creosote to treat 759,000 blocks, or 14,300 square yards of pavement. The number of blocks treated per week has ranged from 18,500 to 141,180.

LONGEVITY OF BUILDINGS.An Object Lesson From the Gillender Building—Protecting Steel From Corrosion.By Maximillian Toch.*

In my preliminary report on the condition of the steel of the Gillender Building above the ground, published in the Engineering News, July 14, 1910, there appeared to be little or no corrosion, owing to the fact that the steel was incased in a cement mortar which inhibited oxidation. Wherever the cement mortar was not contiguous to the steel super-structure, corrosion took place, and one series of upright columns at the corner of Wall and Nassau streets, showed this to a greater extent than any other place. From a mathematical calculation as to the rapidity with which this oxidation took place, it is safe to say, that without any further protection, the steel in that building would have lasted thousands of years before the factor of safety would have been encroached upon.

The great lesson which, however, was learnt from that, and which has been learnt in the last ten years on many other structures where steel has been incased, is that linseed oil paint is worthless against moisture and concrete, and as the final report will be published in the Engineering News within a few weeks, the steel below the ground has given evidence that a linseed oil paint prevents the adhesion of concrete to steel owing to the formation of a lime soap.

A Fallacy About Concrete.

The one popular mistake that engineers make as a rule is, they quote the aphorism, that concrete is a perfect protector against corrosion, whereas, as a matter of fact, this is not the case, but only applies to cement mortar. It must be understood that concrete contains only from 10 to 15 per cent. by weight of cement, and that the aggregate causes a large amount of voids, whereas cement mortar will contain as high as 50 per cent of cement, which contains no aggregate larger than sand, and is in itself partially impervious and almost always alkaline.

A very prominent architectural engineer in this city, who represents one of the largest insurance companies, insists that the steel of the buildings on which his company makes permanent loans, shall be incased in a one-inch grout or cement mortar, and in the opinion of this engineer, preference is given to a paint other than linseed oil, which shall be alkali proof and shall insulate against electrical currents, if possible, and it would be an excellent idea if all architects and engineers followed this rule so that the permanency of buildings be insured.

Many cases come to me of the failures of steel in concrete with suggestions for their remedy, and as these are always in the nature of professional confidence, it is not my province to publish these failures.

Some years ago I entered a protest on a certain very large and expensive structure, against the manner in which the ceilings were hung. The tension members and fine wire lath were uncoated, and in some instances galvanized, and no protective paint was applied, on the theory that concrete was a sufficient protection against corrosion. I knew that this was not a fact, for concrete in the presence of moist air currents, or moisture charged with electrical current is no bar against corrosion, and after seven years the wire mesh and tension members which had supported this ceiling rusted out to such an extent, that the factor of safety was destroyed, and a ceiling of enormous size and tremendous cost, came down with a crash and ruined practically everything in the room. There was fortunately no loss of life for nobody was in the room at the time, but this is

At this time of the year the use of the various Electric household conveniences seem particularly desirable. It frequently happens that when we desire to use such apparatus, we find that our houses have not been properly wired, from the standpoint of having convenient outlets in the various rooms. Architects and Builders should be particularly careful to include in all their specifications for new buildings a proviso covering baseboard sockets in the various rooms.

The sub-structure of the Gillender Building was in the main in excellent condition, due largely to a factor of pressure which will be explained in my final report.

SUBURBAN HOME BUILDING.

Influence of Foreign Ideas on the Work of American Architects in the Field of Home Building.

The suburban home is a much more modern growth in this country than it is abroad. It was inevitable that American architects should in a measure be inspired by the example of their foreign predecessors, although there are few instances in which Americans have taken their inspiration directly from foreign sources. It has become more and more customary for American architects to build a suburban house in accord with the character of the country in which it is to be placed. A home on Long Island, for instance, says New York Sun, is believed to be in the best taste when it expresses in some degree the traditional note of homes in this region. This, of course, goes back to an old principle in architecture. Houses are supposed to be in the best style when they are as much an outgrowth of the natural situation as the trees or the flowers. It was regarded as one of the most pernicious influences in the development of Victorian architecture that the means of communication had become so easy that it was possible to drag all over the country stones and other materials which were innately unfitted to the locality in which they were finally utilized.

Architect Chester H. Aldrich, of the firm of Delano & Aldrich, believes that the American suburban home has its own superiorities. But he believes that the study of European models will be of value to the architects of this country who are seeking to meet the present demand for the suburban house that corresponds to the highest ideals. The best opinion holds, however, that the adaptability of the principles of foreign architects to local uses without the loss of national characteristics meets the demands of a high standard. Mr. Aldrich gave his views as follows:

"The problems suggested by the suburban houses have naturally enough received quite different solutions in this country from those adopted abroad, and emphasis has been laid on widely differing elements. In spite of the inevitable qualities due to varying climates and ways of living there still remain many things which the foreign designer of country and suburban houses might learn from his American confrere, and which in fact he is learning as through architectural publications and travel American examples become better known abroad.

Nor are these points of superiority confined to the many devices which Yankee ingenuity has contrived for greater physical comfort, cleanliness and time saving. It is true that along these lines American progressiveness has shown itself most active, to the point where as an American authoress living abroad has said, 'Plumbing fixtures have become the bric-a-brac of America.'

"It is, however, undoubtedly true that from the point of view of style in its broadest sense America has developed qualities well worthy of the admiration they have elicited from foreign critics, and that these qualities show themselves particularly in the field of country houses. It is perhaps in the adaptation of earlier native styles, of the wooden and brick Colonial of New England and the South, of the delightful stone farm houses of Pennsylvania, that our architects have been most successful, although many of the peculiarly American shingle houses that line our coasts with their long, low skylines and overhanging roofs, have an appropriateness and charm, which one seeks in vain along the shores of Normandy or of the North Sea.

"And yet when all has been said on this side of the question there remain many qualities for which American home-makers must seek their inspiration abroad. The small suburban house of the cottage type especially has received, for instance in England, a treatment which gives to many modern English settlements a charm which one may seek in vain in the corresponding towns of New Jersey and Long Island. It is not only in the workingmen's communities of the type of Port Sunlight that these good examples are found, but throughout the country the new houses of the suburban type show a sense of 'belonging,' a natural and unforced picturesqueness and above all a sense of harmony with their neighbors worthy of admiration. It is perhaps in this last quality that American suburban communities show the greatest lack. Too often the man or woman who is to build a new house totally ignores the general character of the surrounding houses, often of the site itself, and starts out to give vent only to his or her strongly marked individual fancy.

"Along one suburban street one can find strung examples of most of the known styles of architecture. One begins with a black and white half timbered cottage (or so-called half timbered, for nowadays the original construction of wooden beams holding plastered filling between has become a mere surface sham); next to this is a stucco house of Italian type, with broad eaves designed originally to shut off the Southern sun from the windows beneath them, and with a perfectly useless pergola, beneath which no one ever sits, stretching out before it. A rectangular 'boxy' Georgian house demanding for its proper effect high walls and a background of rook haunted trees elbows a type of southern California mission architecture, with a fantastic gable recalling (from a distance, indeed!) the inventions of the Spanish friars, recalling in a faraway land and with no stone or stone carvers at hand the barocco inventions of the late Spanish Renaissance.

"Such a street, bristling with ill assorted ideas, affords a striking contrast to the pleasant harmony of an English village road or even to the old New England street of Colonial houses, both of which derive a large part of the charm for the sense of restraint present. It is in fact the lack of this quality which is the bane of many suburban houses, in each of which the architect seems anxious to display all the motives at his disposal. Lack of a sense of harmony, lack of the sense of restraint, these things are responsible for the ugliness of many suburban towns.

"Another quality in which our fellow citizens have much to learn from European and especially English building is that of the importance of the immediate surroundings of the house. A broad sloping or undulated lawn dotted perhaps with isolated flower beds and utterly without character or outline seems the ideal of many house owners. A house planted upon this surface without any line of hedge, wall or terrace to carry out its architectural forms into the surrounding landscape is sure to look at its worst. For the California bungalow or the French villa it is equally inappropriate. But if the lines of the house are prolonged and accentuated by the right placing of terrace and flower garden, or of trellis and wall, so that the architectural forms become more or less wedded to those of the surrounding landscape, the house at once assumes an air of inevitableness, of belonging where it is.

"It is needless to say that this treatment should be studied at the earliest stage of the plans and that it should be considered as an essential part of the building operations, even if some of the planting and development of it be actually carried out later. If so studied this landscape treatment does not necessarily involve a great outlay, although a well-known architect who has just built himself a delightful house near New York has said that at the beginning of operations he divided the sum at his disposal into two equal parts, one-half of it into the building the house itself, the other half into its immediate surroundings, the fore court, terraces, sunken garden, walls and arbors, which constitute, as he expressed it, the sauce to his pudding.

"In face of the popular prejudice, it is perhaps useless to discuss the comparative merits of the open, continuous lawn which stretches before the houses along almost all American suburban streets and the walled gardens, each with its wicket gate and bell, which cut off from public view the great majority of suburban and country houses in France and England. For those who have tried actual living in both the question has usually resolved itself.

"In the American treatment there is experienced a sense of 'nowhere to sit out of doors, a lack of seclusion,' an exposure to the curiosity of passersby and of neighbors, which is in striking contrast with the pleasant privacy of a garden effectually shut off where one can work or loaf, or even in good weather drink one's coffee free from intrusion. Even from the point of view of the passerby it is questionable whether the sense of mystery and hidden charm given by the vine covered high wall with its occasional glimpse through a wicket gate, with the house nestling comfortably behind it, is not as agreeable as the unimpeded view of a long perspective of grassplots and wide piazzas.

"In the interior treatment of the house a similar difference reveals itself. The average American wants in his house a large living room, a room from a European point of view out of all proportion in size to the other rooms in the house. Such a room often gives an air of great roominess and breadth to a house, and in forming the pleasantest sort of place for music, for gatherings of all kinds, justifies itself. But not satisfied with this, the suburban home builder desirous of 'opening up' his house still further, proceeds to abolish all doors, opening this living room from the hall, the hall from the dining room and from the library, on one vista as wide as the house will permit and broken only by an occasional portiere. This increases still more of course the sense of airiness, of roominess, but leaves out of the question the old fashioned persons who like to go into a room and shut the door, who appreciate and enjoy the sense of privacy and seclusion which is so often sacrificed in the modern house of the suburban type.

With regard to the actual construction of the house and the materials used there is naturally a wide divergence between European practice and American. In the wooden houses, which are practically unknown in Europe, our architects and builders, especially those of earlier times, have created interesting types, as instanced in the Colonial houses of Salem or the Long Island farm houses covered with broad, hand hewn shingles. But even in this country the high prices of lumber and the growing sense of the superiority of a house of masonry have led to a widespread abandonment of wood in favor of more permanent materials. The various concrete and terra cotta blocks now on the market grow very day in favor, but in the use of these, as of other materials, we have still a lesson to learn from European builders. It is the straightforward use of materials, often of local materials, which gives to many foreign houses their individuality and character. The typical suburban street which we have described, where next to the false, half timbered house stands one purporting to be of stucco covered masonry, but really stucco covering a flimsy wooden frame, indicates how little this sentiment has been understood in many parts of this country. There is, however, in this regard a growing feeling (fostered perhaps in some quarters by no worthier a means than an amateurish so-called arts and crafts movement) toward a franker recognition in country houses as in all other building of the possibilities of the materials at the command of the modern builder. Let us hope that when it has borne fruit the red clay plains of New Jersey may be covered with brick architecture as frank and picturesque as that of the brick-making parts of Holland and Belgium and that the rocky hills of the Hudson may afford material for stone cottages on their slopes as charming as those of the Cotswolds."

City of Moulded Cement Houses.

A contract has been closed with a San Francisco firm for the construction of a number of moulded cement houses which are to be put up in a new town laid out on the Interurban and Galveston, Houston & Henderson railway between Houston and Galveston.

These houses are to be moulded from the ground up, just as a piece of pottery, or as is cement tile, with the exception that the moulds are of steel construction, are very large and are equipped with cement dumping machinery. This new town, the site of which comprises 6,000 acres, purchased by Messrs. C. A. Elmen & Co., has been platted and is being laid out at a point known as Hulen, a short distance South of Dickinson and eighteen miles from Galveston. Forces of workmen are cutting out the streets and sidewalks, both of which are to be well graded. This will be followed by the construction of moulded cement houses, no two of which are to be alike and differ widely in architectural design. By this method it is asserted that a man may order his home one week and move in the next. The immense mould boxes are put together in segments and can be so arranged as to produce a great variety of designs; it is claimed that any sort of a habitation, from a one-story stable to a mansion, can be built with them.

Moulded cement houses are said to be the latest thing in the building line. They are so put up as to obviate the common objection of sweating and being damp. This is done by an air chamber system which really makes the walls in two pieces with a circulation of air between them. It is said the interior of these houses is perfectly dry and that they are at the same time the warmest and coolest abodes that have been devised.

Even roofs and floors may be incorporated in the moulding and the house turned out ready for occupancy, save for the attachment of doors and fitting of windows. Both roofs and floors are usually left for construction of other material. But all chimneys, fireplaces, stairways and the like are made in the moulding. Likewise a fine plaster finish may be given to the walls or they may be left rough, or may be decorated in stucco effect if wanted.

Sand from San Jacinto river and shell from the shell banks in Galveston bay, which are nearby, will be the main materials used for the roughage for cement construction. Barges will be employed to haul both the sand and the shell, and it is pointed out that this will give an exceedingly cheap material. These barges will enter near the townsite, as they will ply on Dickinson bayou inland and unload at the nearby wharves.

Much interest is being manifested in this new class of houses, and by some it is predicted that they will become popular and be largely adopted in the Texas coast country, where there is such an abundance of ready raw material.

If you like the work we are doing to make the GUIDE a truly representative structural trades organ take the trouble to write and say so. A word of encouragement helps a whole lot sometimes.

For "proposals" there is no better medium in print than the BUILDER'S GUIDE. Why? Because among our regular readers are the biggest concerns in every avenue of structural activity.

The Merits of Slate.

This little article, from the pen of the manager of the East Bangor Consolidated Slate Company, deserves the careful attention of every builder.

"A great deal has been said in the past concerning roofing material. From the very first that buildings were erected the owners gave thought as to what roof should be used in order to protect the building. Roofing slate has been used for centuries in England and Wales, and a large amount of the slate now on the roofs have been there for years without any repairs, paints, or anything else to protect it. In the Bangor slate region quarries have been opened and operated between fifty and sixty years, and many roofs are to be seen that present a very beautiful appearance and are apparently as good as the day they were put on, and this, notwithstanding the fact that people who advertise composition roofing and metal shingles say that they will crack and break whenever anyone gets on them. The Bangor roofing slate is well known and invariably gives the best satisfaction. In a great many regions where they are introduced they take the place of all other roofing.

"We have noticed it advertised that slate has been used because it was better than wood, but now that composition roofing has taken its place, the composition roofing is better than the real slate itself. No one credits this.

"As to making a roof water tight, there is no reason at all why the slate well laid cannot be made perfectly water tight. The weight of slate is often objected to by people, even architects and owners, who are not thoroughly familiar with the weight of slate. It requires a certain amount of skill to lay a good roof just as it requires a good mechanic to do certain other work. Slate always protects the building and the building never needs protect the slate. Once put on they are there to stay, and, with any reasonable use made of the roof, they will stand up, whereas with many roofs made of other material, the weight of anything on them causes the material to bend, and when a snow storm or wind storm comes the roof leaks.

"We have never heard of any owner who has used genuine Bangor roofing slate for covering buildings regret its use, because they need no repairs, such as painting, etc. It may be a little more expensive in the first cost, but in the long run roofing slate is the cheapest article that can be used for the covering of any building. The manufacturers of roofing slate in times past have been depending on the slate to advertise themselves, for the trade in general use same and are pleased with them. Frequently, however, many owners of buildings who are not acquainted with slate, permit the contractor to use cheap composition roofing, and in a few years they are very much disappointed because of a leaking roof.

"Slate is not being manufactured exclusively for roofing, but is well adapted for structural purposes also, and the demand for structural slate is growing all the while, notwithstanding the fact that cement has been adapted for many purposes intending to take the place of slate. But these last few years have demonstrated that slate stands in class by itself, not only for roofing slate, but for structural purposes also."

Ottawa's New Building Law.

The new building law of the city of Ottawa, Canada, does not cover the plumbing or electrical fittings, says the Contract Record, which will come under separate by-laws. Under its provisions all buildings more than 80 feet high must be fireproof, and no frame buildings of more than three stories high can be erected. Dwellings on inside lots must not cover more than 75 per cent. of the area of the lot, and a back yard, 10 feet wide for a dwelling 25 feet high, must be provided. All ceilings in dwellings must be at least 8 feet high, and every room must have at least one window opening to the outside air. The aggregate of window area for each room must be equal to 10 per cent. of the floor area.

Business buildings may cover the entire lot. Enclosed courts must have horizontal intakes at the bottom, whose area must be equal to 10 per cent. of the area of the court. Particular specifications are made with a view to making foundations secure. All buildings up to 40 feet in height, must have foundations of at least 13 inches in thickness, if of concrete, and 18 inches, if of stone. No projection will be allowed from a building over the sidewalk at less than 10 feet from the walk. All public buildings or places of amusement, with a capacity for more than 1,200 persons, must be fire-proof, and smaller theatres must be of slow-burning material. Main stairways and doors must aggregate, in width, 18 inches for each 100 persons capacity of the building.

Granite Block Joints.

The granite block manufacturers have been conducting a vigorous campaign of education the last few years, aiming to demonstrate that the old dimensions specified for depth of block represented waste of material and money without resultant increase in efficiency of pavement, and that there was no good reason why a block of granite to be laid on a concrete foundation should be eight or ten inches deep, when asphalt and wood blocks were required to be three inches. Their efforts were successful and the latest specifications fix the depth at from four and three-fourths to five and one-fourth inches.

The next point was to regulate the dressing of the blocks to permit close joints and to specify a filler which would permit close joints. It is manifestly lost effort to dress blocks for a three-eighth inch joint, and then use tar and gravel filler, with three-eighth inch gravel. With such filler, about the closest joint possible is three-fourth inch, and usually it runs larger. No material in the world can be satisfactorily maintained and give good service if the paving joints are left open and the edges of the blocks are exposed to the wheels of the traffic. The edges will wear round and in a short time the pavement is uneven and jolty, and is criticised as a poor job.

There is a practical demonstration over in Newark of how smooth and durable a granite block pavement can be laid, and it would seem that other cities ought to be quick to accept the benefits which the Newark experiment has proved can be obtained by following the same methods. The Newark specifications for the season of 1909 called for blocks seven to twelve inches long, three and one-half to four and one-half inches wide, and five and three-fourth to six and one-half inches deep, the top to have a smooth surface, and the sides to be dressed to lay with three-eighth inch joint. The entire pavement was covered with grout, filling the joints completely and insuring the protection of the edges and corners of the blocks, and, moreover, rendering the pavement as durable in the joints as in the blocks.

Ever paver knows that as a filler tar and gravel is absolutely useless. It doesn't fill, in the first place, for the full depth of the block; it will penetrate down two inches at the most, leaving a space between the blocks for the lower portion, which condition destroys rigidity and firmness of pavement. The blocks move, the filler is gradually worked to the bottom, the joints are wide open at the top and then the trouble begins.

No engineer denies that the cement grout filler is the best to use, and the objection offered against its use in this city is because it would require at least a week to set hard enough to carry traffic without shifting the pavement, and that it would be impracticable to keep a street closed that long after the pavement was laid. Is this objection economically sound? Is it good business to pay for good material and lay it in a manner detrimental to the life of the material, because by so doing traffic may be accommodated as soon as the blocks are laid?—The Bulletin.

BIGGEST INDUSTRY CURTAILS SHARPLY.

Steel Trust Expects by January to Have 75,000 Workmen Laid Off.

Ten thousand workmen from the great Pittsburg iron and steel district are either going home to Europe for the holidays or are already on their way. While the fact that in this way at least $1,000,000 is being taken out of the district is deplorable, it is not the worst feature, according to information gleaned by a careful analysis of conditions now existing. It is not by any means certain that more than a very small percentage of the men will return. They have said in going that they have received no encouragement to return—that the captains of the iron and steel industry have even intimated to them that there will be no work for them until far into the new year, if then.

Pittsburg is now face to face with the fact that business, especially in iron and steel, is not good. In fact, it is worse than it has been since the panic of 1907. The United States Steel Trust has already laid off within the last few months about 46,000 men and is still laying them off. It is asserted here that the number of men laid off will reach 75,000 by the first of the year, and this number will be just one-third of the entire working capacity of the corporation, which has 225,000 men in action when running full.

Mills Merely Jog Along.

The big mills of the Pittsburg district are not working more than half their capacity. But one-half the blast furnaces of the corporation in this district are in blast. There is not, nor has there been, any stock of pig iron at the mills, and when running full the mills of the corporation use more pig iron than its furnaces can make. The furnaces are now furnishing to the mills daily the pig iron they need.

It is also said that the Cambria Iron and Steel Company, at Johnstown, has laid off about 7,000 of its 18,000 workmen.

Asked for a reason, Pittsburg is being told that it is all due to the railroads withholding their orders, and it is broadly hinted in the railroad offices that "unless there is something done in the way of relief for the railroads by Congress there will be yet more pointed reductions and less work."

While the Pennsylvania Railroad has announced an order for 150,000 tons of steel rails for next year's consumption, the order has not yet been placed.

The American Bridge Company, the structural steel end of the Steel Trust, has recently laid off 20 per cent. of its draughting force, and the remainder of its working force has been depleted to a yet greater proportion. The Ohio group of furnaces of the Trust, at Youngstown, are being run only about two-thirds time.

Railroads May Reduce.

As a result of this depression a cut in wages for the men who are kept at work is imminent. The railroads, too, may make a like move. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad employes have been plainly told by President Willard that a cut is coming. This is expected about the first of the year. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, particularly lines west of Pittsburg, has been laying off men by the hundreds since early fall. It is feared by those remaining at work that there will soon be a reduction in wages.

Praise Proposed Sewerage Plant.

Rudolph Hering, a well known engineer, praised the proposed municipal sewage disposal plant to be erected in Holmesburg and declares it will rank favorably with those of any large city in the world. Mr. Hering, who is a Philadelphian, spoke before the members of the Engineers' Club. His subject was "Some Recent European Experiences in Water and Sewerage Works and Refuse Destruction."

Following Mr. Hering's talk, George S. Webster, chief of the Bureau of Surveys, explained in detail the plans for the city's disposal plant in the northern part of the city.

"London and Berlin are wonderfully progressive in having modern water works and sewerage plants," said Mr. Hering. "We all know the value and scope of the filtration plant at Torresdale and I am convinced that the proposed sewerage plant will in its capacity be the equal of the Torresdale plant. The plans also indicate the Holmesburg improvement will be as modern as any in the world and capable of doing as much work and being as much of a benefit to the city."

Material and Equipment Notes

"Blanc" Stainless Cement

In these days of concrete construction architects are continually looking about for materials that will make an attractive exterior treatment. The product known as "Blanc," meaning white, and its uses, so its manufacturers claim, are as multitudinous as the sun's rays. While "Blanc" is strictly a white Portland cement and will remain white for all time, it is possible to color it by adding coloring matter, so that a variety of pleasing effects may be obtained if desired. The factory and main offices of the Blanc Stainless Cement Company are in Allentown, Lehigh county, Pa.

Decorative Effects.

There are in lighting fixtures as in other things connected with interior fitting. The fixtures for example that would harmonize properly in a private home would seem incongruous and out of place in a theatre. Those that would be just right in a theatre would be out of place in a bank. The lighting scheme of a bank is one that present some difficulty in the matter of suitable fixtures. Over-elaborateness is as bad in its way as a too-marked simplicity. In bank lighting fixtures, I. P. Frink, 239-41 Tenth avenue, New York city, is a specialist. Mr. Frink designs, makes and installs the fixtures for the finest banking institutions in the country. The National City Bank, designed by McKim, Mead & White, contain fixtures made by the Frink concern. Bulletin 59, issued by the firm, will afford architects a clear idea of what is meant by specializing in bank fixtures.

The fact that the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company was awarded the contract for all the front brick for the New York State Education Building testifies in the most practical sense the excellent quality of the product of this concern. The Harbison-Walker concern claims to be the largest manufacturers of brick in the United States, their plant being of a size and capacity enabling them to handle contracts of any size. This firm will supply about one million of impervious light gray front brick to the building mentioned. Samples and prices may be had on application.

It is claimed for Montross Metal Shingles that aside from the fact that no other roofing will give better service, or prove more durable and economical, that they are fire, lightning and storm-proof, outwear every variety of wood or composition roofings, are lighter than plate or tile, are easy to apply, tight-jointed, preventing all danger of leaks, and as attractive as the finest tile. These shingles require no solder, won't crack or break, and can be applied by any mechanic. They are comparatively inexpensive and adapted to any kind of a building. The Montross Metal Shingle Company, 101 Erie street, Camden, N. J., will furnish an illustrated catalogue, samples and prices to persons interested.

"Rubberoid" roofing is made by the Standard Paint Company, 100 William street, New York. It is a patented composition roofing that is said to have many points of superiority, not only over other makes of composition roofing, but over all other kinds of roofing for certain well-defined uses. It is claimed to be fireproof, sunproof, rainproof, snowproof, coldproof and weather-proof. It resists acids, gases and fumes and will stand the test of having hot coals dropped upon it without burning. It can be had in a wide range of colors, of the non-fading variety, and is said to outwear all other kind of roofing. A free book published by the Standard Paint Company, contains a mass of information upon the little considered but vitally important subject of house-covering and should be in the hands of parties seeking a durable and attractive roofing.

"Detroit Fenestra" is a solid steel window sash that is made in standard sizes, so that all four walls of a factory, no matter how long or wide the structure, if fitted with this sash can be thrown open to the sun. The result is an ample supply of genuine daylight, cutting the expense of artificial illumination to a minimum, and rendering this particular portion of the building as nearly fireproof as it is possible to make it. This style of sash used with a good wire glass should make an almost ideal lighting equipment for large buildings. "Detroit-Fenestra" is manufactured by the Detroit Steel Product Company, Detroit, Michigan, who will send pamphlet "Y," describing the advantages of this type of window construction to architects and others interested.

Robert W. Lesley, of this city, vice president of the American Society for Testing Materials, was the toastmaster at the banquet of the National Association of Cement Users, at the Hotel Astor, in New York city. John Carrire, of Carrire & Hastings, responded to the toast "The Architect and Concrete;" Robert W. De Forest, president of the Art Commission to "Concrete and Better Housing for the Poor;" Benjamin B. Traitell, president of the Building Trades' Employers' Association to "The Building Interests of the City" and John Purroy Mitchel, president of the Board of Aldermen, to "New York City and Concrete." Dr. Karl Biltner, of Vienna, delivered an address in German on "International Technical Co-operation," which was translated for the benefit of the guests by Richard L. Humphreys, president of the association. Charles Battell Loomis, the humorist, and John R. Morrow, president of the Atlas Portland Cement Company, were among the concluding speakers. A standing toast was drank to the memory of J. Rogers Maxwell.

Henry Stickler succeeds H. J. Lee as advertising manager of Fiske & Company, the "Tapestry" brick people. Mr. Lee is devoting his entire energies to the Building Brick Association of America, which has been organized to inaugurate a nation-wide campaign in behalf of the various kinds and makes of brick. The association has established headquarters at 1616 Fuller Building, New York city. Mr. Stickler is an experienced advertising man and an authority on the subject of front brick.

J. F. Twamley has been appointed general sales agent for New York city for the Coplay Cement Company, makers of Saylor's Portland Cement. W. B. Kongler, formerly of the Northampton Portland Cement Company, will represent the company as Philadelphia manager.

The United States Radiator Corporation, of Dunkirk, New York, has purchased the Smith & Thayer Company, of Boston.

The Edison Portland Cement Company, the Lawrence Portland Cement Company, the Vulcanite Portland Cement Company and Samuel H. French & Company were among the notable exhibitors at the recent cement show. The Edison Company's display was one of the finest at the show, Vice President Mallory, of the Edison, taking a special interest in this exhibit.

At the annual meeting of the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers the following officers were elected: President, Edward M. Hagar, president of the Universal Portland Cement Company, of Pittsburg, succeeding W. S. Mallory, of the Edison Portland Cement Company; vice president, W. S. Mallory, of the Edison Company; treasurer, John B. Lober, of the Vulcanite Portland Cement Company, and secretary, the former incumbent Percy H.

Williams, whose capability was recognized by a substantial increase in salary. To the Executive Committee, Ernest R. Ackerman, president of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company; George S. Bartlett, of the Marquet Company, Chicago; A. H. Crancy, Jr., of the Union Sand & Material Company, of St. Louis; Bethune Duffield, of the Wabash Portland Cement Company; I. Henry Dumar, of the Heldenberg (N. Y.) Portland Cement Company; R. W. Kelly, of the Virginia Portland Cement Company, R. W. Lesley, of the American Portland Cement Company; Conrad Miller, of the Dexter Company; John R. Marron, of the Atlas Company; S. B. Newberry, of the Sandusky Portland Cement Company; George E. Nicholson, of the United Kansas Portland Cement Company, and C. H. Zehader, of the Alma Cement Company, were elected.

J. P. B. Fiske, of Fiske & Company, manufacturers of "Tapestry" brick, has just completed a tour of inspection of the plants of his concern located at various points throughout Pennsylvania. Some of the plants visited, all of which were found in splendid shape, were those at Ridgeway, Williamsburgh and DuBois.

Ernest R. Ackerman, of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company, makers of the "Dragon" brand of cement, made many new friends for this hustling and progressive concern by the hospitality extended by him to visitors to the company's offices, at No. 1 Broadway, during the big show.

The new plant of the Knickerbocker Portland Cement Company, at Hudson, N. Y., will be ready for operation early in the spring. Secretary John Shepherd is enthusiastic about the new works which he says will have a capacity of about 6,000,000 barrels a year.

The front brick exhibit at the showrooms of Fredenburg & Company was the mecca for thousands of interested visitors during the New York show. W. A. Fredenburg took care, personally, of visitors and made many converts to the use of this beautiful building medium.

Albert Moyer, resident New York manager for the Vulcanite Portland Cement Company, of this city, took excellent care of the interests of this company during the recent show. Mr. Moyer is one of the "live wires" of the cement field.

The Board of Directors of the Girard Trust Company elected has organized by re-electing officers as follows: E. B. Morris, president; William Newbold Ely, first vice president; Albert Atlee Jackson, second vice president; Charles James Rhoades, third vice president and treasurer; E. S. Page, secretary; George H. Stuart, 3d, assistant treasurer; Samuel W. Morris, assistant secretary.

Charles Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who attended a banquet in Cleveland in honor of Joseph G. Butler, of Youngstown, veteran steel man, speaking of business prospects, said:

"There is only one prediction I will make, and that is that, no matter what the depression or financial stringency, the general trend will be upward. The steel business and every great business of this country will bear me out."

Mr. Schwab was accompanied to Cleveland by Leonard Pickett, president of the Empire Iron & Steel Company.

For at least four months of the coming year work at Baldwin's Locomotive Works for the present large force of more than 16,000 men is assured, according to a statement by an official of the company.

An order has just been received for 40 locomotives for the Boston and Maine Railroad for delivery in March and April. This, with the orders on hand that have not been completed, will provide steady employment, it is thought, for the army at the shops until April. Meantime other orders are anticipated for the New Year, which looks very bright for the works.

Announcement has been made of the sale by the Provident Life & Trust Company of a tract of 9½ acres at Ogontz and Cheltenham avenues, to the Home for the Orphans of Odd Fellows as the site for the erection of a new Orphanage. The sale was negotiated by Manning D. Brick, and the consideration was about $38,000.

The new orphanage was decided upon in view of the fact that the present Orphanage at the northwest corner of Twentieth and Ontario streets is inadequate for present needs, and the close proximity of the Reading Railway's elevated structure prevents an enlargement of the site. It is proposed to erect a group of buildings at the new location in the near future from plans to be evolved by a committee, of which C. D. B. Richardson, a member of the Philadelphia bar, is president.

The George W. Childs Memorial Hall Association, of this city, a holding corporation of Typographical Union, No. 2, has secured a charter from Common Pleas Court No. 1, to issue stock certificates for the purpose of building a labor temple for the use of printers and other organizations. The officers of the association are now looking for a site for the erection of the building. The officers are: President, John Little; treasurer, Harry Savage, and secretary, Wesley Patterson.

More or Less Personal

—John Rogers Maxwell, one of the most distinguished of American financiers, a widely known yachtsman and a pioneer in the cement industry, president of the Atlas Company, until October 20, died in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 12.

—Walter L. Pierce, general manager and director of the Lidgerwood Manufacturing Company, and a prominent member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, died in New York city December 10.

—William C. Henning has resigned as president of the Durable Wire Rope Company, of Boston, to become secretary and treasurer of the Leschen & Sons Rope Company, of St. Louis, Mo.

—President E. C. Felton, of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, has returned from Cuba where he has been looking over certain ore properties under the control of his company.

—E. F. Albee, of New York city, head of the Keith-Proctor Vaudeville Syndicate, is seeking a site on the famous Atlantic City Boardwalk upon which to erect a million-dollar theatre.

—Chief Webster, of the Survey Bureau, and H. D. Quimby, of this city, were delegates to the recent Good Roads Convention.

—Changes in the by-laws of the Philadelphia Real Estate Brokers' Association, made at the annual meeting, in the headquarters, at 1114 Girard street, recommend that all real estate brokers in Germantown, Mt. Airy and Chestnut Hill, should charge 2 per cent. commission on all sales, instead of 1 per cent., owing to the fact that sales in that territory are suburban business. It also was decided to admit as associate members the employes of licensed real estate dealers. The secretary's report showed an increase of 50 members. All the old officers were re-elected, but there were spirited contests for directors.

The directors elected were William C. Benkert, Charles L. Brown, Raymond M. Parker, S. C. Abernethy, W. Bruce Barrow, George F. Colhoun, William C. Claghorn, J. Rhea Craig, Jr., Edgar G. Cross, Frederick M. Piles, Thomas A. Redding, Thomas Shallcross, Jr., H. S. Stillwagon, Martin Stotz, David E. Dallam, William F. Deakayne, William J. Dickson, G. Percy Fox, Samuel E. Gardiner, Meyer Getz, Harry E. Hartman, J. T. Jackson, B. B. Lister, Charles W. Miller, A. Heaton Minnic, Frederick A. Myers, Theodore E. Nickles, Frederick Sylvester, Alfred H. Williams and Isaac Kershaw.

—The Builders' Exchange has nominated the following to fill vacancies on the Board of Directors, due to the expiration of seven terms and two vacancies caused by death: P. S. Smith, J. M. Steele, James Johnson, Edward Steel, Joseph E. Brown, John J. Byrne, Harry Boon, A. G. Bouringer, C. I. Leiper, John D. Carlisle, Harry Barber, F. F. Block, H. S. Andrus and John R. Livezey. The annual meeting and election of the exchange will be held in February.

—Fire threatened complete destruction of the buildings of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, at Eddystone, Delaware county, on December 21. The flames originated in the "spring shop" of the works that were located along the tracks of the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington Railroad.

The flames started from oil that ignited in one of several oil furnaces that were in the building. The loss is about $3000.

The building was constructed of wood and was one story high. It was 250 feet long and 60 feet wide.

Wm. D. Hewitt (F. A. I. A.), Alfred H. Granger (formerly of Frost & Granger, Chicago) and Phineas E. Paist have formed a partnership for the practice of architecture under the name of Hewitt, Granger & Paist, with offices at 671 Bullitt Building, Philadelphia.

Architects Lachmann & Murphy have opened offices at 1017 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, and desire catalogues and samples of building materials.

Foreign Cement Barrels.

The European cement barrel, especially that used for export trade, is a very substantial affair. The foreign barrel is made of Norway Spruce. Its staves are tongued and grooved as well as jointed, while the head is of the usual construction of the same wood. The hoops are of cherry wood, a much better grade than used in domestic barrels, and there are also two hoops of steel. When ready for packing the barrel is lined with black waterproof paper, through which cement cannot sift and moisture and water cannot penetrate. Some shipments from Belgium involve ocean voyages of thousands of miles, and it is said the cement invariably arrives in fine condition when packed in these barrels.

SPECIFYING HOUSE SPECIALTIES

How the Architect Can Aid His Client in Suggesting Advertised Accessories in His Specifications.

The assistance the architect can give his client in specifying the hundred and one specialties that go into the construction of a modern home or business block, is often greatly underestimated.

His well-known conservatism even in the matter of preparing general specifications, according to the Building News, is due to the fact that the same materials have to be written over and over, until the language becomes stereotyped.

"With regard to the smaller items which are left for selection, such as door furniture, window-fittings, locks and other ironmongery," says the Building News, "the usual thing is not to take a client to a show-room, but to ask the builder to produce specimens, and to make a selection from them. If no definite firm is mentioned in the specification from which the goods are to be obtained, there is a chance, amounting, in many cases, to a certainty, that the builder will not try to supply the best articles which the money will procure, but those from some firm accustomed to give him long credit and so ease his way along, even if he does not go so far as to produce goods from those with whom he knows that the undisclosed discount for cash will be considerably in his favor.

"Often these goods, especially such as have working parts like locks, appear at first sight to be equal in quality to much superior articles made by well-known firms, though they may be of foreign manufacture, and really quite indifferent quality. The architect's safeguard here is to assure himself that everything is stamped with the name of a maker whom he can trust; but it is better still to specify such a maker at the outset, again naming list-prices instead of cost-prices, so that both the builder and the architect, and the client through the architect, may know exactly where they stand. If there is any likelihood of a wider selection being desired, there is no serious reason why alternative firms should not be mentioned in the specification, except that, when this is done, it is necessary to revert to mentioning the cost-price, owing to the fact that the discounts allowed by different firms are not identical.

"It sometimes happens with these small items—it almost invariably does with larger things, such as baths and lavatory basins—that it is not only well to specify the firm, but actually to select the particular goods while the specification is being written, either from a catalogue or after inspection. There are some few architects, though they are extremely rare, who adopt this plan with everything, covering the possibility of altering their minds or of their clients doing so, by the usual variation clause in the contract. If this is done, it will often save an immensity of trouble afterwards, besides pinning down a client of undecided tendencies. Necessarily, selection in advance like this has to be exercised by the architect, for he alone possesses the skilled foreknowledge enabling him to choose in harmony with the whole scheme of the building which he is designing. Unfortunately, it is not every client who recognizes this, and in self-defense the architect has then to fall back upon the other method of working, for it is far preferable to take a client oneself on a tour of selection when a building is up, and then to guide his taste when there is the basis of the actual building to justify any arguments which may be used, rather than to attempt to select in his company from the study of plans which the architect understands, and the client does not.

"Large structural specialties have to be dealt with in a different way again. The heating and ventilation of a great building, the kitchen appliances for a large hotel, the structural steel work for a considerable roof, and the fire-resisting floor over a block of warehouses, all call for special consideration. The architect, in a case like this, can but rarely produce a specification in detail and expect the contractor to work upon it. The almost invariable system nowadays is to invite tenders upon a general sketch plan from several firms, upon the basis of the general contractor providing the scaffolding and attendance necessary. Each firm has its own particular method of dealing with the problem, and necessarily so, as the different firms work upon different patents and even upon different general systems.

"For instance, it may be a moot point, until the tenders, arrived, whether to heat by low or high-pressure steam, or by one of the many hot-water systems, or even by warmed air. Each firm submits a specification with its tender, prepared by themselves and not by the architect, and such specifications need careful comparing, as well as the gross sum, before a just selection can be made. This comes within the architect's province, though he may have to call in expert assistance to enable him to do it properly. It is not always the apparent cheapest system which is likely to prove the most economical in the end.

"Probable efficiency has to be weighed, as well as cost, and cost of upkeep as well as initial cost. When a choice is made, the total sum is introduced into the general specification, and the firm mentioned and their specification incorporated, either in full, or by reference thereto, in the general specification, in order that the general contractor may recognize exactly what are his liabilities for plant and the giving of other facilities, and possibly even for carriage of material.

SAMUEL D. LIT OUT FOR A GREATER CITY.

Says City Should Build the Subways, Docks, Wharves and Other Needed Improvements.

WOULD START A CAMPAIGN

A "Greater Philadelphia" is the slogan which Samuel D. Lit wants the press, the organization politicians, the reform politicians and citizens generally to adopt for the year 1911—and then on.

Not only does this progressive merchant ask that that be the slogan of all the people, but he offers some pertinent live suggestions for creating Greater Philadelphia.

First and foremost, in an interview, he declared that everlasting criticism and bickering should cease, and he gives it as his opinion that nothing will be done worth while until civic pride and co-operation takes the place of fault-finding.

Then, as a practical proposition, Mr. Lit expresses the view that the Legislature should at once enact a law which will permit the city to issue millions more of bonds for the purpose of building subways, wharves and docks. Subways, he declares, should be built by the city and leased, and he gives it as his opinion that the bonds can be floated at 4 per cent., while the lease can be made at 6 per cent., making a net municipal profit. In this way other cities have become great, he says, without any ultimate cost to the municipalities whatever.

Declaring that the political management of Philadelphia is neither better nor worse than of other American cities, and adding that reform is possible within the dominant party, Mr. Lit said:

"To my mind Philadelphia's most apparent need at the present time is that the newspapers, and the people generally, should stop their everlasting criticism and should get together in a truly co-operative spirit to place Philadelphia in her rightful position before the eyes of the world. For years the newspapers of our city have so unceasingly criticised that, even with the best intentions and most honorable motives no good could really be accomplished by either the administration or the reformers outside the administration. Both have no doubt been at fault. The administration of this city has probably been no better—and undoubtedly has been no worse—than is ordinarily found in other large cities, and without doubt the element on the outside who are striving to get in is the same as is to be found in all other cities such as ours.

"At this, the opening of the New Year, comes the opportunity to prove for both newspapers and people alike that the best interests of Philadelphia is the actuating motive for their thought and action. As for the newspapers, rather than commenting day in and day out in a fault-finding spirit, they should make their criticisms take the form of suggestively helpful plans for the real betterment of conditions. They have so long and so bitterly pursued the fault-finding course that our city has become a by-word, and that not only among the cities of our land, but as far as civilization reaches.

"It is, indeed, a grievous wrong that our press has done our city, for to make a city a matter of jocular comment is to lower her dignity, to lessen the respect in which she is held, not only at home, but the world around. It is harmful, too, to the rising generation; who should be taught to honor and respect the city of their birth and dwelling. There is a criticism that builds up and a criticism that tears down, and that which Philadelphia has had to endure, from people and press alike, is of the latter sort, and if it is continued will not only fail of any good object, which it may originally have had in mind, but will prove a greater detriment to our city than all the so-called "rotten politics" of which the papers prate so much and so eternally.

"Here are some facts for the thoughtful, right-minded citizen to consider seriously. The city of New York owes at the present time $934,000,000. They have spent within the past five years $384,000,000, and this immense sum has been spent on new work. These figures are appalling, showing, as they do, how little has been done in Philadelphia along these self-same lines, and giving most clearly the reason why we are in these matters so far behind our sister cities.

"There should be a concerted movement made to enact such laws as will make it possible for Philadelphia to borrow money enough to build subways, docks and wharves, and make many other much-needed improvements, all of which would practically not cost this city a dollar. For instance, we could spend $50,000,000 on subways, bond them at 4 per cent. and lease them at 6 per cent., and years before the bonds were due the difference between 4 per cent. and 6 per cent. would pay off the entire bond issue of the city. We could do the same thing with our docks and wharves, and on other such important and necessary improvements.

"New York and other large cities have demonstrated that this is the way that cities become great, without any cost whatever to the municipality. I believe that when you build today for future use and for coming generations we should place a debt upon posterity, upon those who will reap the benefit. We should, as one man, co-operate in the fight for these modern improvements that must eventually come sooner or later, and that should come now, without further delay, that we may not be hampered in today's commercial race.

"To the most casual observer it is apparent that subways are needed. They are the one thing that make possible Greater New York, and they are one of the prime factors that will bring Philadelphia into her rightful own. We should spend millions and millions of dollars for these and other such improvements, issuing bonds as suggested, and permitting the coming generations, who will enjoy them, to bear their rightful share of the burden of paying their part of the interest.

"It is my opinion that the Legislature should at once take decided measures to extend the borrowing capacity of the city for general improvements. At the present time we are allowed to borrow 7 per cent. on our taxable. This should at once be increased to 10 per cent., or even 12 per cent. This money should then be expended on improvements, which, in turn, would bring in a revenue much greater than the interest charges would cost. At present our taxables amount to $1,458,851,880, estimated July 28. With the increase of, say, 3 per cent., this would give us an additional borrowing capacity of approximately $43,765,556.40. This sum spent judiciously would do an incalculable amount of good for our city and for her citizens, present and to come. I would certainly advise this course, and suggest that in a real spirit of co-operation the press of the city take up this matter and start a campaign that will accomplish it in the shortest possible time.

"It is a truth that 'all who run may read,' that Philadelphia can, and will, only take her proper position of supremacy, as that of a city second to none, when she has, with the hearty co-operation of press and people, with the adoption of the most progressive methods, downed the spirit of carping criticism by living up to the privileges that are now within her easy grasp. Geographically speaking, she should rank second to no other city in America. Her close proximity to the sea, her magnificent shipping advantages, her wide and splendid extent of possible wharfage, together with her practically unrivaled railroad facilities, give to her those rare advantages that go to the building of a great metropolis.

"Philadelphia is known the world over as the 'Cradle of Liberty.' Let it be known that that cradle holds no sleeping infant, held in bondage by the swaddling clothes of prejudice, narrow-mindedness, personal gain, unprogressiveness, but let it be known the world around that here is a giant, full-grown, wideawake, progressive, up-to-date, clean in administration of municipal affairs, eager to adopt anything that is for the betterment of her condition or that of her citizens, deserving the name long since accorded her as the most American of American cities.

"Since the world began reform has been recognized as a good thing—when it reformed. In the history of politics reform within the party has always been for the best interests of the people, and reform within the party is possible—possible here probably more than in any other city in the United States. We have here a good administration—eager and ready to meet reformers, to confer with them, and to do all that is possible to so shape their course as to be most satisfactory even to the most exacting.

"My closing word is that if the newspapers, the reformers, the political leaders of the organization would, with one accord, cease the unhelpful fault-finding, the bickering, the criticism that accomplishes nothing, before long Philadelphia would assume an unassailable position, the position of supremacy that is her natural birthright. As the New Year dawns let us, with one accord, give a boost and not a knock to the grandest and best of all American cities—Philadelphia, the greatest of them all."

To Contracting and Material Men Visiting Philadelphia

Contracting, engineering and material men visiting Philadelphia are invited to call at the offices of the Record and Guide. We shall take pleasure in placing at the disposal of visitors every convenience for receiving and answering correspondence while in the city.

If you are interested in structural, material, engineering or equipment activities anywhere east of the Mississippi, you will find the Record and Guide a medium worth your attention. The Record and Guide reaches every branch of structural industry.

Entered at the Post Office at Philadelphia as Second Class Matter.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., DECEMBER 28, 1910

A number of articles printed upon this page within the past few months have placed emphasis upon the importance, in developing a city, of tearing down the undesirable to make room for the desirable. The practice of seeking vacant lot sites for public improvements came in for sharp condemnation on the ground that the duty of removing unsightly and dilapidated structures was as much the duty of a properly organized government as that of providing structures of architectural beauty and utility. That this view has the unqualified indorsement of men whose training has been of a nature to fit them to speak authoritatively upon the general subject of municipal development is instanced by certain expressions of opinion gathered by us from the week's news. Mr. Sidney R. Badgeley, of Cleveland, for example, speaking of the great work accomplished by the London County Council, points out that this admirable public body has not only eliminated great areas of congested squalor and vice, but has planted playgrounds, gardens and architecturally attractive buildings upon the very debris and wreckage of these tenement centres.

In a speech made by Mr. Jacob Riis, that energetic New York newspaper reporter whom Mr. Roosevelt has described as "New York's most useful citizen," that distinguished student of modern municipal conditions stated it as his belief that in the "elimination of these congested spots and the eradication of their foulness" was "the one solution of the entire youthful criminology of American cities."

The Guide is naturally much pleased to find its views indorsed by men of the stature of Mr. Badgeley and Mr. Riis. The views expressed in these columns advocate a policy that has been one of the clearest hobbies of the editor during a period covering more than twenty years.

Had this policy been properly grasped by the Philadelphia authorities the handsome Southern Manual Training School would have occupied a more central site than Broad and Jackson. If they take the subject into consideration even at this late day the high school to be erected in South Philadelphia in the not distant future will not find it necessary to adjoin the waste lands of the distant "neck." A city Council that sees nothing ludicrous about voting a five thousand-dollar appropriation annually to a lot of "rowdy" New Year shooters for the purpose of holding a drunken orgy upon its principal thoroughfare, squeamish about the few extra thousands involved in buying dilapidated property as opposed to the old and obsolete plan of acquiring unimproved land at a price considerably greater than its normal value.

If we must have a city beautiful let us have it along lines well defined, intelligent and well considered.

A Minnesota man, L. A. Lamoreaux, secretary of the Minnesota chapter of the American Institute of Architects, advances a somewhat novel suggestion. By way of encouraging the construction of really fireproof buildings Mr. Lamoreaux would have municipalities reduce the taxes on all such buildings for a set or fixed term of years. When we first heard of Mr. Lamoreaux's proposition we were inclined to question its wisdom. Then we got to thinking the thing out, and the upshot of a whole lot of careful consideration of all of the principles involved is that we begin to regard the Lamoreaux idea as not more than half bad. The one difficulty in the way of its adoption, so far as we can see, is the question likely to assert itself sooner or later touching just what constitutes "an absolutely fireproof building." Concrete and metal trim should come pretty close to it. Terra-cotta, brick and some other materials that might be mentioned have the same qualities intelligently used and properly supported in the matter of interior trim. The trouble usually is that neglect of some apparently trivial minor detail defeats the purpose of the main scheme. Just a chain may not be said to be stronger than its weakest link, so a building may not be said to be fireproof that leaves one loophole open to the invasion of fire. This question of what constitutes a fireproof building disposed of Mr. Lamoreaux's suggestion is not without merit.

A policy of this kind pursued for twenty years would force Philadelphia, or any other city, for the matter of that, into a place high upon the roster of municipalities enjoying immunity to large and dangerous conflagrations.

And no man who has followed intelligently the figures given in recent numbers concerning the fire losses incident to the larger American cities can doubt for a moment the necessity which exists for taking some step, whether this or some other, to encourage interest in "real" fireproof construction.

Once again the Guide rises to observe that if it had the ear of some really skillful young architect with an artist's soul for color and a musician's innate sense of harmony which pervades all things truly beautiful we should advise him to devote himself, his time, his genius and his resources to the use of tinted brick, both dull-finished and enameled and individually and in combination. Here is a material that in the hands of a master of design could be made to yield results of an almost fairylike beauty. The use of enameled brick abroad is common. Architects produce by its use buildings of a very high order of beauty and attractiveness. The contention used to be that the enameled brick made on this side of the water was so uneven in quality as to be worse than useless. This contention no longer holds. To-day American manufacturers are turning out an enameled brick made by the English process equal to the best imported. What we are able to do in the dull-finished article is shown by such concerns as the Fiske, with its "Tapestry" brick product, and Fredenburg & Louvesbury, with its "front" brick effects. We are unable to repress a certain feeling of confidence that the time will come when architects will achieve the most remarkable results with these mediums. In no other building medium now before the public is the architect able to dabble in the realm of color. This medium alone makes such a tour de force possible. When the artist comes along who is able to use this medium, as we are convinced it is possible to use it, we shall expect to see buildings rivaling in beauty and mellowness of shade the famed tinted stucco edifices of other countries. A great opportunity, in the Guide's judgment, awaits the man who is able to use this medium with the right degree of discrimination.

AMERICAN PORTLAND CEMENT FACTORIES FROM THE GERMAN POINT OF VIEW.

The rapid development of the American Portland cement industry within the last 10 years prompted a number of German cement manufacturers to make a trip to America this last spring and study American factories. As Pennsylvania is the principal seat of the Portland cement industry they made a special study of it in that State. The industry of any country will always adjust itself to the facilities of land and water transportation, to easy conveyance of raw material to factories, and again the completed products to a market. The population likewise must be able to give workmen to the manufacturers. America has great opportunities in these directions. Great cities have risen rapidly, thousands of strong and willing workers come to its shores every year. The earth is rich in materials needed by the industry. Great coal and ore deposits help industrial progress. The Portland cement industry has grown very rapidly, and if factories shoot up like mushrooms, we must remember that the great increase in building demands enormous quantities of cement.

Germany on the other hand took more than half a century to rise to its present state. But in America things go more rapidly. Time is money, and the American acts accordingly. To get the necessary capital is simple. No definite laws hold the capitalists, as is the case of Germany. A few wealthy men put their money together, buy a factory site through a third party, and then send out agents with stocks for a factory that so far exists only on paper to sell them at a low price a share, often for $1.00, thus getting small investors by promise of big dividends. When they have enough money they begin to build the factory. The machinery manufacturers and iron works, seeing their own advantage, also aid, and if money runs short the agents sell more shares to the investors, who rather pay than lose all. Sometimes matters don't go as smooth as this, as many half completed factories show. But they will be completed some day, for the American has the perseverance to finish a thing once begun.

As I said before the main seat of the American Portland cement industry lies in Pennsylvania. Forty factories have grown up within the last few years, and find a good market for their products. The output of the various plants is very large according to German ideas. A daily output of 5000 to 6000 standard barrels of cement is nothing unusual. In order to ship products quickly one sees factory buildings that are not commendable. Many buildings are, of wood, iron frame or ribbed tin. Many factories show no definite ground plan. Only the ones constructed within the last three or four years are built of reinforced concrete and according to a definite system. Americans place little importance in the looks of administrative buildings, and less on the welfare of their workmen, as no laws regulate the relation of employer to employees. The only question that decides the construction of a factory is the initial cost, and the result is obvious. Lack of building laws are also causes of these conditions. As a rule anyone can build as he pleases. This often leads to carelessness, which is also shown in the failure of machines being protected by protective devices. Floors, open passage ways, efficient supply of light and air receive little care. As for power machines, you rarely see steam engines of the latest type. Coal economy, so necessary in Germany, does not come into consideration, as price of coal is much lower. On this account we often see regular fuel eaters, which with us would have been consigned to the scrap heap a long time. New gearing on steam engine cylinders are rarely found. On the other hand we find nearly all boilers to be equipped with automatic stokers and firing arrangement that will save labor and firemen's wages.

To Build Memorial Hospital.

Preparations are being made by a committee of twenty-five cottagers, at Lakewood, N. J., for the erection of a handsome hospital as a memorial to Dr. Paul T. Kimball, who died here last month. Dr. Kimball was George Gould's family physician, and Mr. Gould is taking an active part in the project.

Plans are now being drawn up for the building, and two plots of ground have already been offered as sites, one by Mr. Archibald D. Davis, a member of the committee, and the other by a land and improvement company, of which Captain A.

At this time of the year the use of the various Electric household conveniences seem particularly desirable. It frequently happens that when we desire to use such apparatus, we find that our houses have not been properly wired, from the standpoint of having convenient outlets in the various rooms. Architects and Builders should be particularly careful to include in all their specifications for new buildings a proviso covering baseboard sockets in the various rooms.

National Builders and Brick Men

There is at present considerable agitation in the brick industry concerning a better understanding and a more perfect cooperation between the brick men and the National Builders' Supply Association, says a writer in Brick. This movement has been brought about through the Building Brick Association of America, and it will probably result in considerable interest being taken by the brick men in the next annual convention of the Builders' Supply Association, which will be held during February.

This Association represents the thousands of dealers in brick and other builders' supplies, located throughout the towns of the United States. Its membership is made up of the leaders in this trade, and its conventions are important and representative. It is to be regretted that during the past years the brick men have not taken a greater interest in this Association and in their conventions. It is upon these men that we depend largely for the selling of our product, and it is our duty to cooperate with them fully. They will be very glad to welcome us into their Association and at their conventions, and without question a proper representation of brick manufacturers at their conventions, or at least proper representation in the membership of the Association, would result in a better understanding between the manufacturers and sellers, and would do much toward promoting brick interests.

HOW TO CLEAN BRICK BUILDINGS.

A very popular means of cleaning brick buildings is by use of hydrochloric acid, and provided the acid is not too strong this method may be quite satisfactory. For many purposes, acetic acid is more satisfactory than hydrochloric acid, as it is equally effective in its action on the dirt without having so corrosive an effect on the bricks. It is more expensive, but owing to its non-corrosive action, buildings on which it is used remain clean longer than when the stronger "spirits of salt" is employed.

The amount of acid and water mixture required will vary somewhat with the care and skill with which it is applied, but will average about four square yards per gallon of mixture with ordinary care. When acid is used to clean the face of a building the latter should be first washed over with clean water to remove all the dirt which can be taken off by this means. The surface is next treated with the weak acid—a hard brush, but not one of metal, being used—and finally the building is washed over with clean water to remove any material which has been loosened, but not actually removed by the acid. This final washing may, if desired, be carried out by means of a powerful jet of water, care being taken to work from the top of the building downward, so as to prevent all accumulation of unsightly spots caused by the "creeping" of the dirt, which always occurs when the building is played on irregularly with a hose.

Soft soap has been tried with much success, especially when it has been dissolved in 36 to 40 times its weight of warm water (one pound of soap in four gallons of water) and used while still warm. Apparently the most efficient cleaning is obtained by treating the building with clean water, then with the soap solution applied with a hard brush, and finally washed down with water, just as was recommended above when acid was used.

Soap has little or no action on clean brickwork or stone, and its effect on soot and similar matters of a greasy nature is far more intense than that of any acid, so that when it is used buildings of either red or buff bricks rapidly regain their original color, unless the cleaning process has been so long delayed that nothing can ever remove the dirt from the bricks. Care must be taken to wash off thoroughly all the soap by means of washing over with clean water, or discoloration will be produced. In actual cost the use of soft soap in the manner described works out at practically the same as for acid.

In buildings where the dirt is more of a dusty than a sooty character it will not usually be necessary to employ any special cleansing material, as a powerful spray of water—such as that from a fire engine—will usually clean the building sufficiently, providing that the surface of the bricks is reasonably close and dense.

In cleaning terra cotta work special care must be taken that the surface is not destroyed, as much of the modern terra cotta has an unfinished or dense face, but an open porous body, and if once the face is removed, it will be almost impossible to keep the building clean.

For buildings which are disfigured by a whitish encrustation, technically known as efflorescence or "scum," the use of very weak hydrochloric acid is always essential, though even this does not always prove a complete remedy. The causes of "scum" are so numerous and complicated that it is difficult to provide any single means of removing this unsightly material.

Scum is chiefly caused by soluble salts in the bricks, which are dissolved when the latter becomes wet with rain, and as the water dries out it carries the salts to the surface of the bricks and there deposits them. If the scum were only thicker it would be best to remove it by scraping the walls gently, taking care not to scratch the bricks, but this is not usually practicable, and the least harmful method is to brush the defective surface with a moderately hard dry brush, when the bricks are thoroughly dry. Should this not prove effectual after several times, the surface may be washed over with a little weak acid, and then with water, the disadvantages of this latter method being that it may cause the formation of a larger proportion of soluble salts (through the action of the acid on some of the constituents of the brick), and the remedy may thus prove to be worse than the disease.

The greater part of the scum which disfigures so many buildings is really due to faulty material or to the use of impure water in manufacture, and only in very few instances is it due to the absorption of soluble salts from careless storage of the finished bricks.

"PENNSY" TO BUILD A NEW STATION.

Reports Say That Railroad Will Spend $6,000,000 on New Broad Street Depot.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad should have better facilities for handling trains at Broad Street Station. There is no doubt about that. The station has outgrown the demands of traffic.

"I have little reason to doubt that City Councils will favor any reasonable request that the railroad may make in order to secure privileges necessary to widen its train shed and make the station adequate for the convenience of the public. Councils should not antagonize anything that would be for the benefit of the public, and I feel reasonably sure that the city authorities will not do so."

This statement was made the other day by a Select Councilman who travels every day over the Pennsylvania Railroad lines. He preferred that his identity be shielded. He declared that there is little doubt that the Pennsylvania Railroad will make improvements at Broad Street Station in the very near future.

"The public demand is for a greater Broad Street Station," he added. "There is no doubt about that, and there is also little doubt that the Pennsylvania Railroad is considering seriously how it can make improvements that will involve the future growth as well as the present demands of traffic.

"If it asks privileges from Councils to arch Filbert and Cuthbert streets I have little doubt that favorable action will be taken. Councils should antagonize no improvement that will benefit all the people."

While Pennsylvania Railroad officials are disinclined to discuss their intentions as regards the enlargement of Broad Street Station, plans are said to be under consideration to make the terminal one of the most attractive and convenient for handling trains of any in the country. During the next two years, if City Councils will grant the privileges necessary, the railroad, it is said, may spend about $6,000,000 in carrying out projects that involve the arching of Filbert and Cuthbert streets from Fifteenth to the Schuylkill River.

A type of train shed will be adopted to carry off the smoke and steam from engines, it is predicted. It may be lower than the present shed. The new station may have frontage on the Parkway, when the latter is extended to the City Hall.

CRAFTSMEN'S SHOW.

The fourth annual exhibition and sale of the National Society of Craftsmen differs from former exhibitions in that it has a charm of color and delicacy of arrangement which shows a marked improvement, not only in the artistic point of view of the Hanging Committee, but in the individual exhibits of the craftsmen.

The gallery has also been so arranged this year as to give the impression of rooms devoted to the various crafts. In each department of the exhibition are to be seen antiques loaned for the purpose of inspiring the craft-workers to higher effort. Mr. Lockwood de Forest, vice president of the society, has loaned a number of most interesting specimens of East Indian wood-carving, also of quaint antique metal work.

Among the pottery are some exquisite specimens of old Chinese pottery of the Han Dynasty, and a case of ancient Babylonian ware loaned by a well-known connoisseur. Among the textiles are examples of ancient embroideries and loom weaving, as well as Oriental rugs of distinct color charm.

In the large Tilden Gallery are to be found the exhibits of the Metal Workers' Guild—jewelry, copper and silver. There is, however, an accent note of wood as a centre of decoration, a beautiful carved chest, the work of Miss Laura Cooke.

Among the loans in this large gallery worthy of note are the interesting reproductions of classics and medieval casts known as the "Strazzoni." This is a new medium, light but very strong; and the coloring of the casts is of a quality seldom equaled.

BOOST!

If there is any chance to boom business, boom it. Don't pull a long face and look as though you had a sour stomach. Hold up your head, smile and look for better things. Hide your little hammer and try to speak well of others, no matter how small you may really know yourself to be. When a stranger drops in, jolly him. Tell him this is the greatest town on earth—and it is. Don't discourage him by speaking ill of your neighbors. Lead him to believe that he has at last struck a place where white people live. Don't knock.

Help yourself along by becoming popular and push your friends with you. It's dead easy. Be a good fellow and soon you will have a procession of followers. No man ever helped himself by knocking other people down in character and business. No man ever got rich by trying to make others believe he was the only man in town who knew anything. You can't climb the ladder of success by treading on others' corns. Keep off the corns and don't knock.

You're not the only. There are others, and they have brains and know something as well as you. There is no end of fun minding your own business. It makes other people like you. Nobody gets stuck on a knocker. Don't be one or two. Be good—and BOOST.—The Liquid Carbonator.

NO DETAIL OVERLOOKED.

There is always discussion as to whether it is right that the architect should have all to say in the completion of a house, that he should tell the other artists what to do instead of inviting their intelligent collaboration. There are those who have said that both mural painting and sculpture have suffered in this country because the architects have been in command and merely told the other artists what to do—bizarre though it might be as to the whole—or left their work out of the scheme altogether. There is an article in Art et Decoration, written with every evidence of happiness, which tells of a modern villa built for the manager of a great champagne house at Reims in which everything, not only the interior decoration but even the furnishing, was left to the architect, and the writer asks if it is not meritably a piece of good fortune for an architect "in love with his art" to have the opportunity to complete his creation by giving to it the life that is carried by its decorations and its furnishings.

In the Reims house every room was decorated, arranged and furnished by the architect, and the writer says with a perfect unity of style, which implies much. This style is very personal and modern, he says, the result of logic, reason and taste, and he adds slyly that in this it differentiates itself from the so-called "modern style," yet to look at the illustrations is to get the idea with him that the house is very modern indeed.

It is to be noted, however, that at the very end of his article the happy writer declares that it is equitable to accompany the architect's name with the names of half a dozen of his collaborators, including decorators, furnishers, sculptors and even chandelier makers, and he speaks of the conscience as well as the extreme care, the search for forms best adapted to the demands and into the nature of the materials that go to make up the complex work.

THE TRADE IN IMITATION ANTIQUES.

It is not realized how great is the trade which has been established in "shams," or the amazing number of modern factories which are turning out nothing else. London is the home of old furniture, and it matters not what period the purchaser may be seeking, the Elizabethan, Charles II, Queen Anne or Chippendale, he can find it at an alluring price, not far from Tottenham Court road. At Florence, Italy, is a famous establishment for the making of "antique" marbles. It is in the aging of the statues that the art of the fakir comes into play. Various acids are used, which give the marble the very tint of extreme antiquity. And the marble is not merely covered on the outside with the stain. It may be chipped half an inch deep, and the color will be found to have penetrated. Such a test would deceive any one other than an expert.

In a back street in a Sicilian town is the factory from which the halls of nearly all the modern millionaires are supplied with the armor of their ancestors. The swords and helmets produced are perfect copies of genuine antiques. The wonderful part of this place is the laboratory. The owner possesses secrets by the score for treating metals of all kinds, so as to give them the appearance of extreme age. It is not easy work, either, for, though iron and steel may be treated with acids, gold and silver require careful and cunning handling.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE CHEST.

"Since the days of our grandfathers," says the "Furniture Index," "when the chest was an indispensable feature of the garret furniture, used as the receptacle for cast-off clothes and without any pretention to beauty, there has been something of an evolution in the character and designs of this useful piece of furniture, elevating it to a conspicuous place in the living rooms of the home, where it now serves both for utility and ornament. The old-time chest inspired pleasant reminiscences of the past, when occasional investigation swept away the dust and the cobwebs of its long disuse, but it will hardly be denied that the modern artist has done much better in producing an article that finds lodgement in the convenient nooks and corners of the living rooms and combines beauty and usefulness. The demand for the modern chest is each year becoming greater, and there is scarcely an enterprising retail furniture store in the country that does not carry an assortment to meet the wants of its trade."

A new feature in connection with eaves trough has been introduced by the Milwaukee Corrugating Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., and Kansas City, Mo., in their "Crimpedge" Trough. The new feature is clearly indicated by the name "Crimpedge" and consists of a continuous crimp running along the unbeaded side of each section of trough for the purpose of producing strength and rigidity to that portion which is weakest. Another advantage claimed is that hangers obtain a firmer and more secure grip, preventing the trough from slipping and at the same time holding it in the original position at the eaves. The "Crimpedge" Trough is made in lap and slip joint and is said to be perfect in shape.

The slip joint is formed in a manner which permits of an easy and accurately fitting connection being made.

The Edwards Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, O., manufacturers of sheet metal building materials, have just perfected and are now putting on the market a new corrugated sheet steel roofing, which they state is entirely different from anything ever offered in this line.

In this age the great majority of buildings on which corrugated steel is used are constructed throughout of structural steel to which the corrugated steel is applied afterward, either as a siding or roofing. Edwards Patent Pressed Standing Seam Corrugated Roofing is especially adapted for use on buildings of this character. This roof has the advantage, it is claimed, of having perfectly tight seams, and can be applied directly to the purlins without the use of rivets of any kind.

The manufacturers state that by using this new roofing a saving of 11 per cent. can be effected on the side seams alone, and in addition to this a much tighter side lock is assured. By means of the cleats used in connection with this roofing it is possible to make the cleats tight, at the same time the method of cleating allows for vibration, a very important consideration in roofs of all kinds.

This roofing has another feature which will be appreciated, especially where the roofs are high and difficult to scaffold, and that is the fact that it can be placed on the roof and worked entirely from above, no scaffolding of any kind being necessary.
